WESTMINSTER, MARYLAND.

W. L. W. Seabrook, - Editor.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1891.

The protective tariff theory is growing very strong in France, and the Legislature of that country is now considering proposals to advance existing rates very largely.

A Successor to the late Secretary Windom, in the Treasury Department, has not yet been announced. Numbers of names have been mentioned in connection with the appointment, but it is impossible to predict, with certainty, who will be chosen.

Spain must have imported some Arkansas election methods. At Barcelona, while an election was progressing on Sunday last, rioters smashed the ballot-boxes. If they had studied the methods of the Baltimore Democracy they might have quietly accomplished their purpose by false counting.

W. M. Zimmerman, the storekeeper and agent of the Farmer's Alliance supply store at Spartanburg, S. C., is charged with being short in his accounts from $15,000 to $30,000. It is alleged that he opened a store some distance from the regular Alliance store and transferred goods there and sold them at reduced rates.

Maurice J. Hanrahan, a young Baltimore lawyer, was disbarred on Saturday last after a hearing by the Supreme Bench of that city. The specific charge against him was selling and converting to his own use the proceeds of a bond that had been entrusted to him for reinvestment at his own solicitation. The bond was the property of Mrs. Abbie Wallace, of Woodberry, a widow.

Sir John Macdonald, the Governor-General of Canada, has appealed to the Canadian people on a scheme for partial reciprocity with the United States. He wants them to vote for it, and yet the idea is an absurdity. Sir John cannot draw up a schedule of that sort that would be acceptable to the United States, and he must be fully aware of it. In fact Mr. Blaine has told him so in plain language. But all the same he may secure the votes of the people in favor of the government by his false premises, and that is his object in presenting the scheme for their suffrages. The Canadian people want reciprocity with us, but they are not likely to achieve it under the present government of the Dominion.

Free-trade England was not slow to protect her infant industries, when they required it, by high tariff duties, bounties and the prohibition of the importation of foreign competing manufactures. The Dry Goods Chronicle, of December 27th, is authority for the statement that a bounty of 10 to 30 per cent. was paid by the British government, to manufactures of linen, according to quality of fabric, and an additional bounty of the same amount on exportations of the product. At the same time a tariff of 30 per cent. was imposed on all imported linens, and the importation of French linens into great Britain and Ireland was prohibited under severe penalties. The effort of the United States to encourage the production of American linens, by increasing duties on the imported article, is met with strenuous protests by English free-traders and their American allies among the Democrats. Having built up this industry by the system referred to, the British government now finds it very reprehensible on our part to apply the principle, even partially, to our own manufactures. Perhaps this is not surprising, although it is inconsistent. The surprising part of it is that Americans can be found with so little interest in the prosperity of their own country, as to agree with our English competitors.

Bossism Still Triumphant.

Notwithstanding the bad showing in the government of the State, during the last two years, the Democratic party bosses appear to be more thoroughly intrenched in power than ever before. The treasury embezzlement by the chairman of the Democratic State Central committee; the unpardonable ignorance of official duty, on the part of the managers' Governor; the more culpable negligence of the Comptroller chosen at their behest, beside many other flagrant short-comings in official life, among the tools of the bosses, which ought to sink any party, or at least retire from its control those under whom such things were possible, seem only to have strengthened their hold upon the party machinery. Nay, even worse than that, the party is everywhere singing pæans to the skillful manipulator who brought into official being the element that has blackened the good name and fair fame of the State and made patriotic Marylanders blush with shame for the ignorance or venality of some of these public servants. The helpless and apparently hopeless submission of the better element in the Democratic party, to this condition of party government, is one of the strangest features of the situation. The stirring notes of Cowen's bugle blast, calling the Independents to arms and action against the machine, no longer ring out and reverberate over the hills and through the valleys of the Commonwealth. Instead, the redoubtable champion of pure government and honest elections roars as gently as a sucking dove against his old time foes. Only Mr. Marbury seems to sound no uncertain note of defiance and to give assurance that the spirit of honest independence is not entirely dead in the Democratic ranks, and to make it known that all Democrats are not bound to the triumphal car of the arch-autocrat of the party.

To thoughtful and intelligent Democrats this must appear a remarkable condition of things; and so it is. It but illustrates, however, the truth of what has often been asserted in these columns concerning the matter. The Democratic party will never know deliverance from the despotism of machine management until it is defeated at the polls. There is no other remedy and true-hearted, pure-minded Democrats should speedily set to work to reach that consummation. The party is held in the iron grip of a master who can be supplanted in no other way.

The Late Secretary Windom.

