A New Scheme in Finance.

The gold dollar is so small that there are practically none in circulation. Silver dollars are in circulation, but they are so large that most people don't care to have many of them in their pockets. How would it do to have dollars, halves and quarters composed of both gold and silver in combination—one-half gold and one-half silver? If the proposed international conference should adopt a standard of value of this sort, there would be a single standard of value, and free coinage would not threaten disaster.

The above paragraph appeared in the editorial columns of the ADVOCATE in May, 1892.

The paragraph spoke of a combination of the metals more as a matter of convenience than as a means of keeping gold and silver on a parity, though it was asserted that free coinage [of silver] would not threaten disaster if a single standard of gold and silver, in combination, were established by the proposed international conference.

An ex-Congressman, and a gentleman who has given much thought to finance, recently remarked to an editor of the ADVOCATE, in talking of the repeal of the Sherman act and the difficulty of keeping gold and silver on a parity, that if gold and silver are combined in coinage of money he thought the question would be solved. Gold, he said, is the measure of value the world over. If silver depreciates gold appreciates, and as the silver in a dollar would fall in value the gold would rise in exact proportion as the silver falls. Thus gold and silver, in combination, would make a reliable standard, and would provide for the use of both gold and silver as money.

The gentleman said he had given considerable thought to the subject, and in presenting his views to others had heard no tenable objection urged to the scheme.

We would like to see the matter discussed by the press, and we present it for that purpose.—ADVOCATE, JUNE 10, 1893.

The suggestion of the Advocate is ingenious, but its opinion of the effect of a combination of gold and silver in coinage can scarcely be regarded as conclusive. As gold is undoubtedly the measure or standard of value the world over, it does not become worth more or less by the fluctuation of some other substance. To assert that it does is simply to deny its standing as a measure of value. The world accepts it as a standard and compares or measures other things by it. For instance, the value of silver metal in a legal tender American silver dollar is to-day 47.9 cents in gold. It is, however, accepted at its full face value because it is believed that in some way the government will manage to make it good in gold. But suppose the two metals be combined at the present ratio, or, in other words, a gold and a silver dollar be consolidated and then coined into two amalgamated dollars, will the value of either of them equal that of the gold dollar before the combination? Each will contain but seventy-three and 19-20 cents in actual value of the precious metals, and will have no more purchasing value than that, unless the government which coins it gives assurance that it shall be redeemed in gold. But suppose, after they shall have been so coined, silver shall further depreciate in value, from what standard, and in comparison with what, will it depreciate? The answer is obvious. Gold is the standard and no change will take place in the value of that. The silver will simply be worth less in gold and the latter metal will be worth not one whit more. It cannot be if it be a standard of value.

The weakness of the Advocate's proposition is found directly in that fact. Any substance that is set up as a standard or measure of value cannot fluctuate in value. Other substances are measured by it, not it by other substances; so that the suggestion that gold in combination with silver will appreciate in value as the latter depreciates, is entirely untenable. There can be no seesawing between gold and silver. One may go up or down, but the other remains fixed and immovable. If it were not so it would not be a standard.

So, after all, the Advocate has not discovered a panacea for the cure of the silver affliction. In fact there is only one cure for it, and that is the adoption of the gold standard de jure as we have it de facto. The latter proposition may be denied, but financiers know very well that, as we have already said, the parity of the legal tender silver dollars with gold is only maintained by the faith of the people that they will be redeemed in gold. The Advocate's scheme would, in our opinion, be worse than the present condition, because we now have a standard of value for which the substitute would be a hybird of unstable quality, forever producing seed perplexingly unreliable and disappointing.

The Herald's Pension List.

The Baltimore Sunday Herald in its issue of June 18th contained a complete list of those receiving pensions in Baltimore, for service as soldiers in the war for the Union, or their representatives, and in its issue of June 25th, a similar list of pensioners residing in the counties of Maryland, showing the amount paid monthly to each. The publication of these lists has created much favorable, as well as some adverse criticism. On the whole it should be advantageous to honest pensioners, and to the government also, if the lists contain the names of persons not entitled to receive pensions. The faithful soldier need not be ashamed to receive such reward for his services and sacrifices. The government which he helped to save is worth vastly more to the people and will be to coming generations, than the aggregate monthly pittance paid the soldiers. If there be, as has been so persistently asserted, pensioners who are frauds and "bums," the Herald's list will give an opportunity to bring them to light. The SENTINEL has, for years, made it a point to make public the names of those to whom pensions have been granted in this county.

It is to be regretted that a number of inaccuracies occur in the Herald's list, in the names and amounts given for this county. A number of names are omitted and others are set down for amounts they are not receiving.

The National Encampment of the G. A. R. will be held at Indianapolis, Ind., September 8th.

The Silver Purchase Law.

