POETRY.

O'ER THE HILL.

BY REV. E. HOYT.

One morning as we wended
Through a path begirt with flowers,
Where all delights are blended
To beguile the fleeting hours,
Sweet Youth, pray turn thee hither,
Said a voice along the way,
Ere all those roses wither,
And these fair fruits decay;
But the youth paused not to ponder
If the voice were good or ill,
For, said he, my home is yonder,
O'er the hill there, o'er the hill!

Again, high noon was glowing
On a wide and weary plain,
And there, right onward going,
Was the traveller again;
He seemed another being
Than the morning's rosy youth,
But I quickly knew him, seeing
His unaltered brow of truth;
Rest, stranger, rest till even',
Sang alluring voices still;
But he cried—my rest is heaven!
O'er the hill there, o'er the hill!

The shades of night were creeping
A sequestered valley o'er,
Where a dark, deep stream was sweeping
By a dim and silent shore;
And there the pilgrim, bending
With the burden of the day,
Was seen still onward wending,
Through a "straight and narrow way."
He passed the gloomy river
As it were a gentle rill,
And rested,—home forever!
O'er the hill there, o'er the hill!

MISCELLANEOUS.

Nearer Heaven.

The weary laborer, counting the hours until the sun goes down, rejoices at each sound of the bell that warns him that he can soon return to his home. The little child, hurrying from play or from school to the kindly welcome of a mother's arm, is glad when the well known roof is in sight, and he almost there. The homesick stranger enters joyfully the vessel whose swift wing shall waft him over the waters to the land he loves.

Even so the Christian pilgrim gazes through the mists that enshroud his pathway for the first glimpse of the everlasting hills which are crowned with the city of his God. Heartsick and desponding, fainting and weak, there is no surer word of hope that can cheer his drooping faith and arouse his sleeping zeal than the sweet melody of "nearer Heaven."

If we are toilers in the vineyard at all, every glowing sunset is the token that one day less is left to journey over. Every new morning is another milestone, silently telling us that we are approaching the end of the road. Every hour of labor is an earnest of never-ending rest. The path we travel may be tangled and wild; it may lead up rough and rugged mountain sides and into dangerous ravines; storms may break over our heads, and the blinding hail and dripping rain render it almost hopeless; yet, in sunshine and in gloom we are ever going onward. At the end of the way is the "home beautiful," where the Master has gone to prepare a place for us. We know not what lies before us ere we reach our home. Joys may be lying in the way to clasp us in their fragrant arms. Fairer hopes may spring up like flowers where we tread. Happy hearts may be around us, and the gentle ministries of the fireside make earth an Eden. Or darkness may be on the wing, and the creeping shadows already looking over the shoulder of the sunshine, yet in the same sweet spirit of submission and gratitude, let us take whatever our father sends.

One moment in glory will more than recompense for all the toils and griefs of the way thither. Let us cheer each other by the way with the songs of Zion, and whisper in the ear of every thinking one, "Nearer Heaven."

A Praying Royal Family.

One of the speakers at a mission meeting in Leicester, England, gave some information concerning the teachers and nurses to whom is entrusted the training of the Royal family. The monthly nurse in the Queen's household, he stated, was a member of Doctor Steane's (Baptist) Church, at Camberwell. The Princess Royal, now the Princess Frederick William, was awakened through reading a sermon of Adolphe Monod, and became thoroughly religious.—When the last child was born, a Wesleyan was selected for nurse. The teacher of the Prince of Wales, Mr. Gibbs, was a Nonconformist. Previous to appointment he was sent for twice, and for two hours was subjected to a severe questioning by the Prince Consort and her Majesty to test his knowledge. All the heads of the departments about her Majesty were pious people. Every child that was born in the Royal family was born amid many prayers. The pious members of the household assembled themselves together and continued praying for the Queen until the child was born, when they gave God thanks. He thanked God for such a Queen and such a Court, and that under her God was prospering Britain as He had never prospered it before.

