Holiness Member Interrupts Ceremony At Hurlock, Md.

Hurlock, in Dorchester county, about 15 miles from Easton, has the past week been the scene of much excitement. First it was the arrest of a school teacher for whipping a scholar, Friday it was threatened by a destructive fire which drew crowds of people from all parts of the surrounding country. But the latest excitement about which there has been thrown secrecy, was at the marriage of Miss Maggie Ford, a young lady who is much thought of in that town, and who was raised by Mr. Frank Parvin, a farmer living near Hurlock, and Anthony Saunders, a divorced man, which took place in Unity Methodist Protestant Church Tuesday.

The church was crowded to its capacity when the bridal party entered and took its stand before the altar rail to be married by Rev. George R. Hooker, the pastor. He had gotten as far in the ceremony as "if anyone can show just and lawful cause why these two people should not be joined together let him now speak or forever hereafter hold his peace," a member of the Holiness Church, John Harper, who had come in just behind the bridal party, rushed up the aisle Bible in hand, reading it and at the same time crying out:

"Stop it! stop it! he is a divorced man. It's against the laws of God! You have no right to marry him; you are violating God's law!"

This he kept up all the time the minister was praying. He was told to stop. Mr. George Trice went to him and tried to keep him still, but could not. The preacher said: "Put him out." The bridal party, especially the young lady, was nervous and trembling. Frank Parvin and A. N. Russell went to Mr. Trice's assistance and Harper was taken down the aisle, calling out, kicking and catching hold of the columns to keep from being carried out. He was finally gotten out and the marriage ceremony completed.

He took the same train as Mr. and Mrs. Saunders, and went with them as far as Preston, preaching to them all the way.

That miniaturish sunflower, the "Black-eyed Susan," has been selected as the official flower of Maryland by the vote of the school children of the State, and the fact was duly recorded in the minutes of the meeting of the State Board of Education held at Annapolis last Thursday. Goldenrod gave Black-eyed Susan a close run in the race for first choice, and following it came the rose, the trailing arbutus and the pink carnation. Black-eyed Susan was popular with the children because it combines the black and gold of the State colors.

At the annual meeting of the Maryland Virginia Racing Association seven tracks were assigned dates, as follows: Talsey, Va., August 2 to 5; Pocomoke City, Md., August 6 to 12; Salisbury, August 16 to 19; Easton, Md., August 23 to 26; Rockville, Md., August 30 to September 2; Timonium, Md., September 6 to 10; Prospect Park, Md., September 12 to 17.
