For Congress,
THEODORE F. LANG, OF BALTIMORE COUNTY.

Election Tuesday, November 6th, 1888.

What has become of the red bandana? Is it neatly folded and laid away in lavender? or has it been lost in the wilds of Michigan.

Under Democratic economy that surplus is vanishing. A little while ago the question was, "What will they do with it?" Now it is, "What will they do without it?"

Nearly three months have elapsed since the renomination of President Cleveland, but he has not yet formally accepted the "trust." Does he contemplate a declination? It would be a graceful method of escaping the defeat that the very zephyrs are whispering in his ears.

Daniel L. Briton, a member of the Baltimore bar, was nominated by the Republican Congressional Convention of the Third District, on Tuesday. He is a native of Cecil county, and a man of excellent reputation and ability. He will make an active canvass.

The Democrats want free raw material to enable our manufacturers to send their products abroad and compete with other nations in foreign markets. Mr. McKinley, in his speech at the Southern Chautauqua, effectually disposed of that proposition by showing that under existing laws, upon all articles exported, manufactured in whole or in part of imported materials upon which duties are paid, a drawback to the extent of ninety per cent. of such duty is allowed. This is practically making raw material free without removing the ægis of protection from the home product.

Careful statistics of the average wages paid in the United States and Great Britain, in 102 occupations, show that the British wage-earner receives an average of $6.27 per week, while his American brother is paid $12.05, or nearly double, for the same period. In other words the average annual earnings of an American workingman, in these 102 occupations, is $300 greater than the amount realized for the same work in England. The cost of living in America is not much greater than in England. Yet the Democrats are seriously urging the adoption of a principle that will place American workingmen on the same level of wages as those in England.

The English press is in the secret of Mr. Cleveland's belligerant message, and counts it an adroit political manouvre. As long as Mr. Cleveland sticks to his free-trade theories he may rely upon English admiration. His sudden desire to retaliate the wrongs of American citizens at the hands of England's Canadian dependency is taken for just what it is worth. The London Daily News thinks he has "strengthened his position" politically; the Standard says he has "trumped the Republican trick;" The Times terms his message "a masterly move" and congratulates him on his "adroitness." All this goes to prove the deep interest of the English nation in his re-election. But it will not win. Mr. Cleveland is about as well understood at home as he is in England.

It now requires about $420,000,000 per annum to defray the expenses of Mr. Cleveland's economical administration; and the Democrats insist that it is all owing to the extravagant appropriations of the Republican Senate. They are making labored arguments to that effect, apparently forgetting that the appropriations are far below the estimates of the Departments. Such a plea is too absurd for consideration by people of ordinary intelligence. The expenses of the government must be met, even if they are incurred by a Democratic civil service reform administration, and the Senate did not increase the appropriation bills passed by the House, which is Democratic, more than three per cent. One of the items for which provision had to be made was an immense deficiency from the preceding year. That diminishing surplus leaves no room for the Mills bill.

Senator Gorman in his speech in the Senate, on Wednesday, reviewing and comparing the expenditures of the government under the present and previous administrations, stated that the postal service had been extended as never before, and that the expenditures to supply proper mail facilities exceed those of the last Republican administration by $45,490,485.14. In the present condition of the mails that was an unfortunate admission. Complaints concerning the inefficiency of the mail service are of daily occurrence. There has never been a period, in the history of the Department, when the mails were less reliable. There never was a period in its history when the service was more efficient than at the close of the last Republican administration. To pay a bonus of forty-five millions of dollars to demoralize it and render it as unreliable as it is to-day, is hardly a cause for boasting on the part of Democrats.

The yellow fever epidemic at J[illegible]ville, Fla., is growing in [illegible]. There were 23 new cases on Thursday. Great alarm prevails in all the surrounding territory.

The Republican State convention of New York, on Tuesday last, nominated Ex-Senator Warner Miller, for Governor; Col. S. V. R. Cruger, for Lieut. Governor; and Hon. Wm. Rumsey, for Judge of the Court of Appeals. The utmost harmony and the greatest enthusiasm [illegible]. Speeches were made by Mr. Mil[illegible] Cruger and others, indicating [illegible] tariff question will be made [illegible] nent issue of the contest. [illegible] cans of New York go i[illegible] united ranks and lar[illegible] the enemy and are [illegible] victory.