Two young fellows got to bantering each other the other day. Finally, one of them exclaimed: "Well, there's one thing you can't do!" "What is it?" "You can't put your head into an empty barrel." "Oh, nonsense," exclaimed the other, "why can't I?" "Because," dryly rejoined the first, "it is an impossibility to put a hogshead into a barrel!"

A lady had the habit of picking her teeth with pins. A trifling humor was the consequence, which terminated in a cancer. The brass and quicksilver used in making these pins will account for these circumstances. Pins are always pernicious to the teeth, and they should never be used for tooth picks.

The Strasburg Clock

The clock in the tower of the Cathedral of Strasburg is not only a monster in size but is the most wonderful piece of mechanism in the world. It is 100 feet high, 30 wide, 15 deep. About 20 feet from the bottom is the dial, on each side of which is a cherub, holding a small mallet in his hand, while over the dial is a small bell; the cherub on the left strikes the first quarter, and that on the right the second quarter. Fifty feet above the dial is a colossal figure of Time, with a bell in his left hand and a scythe in right. A figure of a young man in front strikes third quarter on the bell in Time's left hand, and then turns and glides with a slow step around behind Time, when out comes an old man with a mallet and places himself directly in front of the great Reaper.—As the hour of 12 comes, the old man deliberately strikes, with much power, twelve times on the bell. He then glides slowly behind Time, and the young man again comes out and takes his position ready to do his duty when called upon by the machinery. As soon as the old man has struck twelve and disappeared, another set of machinery is set in motion, some twenty feet higher still, where there is a high cross with the image of Christ upon it. The instant twelve is struck, a figure of one of the Apostles walks out from behind, comes in front, turns facing the cross, bows, and walks on around to his place. This is repeated until twelve figures, representing the twelve Apostles, as large as life, walk out, bow and pass on. As the last appears, an enormous game cock, perched on the pinnacle of the clock, slowly flaps its wings, stretches forth its neck and crows three times, so loud as to be heard outside the church to some distance, and with life like naturalness. Then all is still as death.

Charms of Life.

There are a thousand things in this world to afflict and sadden; but, oh, how many there are beautiful and good! The world teems with beauty—with objects that gladden the eye and warm the heart. We might be happy if we would. There are many ills which we cannot escape—the approach of disease and death, of misfortune, sundering of earthly ties, and the canker-worm of grief—but a vast majority of the evils that beset us might be avoided. The curse of intemperance, interwoven as it is with the ligaments of society, is one which never strikes but to destroy. There is not one bright page upon record of its progress, nothing to shield it from the heartiest execrations of the human race. It should not exist—it mus not. Do away with all this; let wars come to an end, let friendship, charity, love purity and kindness mark the intercourse between man and man. We are too selfish, as if the world was made for us alone. How much happier should we be were we to labor more earnestly for each other's good! God has blessed us with a home which is not all dark. There is sunshine everywhere—in the sky, upon the earth—there would be in most hearts if we would look around us. The storm dies away, and the bright sun shines out. Summer drops her tinted curtain upon the earth, which is very beautiful, even when autumn breathes her charging breath upon it. God reigns in Heaven. Murmur not at a world so beautiful and who can live happier than we?

Debt.

It is easy enough for a man who will exercise a healthy resolution to avoid incurring the first obligation, but the facility with which that has been incurred often becomes a temptation to a second, and he very soon becomes so entangled that no late exertion of industry can set him free. The first step in debt is like the first step in falsehood, almost involving the necessity of proceeding in the same course—debt follows debt, as lie follows lie. Hayden, the painter, dated his decline from the day on which he first borrowed money. He realized the truth of the proverb, "Who goes a borrowing goes a sorrowing." The significant entry in his diary is, "Here began debt and obligation, out of which I have never been and never shall be extricated as long as I live." Hayden had been long accustomed to borrow money from his poor father, which, however he did not include in his obligations. Far different was the noble spirit displayed by Fitche, who said, when struggling with poverty, "For years I have never accepted a farthing from my parents, because I have seven sisters who are all young and in part uneducated, and because I have a father, who, were I to allow it, would in his kindness bestow upon me that which belongs by right to his other children." For the same high-minded reason, Fitche even refused to accept presents from his poor parents.

