Riding Cultivators

Our "Easy" Buckeye Cultivator is the simplest, neatest, strongest and LIGHTEST on the market. Has single tongue, 42-in. steel wheels and square tube steel frame.

The construction of the balanced frame gives the operator at all times an unobstructed view of the work ahead and eliminates all neck-weight and flying up of the pole.

It has eight teeth, the two inside teeth being independent. The wheels may be adjusted for wide or narrow rows, as wide as 47 inches or as narrow as 37 inches.

By the use of the balance lever all weight is removed from the horses necks.

You can come nearer hoeing corn with an "EASY" Buckeye than with any other Cultivator.

JUDGE WICKES' WILL.

The will of Hon. Joseph A. Wickes is a lengthy paper. Mrs. Gladys R. Wickes, his wife, and Levin W. Wickes, Esq., are left executors. It provides that all of the real estate, except where he lived and the house adjoining, be in trust, the rents to be paid three-fifths to Mrs. Thos. Hines, Mrs. O. W. Kennard and Mrs. Dr. Wilkins, and two-fifths to be paid to Mrs. Gladys Wickes for her two children, Gladys and Joseph.

The farms are to be sold when Joseph becomes 25, or if he dies before, then 15 years after the Judge's death, money to be invested and the income paid as above provided, and on death of each of children the principal to be paid to child or children of one who so dying.

The corner property in town, adjoining residence, is devised to Mrs. Wickes absolutely and his residence is devised to Mrs. Wickes for life and after her death to Gladys and Joseph and the survivor of them.

$5,000 is left to Mrs. Anna T. Houston; each $1,000 to Mrs. Eliz. Holton, Mary Clare Wickes, Louisa Houston Wickes, Benjamin Chambers Wickes, children of the late Benj. Chambers Wickes.

50 shares of National Exchange Bank, of Baltimore, and 660 shares of Merchants-Mechanics Bank of Baltimore bequeathed to Mrs. Wickes. The residue of personalty is bequeathed as follows: three-fifths to Mrs. Hines, Mrs. Kennard and Mrs. Wilkins, absolutely; one-fifth in trust for son, Joseph, or until he becomes 25 years of age, and one-fifth in trust for Gladys, or until she becomes 25 years of age.

A trust fund of $6,000 is created for the education of son, Joseph, the principal as well as the income to be applied for the purpose.

Alday Clements was named as trustee and joint executor with Mrs. Wickes in the will. Lewin W. Wickes, Esq., was substituted as trustee and joint executor in a second codicil. The will was dated May 29, 1909, and witnessed by T. W. Eliason, M. deK. Smith and Wm. F. Russell. The first codicil was made May 6, 1910 and was witnessed by T. W. Eliason, J. D. Bacchus and W. F. Russell. The second codicil was dated February 6, 1915, and witnessed by J. D. Bacchus and Dr. H. B. Sparks.

There were some bequests to the children.

DEATH OF HON. JOSEPH A. WICKES

Judge Joseph A. Wickes died at his home on High street, Chestertown, after a long illness, on Tuesday at 12 45 P. M., in his 89th year.

Hon. Joseph A. Wickes was born in Chestertown September 27, 1826 being the son of Col. Joseph and Elizabeth C. (Chambers) Wickes. He received his preparatory education in Washington College, Chestertown, and afterwards entered Princeton, from which he graduated in 1845, taking one of the honors in a class of more than eighty members. He then studied medicine in the University of Maryland, from which he graduated in the spring of 1848. Under the direction of his father, he later studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1852, after which he entered upon active practice.

In 1848 he married Anna Maria, daughter of William C. Tilghman, and granddaughter of Richard Cook Tilghman, of the Hermitage, in Queen Anne's county, Md. She died April 2, 1864, leaving five children, of whom three are living: Anna Tilghman, Hester Van Bibber and Caroline Barney, who married Thomas Hines, the late William Houston and C. W. Kennard, respectively.

The public life of Judge Wickes began very soon after his admission to the bar. In the summer of 1852 he was nominated by the Democratic party of Maryland as one of the electors of the president and vice-president of the United States. Associated with him on the electoral ticket were Robert McLean, Judge Alvey, Carroll Spence and Charles J. M. Gwinn, with whom he canvassed the state. The Democrats were successful and the electoral vote of Maryland was cast for the candidates of that party. Desiring a wider field for the practice of his profession, in January, 1854, he removed to Cumberland, Allegany county, Md., where, although an entire stranger, he was kindly received by the people and met with gratifying success.