It was Art[illegible]emus Ward, we believe, who wanted a[illegible] army in which there should be no pr[illegible] low th[illegible] private soldiers and no officer be[illegible] the rank of brigadier general. The Democrats of Freedom district must have taken lessons of the wit. They have organized a club with forty-five vice-presidents. At first glance it would appear that so large a number must be superfluous and a waste of material; but, after all, that may be a mistake. Doubtless it was a wise provision and was not adopted without due reflection. In the absence of the president from a meeting of the club a vice-president will preside. So the Freedom Democrats have made it reasonably certain that their club shall never lack a presiding officer. But the unofficial members of that organization, if there are any, must feel lonely.

The Outlook.

A forecast of the result of the Presidential election at this early stage of the campaign cannot, of course, be made with absolute certainty; but the outlook is, unquestionably, highly encouraging to the Republicans. Outside of Virginia there are no dissensions; the ranks of the party are intact and united and there is a singleness of aim and purpose indicative of a determination to win, if combined and faithful effort can compass victory. Everywhere the politician is sunk in the patriot; the jealousies which are inseparable from political life are stilled or held in abeyance, and all are working together with energy and determination to save the country from the consequences of the pernicious policy inaugurated by the President and adopted by the Democrats of the House of Representatives. Every genuine Republican realizes fully that it is more important to maintain and perpetuate the prosperity of the people by upholding the system of Protection to American industries and labor, than to honor any man or set of men, or promote individual political interests. There is no place for the selfish, calculating political trickster in this contest. There is too much at stake. Laudable personal ambition forgets itself in the face of the great issues involved and the momentous consequences that hang upon the result. The esprit de corps of the party is prefect, and this alone is a presage of victory. But there are other indications that strengthen the hope and brighten the prospect of a glorious triumph. It becomes more apparent every day that the principle of Protection to home industries and labor, through the medium of import duties on foreign products that come in competition with our own, is a well-grounded conviction in the American mind. The advocates of free-trade believed that general and thorough discussion of the subject would change that conviction and reverse the policy under which the nation has enjoyed unprecedented development and prosperity during the last quarter of a century. Mr. Cleveland took the initiative in his last annual message. The majority of his party leaders acquiesced in his views and a bill was prepared in harmony with his suggestions, and, by the aid of the executive lash, forced through the House of Representatives. The element that sticks to the party through thick and thin rallied to its support, and many a man has been driven to approve a measure that is in direct conflict with the settled convictions of his life. Some very sudden conversions were wrought. But there are a good many independent thinkers, even in the Democratic party, and these cannot be driven to accept a principle entirely at variance with their opinions, or support a policy that, as they believe, is inimical to the welfare of the country. A vast number of Democrats, especially in what have been held as the doubtful States, have renounced Cleveland and free-trade and determined to support Harrison and Protection. Many of them are men of prominence and influence; many more are toilers and wage-earners, who realize that the policy of the Democratic party means for them competition with the poorly paid labor of foreign lands and consequent want and misery for their families. Few people have an idea of the wide extent of this sentiment. It seems to be prevalent in every community, and to reach every class of society. The desperate efforts of the Democrats to change the issue, or break its force by pretences at variance with the real character of the Mills bill, have thus far been unavailing. The question will not down. It is in the campaign to stay, and it promises to give the Democrats a Waterloo from which they will not soon recover.

The Republicans are confident of victory; but this confidence has not led to neglect of any of the legitimate means necessary to attain it. They are fighting not for victory alone, but that the dangerous principle of free-trade may be buried out of sight.

The September Registration.

In our advertising columns will be found the notices of the September registration of voters in the several districts of this county. The Registrars will sit on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the 10th, 11th and 12th days of September. The notices indicate the places at which the sittings will be held each day. The Republicans throughout the county are earnestly requested to see that every voter is made eligible to cast his ballot by proper registration. Maryland may not cast her electoral vote for Harrison, but she can, and with proper effort will, utter a decided rebuke to free-trade tariff tinkers by materially reducing the eleven thousand majority by which the State was carried for Mr. Cleveland four years ago.