Singing in Death

The following touching incident is related in a daily paper, in referring to the dreadful catastrophe at Lawrence, by which one hundred persons were crushed to death by the falling of the Pemberton Mill:

A company of girls were safe, and comparatively uninjured, until the fire broke out. They would soon have been rescued if the devouring flames had not shut out every hope from the prison in which they were immured, but when the fire began to roar around them, they, as if by inspiration, joined in singing the hymn:

"We are going home to glory."

Their voices rose clear and musical above the crackling of the flames, but they soon were silenced, to be heard no more until they had passed the narrow sea that divided them from the heaven of their faith.

☞The editor of a paper in Ohio has had a fine shirt collar presented to him, and is now waiting for some one to give him a shirt so that he may be able to put the collar to some use, saying that 'at present it is a perfect superfluity.'

Taking the Census

In endeavoring to take the census for the government, the marshals occasionally meet with such difficulties as well nigh to deprive them of their own senses. The following colloquy is said to have taken place in Canal street:—

'Who is the head of this family?'

'That depends upon c'rcumstances.—If before 11 o'clock, it's me husband—if afther 11, it's meself.'

'Why this division?'

'Because, afther that hour, he's dhrunk as a piper, and unable to take care of himself, let alone his family.'

'What is his age?'

'Coming twenty Mechaelmas he will lack a month of being as owld as Finnegan. You know Finnegan?'

'No, I don't know Finnegan; and if I did it would not help matters. Is your husband an alien?'

'Och, thin he's siling intirely. He has rheumatics worse than owld Donnelly, who was tied double with them.'

'How many male members have you in the family?'

'Nivir a one.'

'What, no boys at all?'

'Boys is it? Ah, murther, go home. We have boys enough to whip four loaves for breakfast.'

'When were you married?'

'The day Pat Doyle left Tipperary for Ameriky. Ah, well I mind it. A sunshinier day niver gilded the sky of owld Ireland.?'

'What was the condition of your husband before marriage?'

'Divil a man more miserable. He said if I did not give him a promise within two weeks, he'd blow his brains out with a crowbar.'

'What was he at the time of your marriage, a widower or a bachelor?'

'A which! A widower, did you say? Ah, now go way wid your nonsense. Isn't the likes of me that would take up with a second-hand husband? Do I look like the wife of a widower? A poor devil all legs and consumption, like a sick turkey. A widower! May I never be blessed if I'd not rather live an owld maid, and bring up a family on butternilk and 'praties.'

Here the dialogue finished up, the marshal coming to the conclusion that he could 'make more' next door. Whether he did we will probably know at some future time.

Closed for Repairs

A good one is told of old Judge L———. His Honor kept a demijohn of good old Jamaica in his private office, for his own comfort and the entertainment of his particular friends. The Judge had noticed for some time that on Monday mornings his Jamaica was considerably lighter than he left it on Saturday nights. His son Sam was missing from the paternal pew in church on Sundays. One Sunday afternoon Sam came in and went upstairs rather heavily, when the Judge hailed him:

"Sam, where have you been?"

"To church, sir," was the prompt reply.

"What church, Sam?"

"Second Methodist, sir."

"Had a good sermon, Sam?"

"Very powerful, sir; it quite staggered me, sir."

"Ah! I see," said the Judge, "quite powerful, eh, Sam?"

The next Sunday the son came home earlier than usual, and apparently not so much 'under the weather.' His father hailed him with:

"Well Sam, been to the 'Second Methodist' again to-day?"

"Yes, Sir."