Many kind words have been uttered concerning the late Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Wm. Windom, since his sudden death in New York on Thursday night of last week; but no expression of respect and admiration for the man, with which we have met, has been an exaggeration of his worth or underserved by its subject. Mr. Windom was a patriot and statesman in the truest sense of those terms. He was a just and righteous man; a true and sincere Christian, and was as conscientious in his political opinions and as faithful in the discharge of his public as of his private duties. There is little doubt that his death was hastened by too close application to the details of his great and important office. No guards were ever stationed at his door to prevent the citizen from seeking an interview, and he was accessible to the humblest petitioner as well as to the most influential. The quality of kindness in his nature was superabundant and he displayed it on every occasion. But he was not a plastic man, to be moulded by circumstances or the opinions of others. He thought for himself, drew his own conclusions and never wavered in maintaining them. His speech before the members and guests of the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, on the night of his death, is said to have been his best one. It was a powerful plea for the revival of American shipping and the maintenance of sound finance. He was not a believer in the free coinage of silver, although a bi-metalist, and he gave some forcible and cogent reasons against its adoption. The concluding paragraph of his remarks was as follows:

"Mr. President and gentlemen, my subject has tempted me to impose upon your patience. I will close by merely calling your attention to one other thing which I deem very important, both to our commercial and financial interests, viz., the passage of the bill now pending in Congress for the establishment of an international bank to facilitate our exchanges with Mexico and Central and South America. New York is destined at no distant day to be one the financial as well as the commercial centre of the world, and such an institution would, in my judgment, be a long step toward that end, as well as a most valuable instrumentality for the promotion of commerce with those countries. Give us direct and ample transportation facilities under the American flag, and controlled by American citizens; a currency sound in quality and adequate in quantity; an international bank to facilitate exchanges and a system of reciprocity carefully adjusted within the lines of protection; and not only will our foreign commerce again invade every sea, but every American industry will be quickened and our whole people feel the impulse of a new and enduring prosperity."

A few minutes after he uttered these words, and while the applause with which they were greeted still vibrated on his ears, death struck and he fell a victim to his devotion to duty. His remains were taken to Washington, and there, on Monday, the last sad rites were performed and all that was mortal of William Windom was consigned to the grave in Rock Creek Cemetery. An eloquent and touching eulogy was paid to the character of the deceased statesman by Rev. Dr. Hamlin, of the Covenant Presbyterian Church, in which the public funeral services were held. His Associates in the Cabinet of President Harrison were the honorary pall-bearers, and distinguished honors were paid the dead statesman by his surviving compeers and his mourning countrymen. A good man has gone to his rest and the country has lost a true and faithful servant.

The Miners Need Protection.

The drowning of eighteen or nineteen miners at Jeansville, Pa., on Wednesday last, strongly emphasizes the need of legislation to protect the men who work in mines against perils that could be avoided. The catastrophe in this instance resulted from a cause that must have been perfectly well known to the engineer of the mine. Even the miners themselves had some vague ideas of the danger constantly threatening them, and some times spoke of it among themselves. They were working in a drift on a lower level than a portion of the mine that had been abandoned and was flooded to the top, but, while they knew this fact, they were unaware of their close proximity to the immense body of water, and only realized their imminent and immediate danger when the intervening wall was broken through and the flood began to pour in upon them carrying death in its wake. The drift in which they were at work was quickly submerged and but few escaped.

This direful calamity was the result of apparently culpable negligence, and somebody should be held to a strict accountability for the consequences. But there should be careful and emphatic legislation in all the mining States to protect the workmen against such perils as may be avoidable and can be provided against by diligence and care. Explosions, such as resulted in the shaft of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, in Pennsylvania, last week, may be inevitable in consequence of the carelessness of the workmen themselves; but the Jeansville disaster appears to be clearly traceable to the negligence of the agents in control of the mine. Many of the men who lost their lives were married and leave wives and children in poverty and destitution. The owners of the mine ought, at least, to be compelled to support them.

Ernest Forbes, a young colored man, who was recently convicted in the Criminal Court of Baltimore of an outrageous assault upon Miss Bertha B. Phipps, of Anne Arundel county, was sentenced, on Monday last, by Judge Wright to be hanged. The case was removed from the Anne Arundel County Court to Baltimore, on motion of the traverser, who will suffer the extreme penalty of the law at Annapolis, at such time as the Governor may designate.

J. Edward Stirling, postmaster at Glen Falls, Baltimore county, Md., has resigned, as he expects to move away from the place and, as he says he can find no one who is willing to succeed him as postmaster, he recommends that the office be abolished.

A reciprocal treaty with Brazil has been negotiated with the Republic of Brazil. The full text of the treaty has been communicated to the Senate by Secretary Blaine.

The Baltimore American of Thursday says: "The Western Maryland train due at Emory Grove at eight o'clock, was one hour late yesterday morning, because the engine and baggage car jumped the track. At Arlington there was a large crowd of passengers waiting the arrival of the train. A four-horse team, belonging to Mr. Henry Judik, was standing near the track when the train approached. The noise frightened the horses, which made a dash across the track, and, as they did so, the engine struck one of the front horses, throwing it high in the air and breaking its neck. The horse fell over the other front horse, which knocked it under the wheels of the engine. Both hind legs of one of the rear horses were broken. The other horse escaped with but slight injury. The three horses were instantly killed. Luckily there was no one with the team at the time of the accident." The train referred to above is the Union Bridge Accommodation, Capt. Thornton Wright conductor, that passes Westminster at 6.38, A. M.

An Open Letter.

WESTMINSTER, April 10, 1890.

Mr. Jos. B. Boyle:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but temporary relief. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try your Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost instant relief, but a permanent cure. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am, Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.