The large barn of Solomon Mehring, about two miles from Littlestown, and near the line of this county, caught fire from some unknown cause on Tuesday afternoon and was burned to the ground. The barn was the largest in Adams county, measuring 50x115 feet. About 1,800 bushels of wheat, a large quantity of hay and straw, three heifers and a colt were burned. The property was partially insured.

The Pres[illegible]ent's Contribution.

[illegible] Service President Cleveland [illegible]t believe in taxing the the salaries [illegible] office-holders for political purposes; but he gracefully inaugurates a new departure by ostentatiously sending his check, to the Democratic campaign committee, for $10,000, which is just 5 per cent. of his four years' salary. The Cabinet officers and others follow his example and the committee rejoices in a replenished treasury. It has leaked out that appeals are being made to the office-holders for the sinews of war, and the President's contribution is supposed to set the pace at which the lesser grades of public servants are expected to respond to the polite requests of the party managers. It isn't a very slow pace, either. It seems to meet with the marked approval of the Democratic press, too, which was wont to anathematize office-holders' contributions, in former days, as a great and shameful outrage on public morals. Where is George Wm. Curtis, that no blast of warning from his bugle-horn is heard upon the circumambient air? It is to be feared the immaculate editor of Harper's Weekly has fallen from grace, since "these things can be and not o'ercome him."

Speaking seriously, this great parade of the President's act can only be designed as a notification to his appointees and subordinates that they are expected to do likewise. His right to make a contribution, little or much, to the proper expenses of his campaign, will not be denied; but it has been reserved for him to do this in a manner to attract universal attention. The country is to be congratulated that this is the first incident of this character in its history. It is to be hoped it will be the last.

The President's Message.

Mr. Cleveland has met the rejection of the Bayard-Chamberlain Treaty by the United States Senate, with a message in keeping with his previous record, and characteristic of the man. It is an apparent change of base; but, viewed in the light of many of his previous acts, it will not be so regarded. It is, we believe, designed to accomplish two purposes; namely, to make a show of ardent patriotism pending the Presidential election, and ultimately to defeat the very object ostensibly intended. It reviews the situation and alleges many unfriendly and inequitable acts toward American citizens on the part of the Canadian government, extending far beyond the range of the immediate cause of difference between the two countries. It asks for legislation to authorize retaliatory measures on the part of the executive, and such measures as would, if enforced, do possibly as much, or more injury to American than to Canadian interests. If there were no laws on the statue books authorizing retaliation, the President's present attitude toward the subject would have at least the appearance of sincerity, although it might be open to the charge of sudden conversion to the views of opposition senators. But it must be borne in mind that enlarged retaliatory powers have already been extended at his own request, by act of Congress. More than two years ago Congress, moved by a desire to protect American fishermen against the outrages to which they were being subjected at the hands of our Canadian neighbors, passed a retaliatory measure without division on party lines. The Canadians regarded it with indifference and continued to board, seize and harrass American vessels on the Dominion seaboard. No attempt was made on the part of our government to exercise the power of retaliation conferred by the law of 1886, but the President complained that the authority was inadequate. Democrats and Republicans then united as one man in Congress to enlarge his powers in the matter. This was at the session of 1886-87. The influence of the administration was, strange to say, exerted against the passage of the act; but in spite of this opposition it became a law. During all this time the system of outrages complained of, continued; but instead of enforcing the retaliatory measures for which ample authority and power had been conferred by law, the administration permitted nearly a year to elapse without any attempt to protect its citizens from repeated wrongs, and finally, the Treaty, which has just been rejected by the Senate, was negotiated. Again the President calls for an enlargement of the scope of his authority to punish the Canadians by retaliation, and, it is alleged by those competent to express an opinion, suggests an infraction of existing treaty stipulations. The debate which has followed the reception of the message in Congress has pretty clearly demonstrated the supreme inconsistency and remarkable tergiversation of which his Excellency has been guilty. Of course the Democrats publicly approve and sustain his proceedings, but some emphatic private anathemas must be indulged in by the grave and reverend Senators who so recently manufactured eloquence by the hour in advocating the adoption of the Bayard-Chamberlain Treaty.