"Good sermon, my boy?"

"Fact was, father, that I couldn't get in, church shut up and a ticket on the door."

"Sorry, Sam, keep going—you may get good by it yet."

Sam says on going to the office for his usual spirit-ual refreshment, he found the "John" empty, and bearing the following label: "There will be no service here to-day, this church being closed for repairs!"

The Militia of the States.

Col. Roberts, of the United States Army, has proposed a plan of re-organization of the militia of the several States. He proposes a short term of service for volunteers, who are to be armed and equipped, and disciplined by Congress, and to be paid for a few days of service each year, when under instruction, discipline and drill. He fixes this volunteer force at 200,000, and proposes to divide them in all the States in proportion to their population, believing this division will give to each State sufficient force to preserve domestic tranquility, to prevent insurrection and to enforce the laws. When war is declared, the militia to be subject to the call of the President, to repel invasions, and even to carry on offensive and foreign war.—The plan is before Congress for its consideration.

Caterpillars.

With a little watchfulness and care in searching for caterpillars' eggs, and destroying them before the worms hatch, you thus save the trees from injury, or a greater amount of labor in killing the worms in the nest after they hatch, and when other work is pressing. A little practice will enable one to detect them on the small branches of the cherry and apple trees. The eggs are deposited end-wise in a little bunch around the limb, and very ingeniously covered with a kind of gum or cement to protect the embryo worms from injury by the weather.

☞An Illinois editor challenges the State to produce a wife equal to his, for smartness and muscle. Among the many things enumerated which she easily performed one morning before break fast was whipping the editor, spanking nine children, kicking over the table and breaking all the dishes, ringing a neighbor's nose for interfering, cutting off a dog's tail, and throwing the colored girl into the cistern. Such a wife is a jewel.

A Poem

The name of the author of the following is not given, lest he should be overwhelmed with letters from the leading literary journals, petitioning him to contribute "only" for a certain paper. Without further comment, we give it:—

A 12 LINE ODE 2 SPRING.

The blue birds sit on a swinging limb
Singing—jerkily singing—
All nature joins in the coming loud
To the Spring which are a springin.
The grass are growin, the flowers are blowin,
The peach tree buds is swelling big.
The ladies is dressin in their finest satin,
And the trees is puttin on their summerin.
How I wish I was a sin gin bird
On a grate big blue jay limb;
I'd ring the praises (in the sweetest lay-ses)
Of Spring, if I busted with the vim.

THE END.

The States of the Church.

Considerable attention has been, and will continue to be for some time directed to the temporal government of the Pope. His entire kingdom contains about 15,000 square miles and a population of 3,000,000. Nine of the provinces of legations and about 2,000,000 of the population are East of the Appenine Mountains, stretching along between those mountains and the Adriatic, from the northern boundary of the kingdom of Naples to the river Po, which forms the line between the territory of the Pope and the Austrian province of Venetia. Eight provinces or legations lie West of the Mediterranean, and have about 1,000,000 inhabitants, of whom 175,000 dwell in the city of Rome.

The country is described as one of the finest in the world. But the government is so inefficient that it affords no encouragement to capital or labor, and consequently its abundant agricultural, mineral, manufacturing and commercial resources are greatly neglected, and there is a vast amount of poverty and wretchedness in all parts of the country, the city of Rome and the adjacent provinces having more than the other parts of the country.—Boston Traveller.

Israelites and Romanists in Conflict

Dr. Lilienthal, Rabbi of the Broadway Synagogue at Cincinnati, has addressed a letter to Archbishop Purcell, stating that absolution had been refused by some of the priests under his charge to Catholic servant girls living in Jewish families; after some entreaties the rite was performed, but under the condition that they should leave these families. Dr. Lilienthal considers this act an insult to our American institutions, and, if repeated, a league will be formed by the Hebrew merchants of that city for the purpose of discharging at once all the thousands of Catholic workmen at present engaged by their large mercantile houses. He urges the Bishop to use his influence to prevent such a calamity.