In the summer of 1855 during his absence from the county and without his knowledge, the Democratic party nominated him as a candidate for the house of delegates of Maryland. It was supposed at that time that the American or Know-Nothing party (as it was called in derision) had enough members enrolled and sworn in its secret lodges to carry the state. An active canvass was made by the Democrats and the result was that its candidates were elected. The legislature assembled in Annapolis in January, 1856, and Mr. Wickes took his seat as a member of the house of delegates, of which William D. Merrick, Benjamin G. Harris and Judge Stone, also Democrats, were members. He participated in the debates and was a member of the judiciary committee. After the legislature adjourned [illegible] Cumberland and resumed [illegible] profession, which increased rapidly. Owing to the dampness of the climate and confinement to his office, his health declined and became so much impaired that in the spring of 1858 he was compelled to relinquish a lucrative practice and abandon his profession. He returned to Chestertown and passed the remainder of the year in recreation and open air exercise, hoping thereby to regain his health. This hope was realized and in 1859 he opened an office in Chestertown, which he resumed the practice of his profession. He was successful and soon acquired an extensive and lucrative practice.

In November, 1865, he married Anne Rebecca Wickes, daughter of Col. Simon Wickes. She died October 17, 1889; her only son died in infancy, the other child, Josephine Rebecca Wickes, surviving.

In 1866 Judge Wickes was appointed a delegate to the peace convention, which met in Philadelphia and over which Mr. Doolittle presided. The legislature of Maryland, at its session in January, 1867 submittted to the voters of the state the question of calling a constitutional convention. A large majority of the voters voted in favor of the convention, and in obedience to the provisions of the law it assembled in the city of Annapolis in 1867; Mr. Wickes was a member of the convention, having been elected by the voters of Kent county as a representative of that county. He was appointed chairman of the committee on the elective franchise, a member of the judiciary committee and a member of the committee on revision. The constitution adopted by the convention was ratified by the people at an election held in the succeeding fall and superseded the constitution of 1864. Under the provisions of the new constitution it was necessary to elect judges to carry into effect the judicial system. He was nominated as a candidate for the office of circuit judge of the second judicial circuit, composed of Cecil, Kent, Queen Annes, Caroline and Talbot counties. With him were associated John M. Robinson and Frederick Stump and they were elected without opposition for a term of fifteen years. In the summer of 1882, before his term expired, he was again nominated for the same office, and in the fall of that year elected for another term of fifteen years. Under the constitution of Maryland, on account of age he would have retired from office in the fall of 1896, but the legislature, in its session in January, 1896, under the power given it by the constitution, passed a joint resolution of the two houses, extending the time until his term expired. It is well known that the judge could have been nominated for congress in the congressional district in which he lives in 1872, but he declined the honor. For many years he was president of the board of visitors and governors of Washington College.

In November, 1893, Judge Wickes married Gladys, daughter of Joseph T. Robinson, granddaughter of Dr. Porter Robinson and great-granddaughter of Maj. Beverly Robinson, of Prince William County, Va. They have two children now living: Gladys Robinson and Joseph, another son having died when an infant.

The funeral was held Thursday at his late home on High street, Dr. Henry B. Ma in officiating, interment in Chester cemetery. The bearers selected by the deceased were Hon. James A. Pearce, Lewin W. Wickes, Esq., H. Clay Lusby, Jefferson D. Bacchus, James W. Crouch, of Chestertown, and Col. Henry Holly-day, Jr., of Easton. Music was furnished by Mrs. J. W. Cain, Miss Cain, Wm. W. Chapman and Thomas W. Perkins. The floral tributes were numerous and exquisite. Among those in attendance were Judges Constable, Adkins and Hopper, representatives from the bar and from the college. Chas. L. Dodd was the undertaker.

James is but nine years old and is doubtless the youngest violinist in the county. His teacher is Prof. C. H. Pearson, who has a large class of which James is the youngest.

Dr. W. R. Graham attended a church meeting in Pittsburg this week.

The Rev. Dr. W. F. Dickinson having accepted a call to St. Paul's Parish, will hold Services every Sunday from now on.