The message of President Cleveland need not be read between the lines to discover that it is practically an attempt to win back to the Democratic fold the Irish-American voters who have been deserting the party because of its pro-English policy. Many Democratic dailies "took time by the forelock" by declaring the morning after it was sent to the Senate, and before it was known to the country, that it had already had that effect. The party machinery was used to attempt the manufacture of enthusiasm among the voters of the class referred to, requests having been sent out to have congratulatory telegrams to the President and public demonstrations of approval. The scheme seems to have miscarried. The attempt to inaugurate a new issue and eliminate the tariff question has signally failed; and Protectionists, whether they be native-born or naturalized citizens, cannot be diverted from their purpose to vote against the free-trade party and its candidates.

What action will be taken on the President's message by Congress remains to be seen. It is probable that within the lines of treaty obligations he will be granted all possible authority to protect American citizens by retaliation. If his previous course, however, furnishes any index to the future, it is very unlikely that he will exercise such authority when conferred.

Geo. Kephart, one of the oldest farmers in the vicinity of Reisterstown, died on Monday last. He was 78 years of age.

Col. Theo. F. Lang.

The standing and reputation of Col. Theo. F. Lang, the Republican candidate for Congress in this district, are forcibly illustrated by the following, taken from a recent issue of the Baltimorean, a Democratic paper.

We give to-day features in The Baltimorean which are familiar to thousands in Baltimore. Few there be in our midst who have not looked upon the pleasant face of Col. Theodore F. Lang. He has been in and out before our people for more than twenty-five years past, and his pleasant smile will be readily recognized. Many doubtless, there are, who object to the Dr's. politics, as he is more frequently addressed, than he is as Colonel, but few and far between are the numbers who can object to him as the courteous gentleman. He is so "childlike and bland" that none scarcely would take him to have ever figured as a son of Mars. Yet he has a glorious military record, aye, a fighting one of which any soldier might feel proud. In the matter of war, whatever his hands found to do he did with all his might. We never heard it from the Colonel's tongue, but we get it from a source so reliable that it does not admit of a doubt. He smelt the battle time and again, and when, too, he was in the thickest of the fight, for no less than four horses were killed while he was astride of the chargers.

But these, no doubt, will prove unpleasant reminiscences. The Doctor now pursues the paths of peace, and favors "a union of hearts and hands as well as a union of States," and to accomplish such a consummation he will bend every energy and direct every effort. In the arena of debate, and in the political conflict, Col. Lang will be found battling for his country and her people's greatest good. Of this every voter may feel convinced, and he will think none the less of that citizen who does not concur with him in politics. He is a liberal minded and a generous, whole-souled man. He can tolerate an honest difference of opinion. He can and ever will applaud the man, who says he honestly thinks the better president of the two now most prominent before the people, is, perhaps Grover Cleveland. Such a candidate then will certainly not make any enemies, and may make a good many friends.

Too Numerous to Mention.

To keep track of all the defections reported from Cleveland to Harrison, and give them publication in a weekly newspaper, would require the constant employment of several persons and a sheet of huge dimensions to present the names and causes involved in the changes. Besides this there are many localities in which considerable numbers of Democrats have gone in bodies into Republican organizations, and whose names are not published. Others still privately state their purpose to vote for Harrison, but ask that their names be withheld to prevent the hounding process, from party friends, that would be sure to follow a public announcement of their intention. Only a few days ago an active young Democrat of this county informed the writer that he had determined to vote for Harrison, but preferred to do it privately so that the fact might not be known to his associates and provoke bad feeling. We continue, however, the publication of the names of some of the Democrats who have declared their intention to vote for Harrison and have assigned their reasons for so doing. In the list, perhaps, the names of a few Prohibitionists and Mugwumps may appear.