Two Children Burnt to Death.

At six o'clock on Saturday evening, two little girls, aged respectively three and five years, children of Mr. James McCoy, residing at No. 184 South 1st street, Williamsburg, N. Y., were burned to death by setting their clothes on fire with matches, with which they were playing. They were locked in a room during the temporary absence of their mother, and were so dreadfully burned before her return that they died in a few hours afterwards.

Contents of a Shark's Stomach

A shark was captured in our harbor on Saturday last by Mr. Wm. Elkin. On opening the fish the hand of the unfortunate Isaac Wylly, (who was drowned outside the bar on the 11th inst.,) together with a goat's head, having horns seven inches long, were discovered in the stomach. The hand was identified by a brother of the deceased, in consequence of a portion of the shirt-sleeve being attached to it.—Nassau Guard.

Spanish Treaty.

It is now ascertained beyond a doubt that Mr. Preston, who came home by the Asia, and has gone on to Washington, brings with him a Treaty between the United States and Spain, settling all the points in dispute between the two countries. Whether the sale of Cuba to the United States, is included in this settlement, has not yet authentically leaked out, but we rather opine, that question is untouched.

☞Nothing proves more clearly the necessity of destroying, with an overwhelming defeat the two great sectional parties, into which the people of the country are now divided, than the scenes which are constantly enacted at the capital at Washington. The House of Representatives is especially distinguished for its disgraceful exhibitions of blackguardism. This body which should be wise, intelligent and dignified, as the representatives of a free people, has become a bear-garden where bullies and blackguards, sent up by Democratic fire-eaters, and Republican hypocrites illustrate most admirably the principles of their respective parties, to the detriment of the public business, and the degradation of the good name of the American Republic.

An Arkansas candidate for Congress sends forth his qualifications for office in the following manner: "Gentlemen, if I am elected to this office I will represent my constituents as the sea represents the earth, or as the night contracts with the day. I will unrivet human society, clean all the parts, and screw it together again, I will correct all abuses, purge out all corruption, and go through the enemies of our party like a rat through a new cheese." He was elected.

A composition of resin and grease, made thick enough to spread well with a brush, is recommended to be put on the stems of peach trees from the root up, as a preventive of the peach worm. The composition must be laid on thick enough to prevent the insect from depositing its eggs in the soft bark near the juncture of the stem to the root.

Gardening.

A more pleasant sight can scarcely meet the eyes than seeing young ladies out at sunrise, hoe in hand, engaged in beautifying and cultivating the gardens. What scene more enchanting and worthy of admiration? What could look nicer than to see a lovely young lady (for such a course will make any one lovely,) out before breakfast at work in the garden, planting flowers or tending vegetables. How much better and nobler they seem than those lackadaisical "young ladies," who loll about and sleep away the mornings of life, terrified at nothing so much as the idea of earning even the salt that seasons their food.—Also for the prospects of the man who weds them.

Let us urge upon the young ladies to arrange their gardens in better style this spring, than ever. Be sure to plant flowers—have the garden and the yard full of them. They create happiness and render your homes beautiful. Have boquets all around, and, parents, don't grumble or be careless enough to injure the flowers, even if you do think they intrude upon your space. Let your daughters rear as many as possible.—Since the earliest period of the world, the mythological goddess, Flora, has had her worshippers, and we are proud to acknowledge ourselves one of the number in these latter days. Attend also to the vegetables. They are ornamental as well as useful.

I Was Once Young.

It is an excellent thing for all who are engaged in giving instruction to young people frequently to call to mind what they were themselves when young. This practice is one which is most likely to impart patience and forbearance, and to correct unreasonable expectations.—At one period of my life, when instructing two or three young people to write, I found them, as I thought, unusually stupid. I happened about this time to look over the contents of an old copy-book, written by me when I was a boy. The thick up-strokes, the crooked down strokes, the awkward joining of letters, and the blots in the book, made me completely ashamed of myself, and I could at the time have hurled the book into the fire. The worse, however, I thought of myself, the better I thought of my backward scholars. I was cured of my unreasonable expectations, and became in future doubly patient and forbearing. In teaching youth, remember that you once were young, and in reproving their youthful errors, endeavor to call to mind your own.

☞A landlady in town, who keeps quite a respectable boarding house, had one man she wanted to get rid of, on account of his roughness of manners and conversation. One evening, during a political discussion at the table, he strongly denounced what he termed "the border ruffians." She thought to improve the opportunity to give him a strong hint, and so remarked to him, "Well, sir, I would a thousand times rather have a border ruffian in my house than a ruffian boarder." He saw by her looks that she meant something personal and since that day he has not bored her nor does she longer board him, either.

☞Richards was an inveterate chewer of tobacco. To break himself of the habit, he took up another, which was that of making a pledge about once a month that he would never chew another piece. He broke his pledge just as often as he made it. The last time I had seen him he told me he had broken off for good, but now, as I met him, he was taking another chew.

"Why Richards," says I, "you told me you had given up that habit, but I see you are at it again."

"Yes," he replied, "I have gone to chewing and left off lying."

☞A deacon residing in Ashtabula county, who was acting in the capacity of a colored porter, called at a shop in Windsor, where they had dry goods, groceries, hardware, notions, and sometimes a little whiskey, to sell. The man who owned the store was absent, and his wife officiated as clerk. The deacon passed the time of day, talking about religion, and finally asked if they had the one thing needful (meaning the Bible.) The lady's answer was: "No we are just out; but my husband is going to Cleveland next week and will get a barrel."

☞The entire property of the "Weaverton Manufacturing Company," of Frederick County, consisting of valuable water privileges and lands attached, for $19,000, subject to a lien of $19,500, was sold on Saturday last by Col. Maulsby. Purchaser, Col. Casper W. Weaver.

☞The Rev. John Stein, for the last forty years pastor of the Lutheran churches in Lebanon county, Pa., died last week. He was one of the oldest Lutheran clergymen in Pennsylvania. In the war of 1812 the deceased served as a volunteer in the defence of Baltimore.

☞"I didn't like our minister's sermon last Sunday," said a deacon, who had slept all sermon time, to another deacon.

"Didn't like it, brother? Why I saw you nodding assent to every proposition of the parson."

☞A Yankee who had seen the statue of the "Greek Slave," and was asked if he was not in raptures with it, answered: "Well, to tell the truth, I don't care much about them stone gals."

☞A man recently got married in Kentucky one day and hung himself the next. No doubt he wanted to try all varieties of nooses to see which he liked best.

☞Heaven ever renders her dews to the earth, but the earth seldom or never renders her dues to heaven.

E. WAGONER.

The Best Drill ever heard of!

IT Sows all kinds of Grain perfect, from one peck to four bushels without changing the Machine. The quantity can be changed when in motion, by a slide. It will saw Wheat, Buckwheat, Rye, Oats, and Barley without clogging by white caps, or at head of straws. This Drill feeds by two varying and rubber cylinders revolving together. The spring drag bar is very useful in rough land, a stump or rocky. It will pass over any thing not over fifteen inches high without breaking pins or anything else. The hoe will pass over and fill in proper place. I also build them with Guano or other fertilizer sowers attached, which all farmers who use any of those manures ought to have, as they will save one-half of the manure and have more grain, as it sows direct with the grain. This machine is warranted to sow correct with no clogging, and will sow from fifty pound to any number of pounds that is wanted to be sown by a Drill.

Persons wanting an Attachment of the Fertilizer Sower put on their Drills, will please be as early as possible, as I have a great deal of this kind of work to do.

For further particulars, address E. WAGONER, Westminster, Carroll County, Md.

☞All kinds of work done as heretofore.