The first is Robert M. Olyphant, President of the Delaware and Hudson Canal Company, an ultra Democrat, but a Protectionist. It need hardly be said that in the free-trade proclivities of Cleveland and his party, at this time, Mr. O. finds abundant cause to declare for Harrison.

Ex-Congressman Hervey C. Calkin, of New York, a life-long Democrat and Tammany Hall leader, says he has determined to vote for Harrison and Morton because he is a Protectionist and free-trade is becoming the chief principle of the Democratic party. Mr. Calkin is a member of the firm of H. C. & J. H. Calkin, coppersmiths and plumbers. He says that previous to the war, under a revenue tariff, their hands were paid $1.50 per day. Now they get $3, and he is not favorable to any scheme that will force him to reduce their wages.

Edward Philips, of Lyndonville, New York, who has been a staunch Democrat, gave a big party to celebrate his conversion to Harrison and Morton. It is the same old story. He is an American and doesn't believe in ruining his own country to foster the enterprises of another. His son, who has also been a Democrat, will vote with him for the Republican candidates. A Harrison pole and flag were raised on the occasion of their public announcement of their intention to make a change, and Stephen Greenman, another recruit from Democracy, was among the speakers.

There is a big Harrison boom in Steuben county, New York, for Harrison and Protection. Among the Democrats who have determined to vote the Republican ticket are Ezra Gleason, of Wayne, and his two sons. W. F. McNamara, of Corning, is another. He has been quite prominent in Democratic circles, and was twice a candidate of that party for the Assembly. He has not only made up his mind to vote for Harrison, but will take the stump for the Republican National and State tickets. Twenty Democrats in Putney have joined a Republican Club.

E. C. Robbins, a prominent lawyer, of Buffalo, N. Y., who has been a speaker for the Democrats for years, says he determined, as soon as the St. Louis convention was held, that he would not support its candidates, no matter who might be nominated against them; but the selection of Harrison by the Republicans had quickly determined his affirmative action. He will vote and work for the ticket with all his heart, as will also many other New York Democrats.

At Cleveland, Ohio, the W. J. Hart Club, an organization of Hebrews, has formally renounced the Democratic party. It was formed three years ago and every member was a Democrat. The Club numbers about fifty members. Mr. Levy, the President, said he had looked the ground all over, and come to the conclusion that the Republican party is the party for Israelites. It was decided to form a Harrison and Morton Club of the organization.

Mr. Panusch, clothier, Hudson, New York, whose business interests are extensive, says that free-trade will not do for him. He is a naturalized German, who has voted the Democratic ticket many times, but cannot follow Cleveland. John Madden, a foundry man, and dyed-in-the-wool Democrat; P. M. Harder, and Mr. Hayes, of the Valley Mills, of the same locality, are all for Harrison and Morton on the tariff issue.

John Neeson, of Buffalo, N. Y., says he is a Democrat but not for Cleveland. He don't believe in free-trade, and couldn't vote against Morton anyhow, whosent a cargo of provisions to the starving people of Ireland.

Arthur Elsey, manager of the lace-factory at Wilksbarre, Pa., says he has had his eyes opened, and can no longer act with the Democrats. He hadn't given the tariff question much consideration until the issue was forced upon him. He has determined to vote for Harrison and Morton.

Ex-Mayor Thomas Voyle, Carbondale, Pa., says he cannot stand Cleveland's wishy-washy administration, don't believe in his way of conducting affairs and will not vote for him.

Coming nearer home, we have Frederick Kraft, a former Democratic member of the Maryland Legislature from Baltimore, who was received into a Republican league, last week, at Bird's Hall, corner Edmondson Avenue and Mount street. Mr. Kraft made an address on the occasion. He is a prosperous and influential citizen. Wm. E. Wolf, another Democrat, and a relative of Hon. Fetter S. Hoblitzell, has also joined this league. He has hitherto been a staunch Democrat.

W. S. Hammer, of Adams county, Pa., writes to the Baltimore American that he was asked by the chairman of the Democratic State Committee to see all the Democrats in Highland township. He did so as far as possible and was surprised to find that many of them intend to vote the Republican ticket.