WISTAR'S COUGH LOZENGES
(FROM THE ORIGINAL RECIPE.)
FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA INFLUENZA, &c., &c.

THESE celebrated Lozenges cannot be too strongly recommended as a safe and efficient remedy in Coughs, Colds and Influenza. They give relief in wheezing and tightness of the breast, difficulty of breathing, hoarseness, &c., and have been found particularly serviceable in that troublesome sensation, tickling in the throat, which is so often a source of great uneasiness. A trial only is needed to prove their efficacy. Prepared and sold by

LAW OF NEWSPAPERS.

1. SUBSCRIBERS who do not give express orders to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If subscribers order a discontinuance of their periodicals, the publishers may continue to send them until all arrearages are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their periodicals from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled and ordered them to be discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing their publishers, and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take periodicals from the office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

AMERICAN AND FOREIGN
STEREOSCOPIC EMPORIUM.

E. ANTHONY,
308 Broadway, New York,
After May 1st, 1860, at 501 BROADWAY, two doors from the St. Nicholas Hotel.

The Stereoscope is the most instructive, interesting, entertaining, amusing, and exciting of modern inventions.

None are too young, none too old, none too intelligent, none too uneducated, to acknowledge its worth and beauty.

No home is complete without it, and it must and will pen trate everywhere.

It presents to your view every part of the world, in all the relief, solidity, perspective, and sharpness of detail, as if you were on the spot.

Photographers are everywhere exploring Europe, Asia, Africa, America, in search of the grand and the beautiful, and the results of their skill are constantly enriching our stock.

We have an immense variety of paper Views of Science in Paris, London, England, Scotland, Ireland, Wales, France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Spain, The Rhine, Versailles, St. Cloud, Fontainebleau, Tuilleries, Italy, Turkey, Egypt, Athens, the Holy Land, China, India, Crystal Palace, also Groups Historical, amusing, marriage scenes, breakfast scenes, pictures, statuary, &c. &c. An exquisite assortment of illustrated Interiors of Palaces, Churches, and Cathedrals of France, Italy, &c., &c. Each of these illuminated views is most remarkable.

Every gentleman of wealth and refined taste should have in his drawing room some of our exquisite views on glass, with a revolving stereoscope, showing 12, 25, 50 or 100 scenes. Nothing can be more fascinating, and one can offer no greater treat to a friend fond of the picturesque and the beautiful.

Anthony's Instantaneous Stereoscope Views are the latest Photographic wonder. They are taken in the fortieth part of a second, and everything no matter how rapidly it may be moving, is depicted as sharply and distinctly as if it had been perfectly at rest. This gives an additional value, for to the beauties of inanimate nature it adds also the charm of life and motion. The process is a discovery of our own, and being unknown in Europe, we receive from London and Paris large orders for Anthony's Instantaneous Views of American life and scenery.

Among other things we have just published Cosmopolitic Illustrations of the Scene of the Fulton Street Prayer Meeting, in which many hearts feel an interest. The particulars of this will be found in our catalogue.

Our CATALOGUE of subjects and prices will be forwarded to any address on receipt of a stamp.

Parties at a distance sending us $3, $5, $10, $15, $20, or $25 can have a good instrument and such pictures as they may request, sent by Express.

View alone, (without instrument) can be sent by mail.

Parties who wish to be advised of everything really valuable in the line that comes out, may send us their names to place on record, and we will keep them posted at our own expense.

Men of leisure will find Photography a most fascinating and delightful amusement. We are prepared to fit out amateurs with everything necessary for their success together with instructions "How to take Stereoscopic Pictures."

E. ANTHONY,
Importer and Manufacturer of Photographic Materials, Stereoscopes and Stereoscopic Views.

☞Merchants from every section of the country are respectfully invited to make an examination of our stock, as our discount to the trade will be liberal.

To Photographers.—First class stereoscopic Negatives wanted. Jan. 20.—4m.