The Democratic allegation that the Sherman law, which they claim is the cause of the existing financial depression, is a Republican measure, will scarcely bear the test of analysis. The act was passed in 1890 as the result of a conference of the Finance committees of the Senate and House. The Senate had just passed a free coinage bill by the votes of 27 Democrats and 15 Republicans, 22 Republicans and only 3 Democrats voting against it. The bill had gone to the House and was there defeated upon the understanding that the committee would reccommend some measure that would continue the purchase of silver. It was defeated by a small majority, 130 Republicans and 12 Democrats voting against it, and 112 Democrats and 23 Republicans for it. It is thus seen that the sound money Republicans were fighting a small minority of their own party, allied with nine-tenths of the Democrats in favor of free silver. The compromise prevailed, but it was for a time imperiled because it provided for the cessation of the coinage of two millions of dollars of silver per month.

The law doubtless has some share in producing the existing depression in financial affairs, but it is to be carefully noted that none of this depression was apparent on election day in November, 1892. The country was prosperous; business enterprises were progressing favorably and new fields of production were being constantly opened. The tendency was to enlargement, rather than to the contraction of trade. Following the election of Mr. Cleveland this condition was speedily reversed and the business of the country has been going from bad to worse ever since.

The Silver Purchase law should be repealed, but something more will be necessary to restore confidence and revive trade and production. The Republicans will assist the sound money Democrats in accomplishing the repeal, but the depression will continue unless the Democrats abandon the project of reviving State banks and also their free-trade heresies, and particularly the latter. Protection and honest money will prove the antidote to the political poison that is making the whole commercial body sick and its whole heart faint.

Another Word About the New Windsor Post Office Matter.

A correspondent of the Advocate, writing from New Windsor last week in relation to the publications concerning the removal or resignation of Postmaster Drach, says:

The publication of the letter of resignation and the comment thereon by the editor of the Sentinel, appears to have been illadvised, as it was evidently an attempt to make political capital out of the removal of a veteran. The editor overlooks the fact that all fourth-class commissions distinctly state that the tenure of office depends solely on "the pleasure of Postmaster General of the United States." Instead of denouncing the law under which such commissions are issued, the editor accuses the present P. M. General of especial hostility to all Union veterans, and with tears in his voice exclaims farewell to the last ex-union postmaster in Carroll county!

The SENTINEL did not, as the writer of the aforegoing paragraph seems to suppose, overlook the fact that Postmaster Drach's tenure of office was contingent upon the pleasure of the Postmaster General. That is the fact that gives point to the SENTINEL's criticism of the action of Mr. Maxwell. Mr. Drach is a maimed Union soldier. He was the last of five veterans of the war for the maintenance of the Union who held commissions as fourth-class postmasters in this county. He was not an offensive partisan, although a decided Republican. His deputy during the period he held the office is a Democrat, and the office was conducted on purely business principles and not in the slightest degree in partisan interests. Mr. Drach, it is true, did not seek retention, but Mr. Maxwell was not ignorant of the facts we have recited. The strongest sort of reasons for retaining him must, therefore, have occurred to the Fourth Assistant P. M. General, unless he is especially hostile to the veterans of the war. That this was the animus of his action in naming Mr. Drach's successor can scarcely be doubted. If the fact makes political capital for the Republicans, the fault lies with Mr. Maxwell and with the administration, not with the SENTINEL for making it public.

Anarchist Murderers Pardoned.

Governor Altgeld, of Illinois, who was elected executive of that State in November last as a Democrat, has signalized his administration by pardoning the anarchists, Fielden, Neebe and Schwab, who were convicted of complicity in the Haymarket assassinations seven years ago, and sentenced to State's prison for long terms. It is said the proceeding was accomplished in a very quiet way, about the first intimation the public received of what was impending having been the announcement of the pardons. The message in which the Governor's action is made public is said to be filled with bitter denunciation of the judge who tried the pardoned conspirators. The Governor's action has evoked a storm of protests from all quarters, but he laughs at criticism and says his hide is so thick it could not be cut through with an axe in three weeks. In other words he defies the people. Whether his act indicates sympathy with the opinions and crimes of the anarchists, or is a bid for their votes is not very very clear. The pardoned criminals were proven, at their trial, to have been guilty of complicity in the plot which resulted in the killing of seven and the wounding, more or less seriously, of sixty-five Chicago policemen by a bomb which was thrown among them in Haymarket Square. Several of the conspirators were executed. Every possible legal effort was made in their behalf, the proceedings having been carried from court to court until a decision adverse to the prisoners was reached in the Supreme Court of the United States. Yet this scarcely fledged Democratic Governor turns the vicious and dangerous criminals loose to prey again upon society and defy the law and its guardians.

With his limited opportunities of knowing the facts he denounces the judiciary and defies justice. This Altgeld is a dangerous demagogue, who, before the expiration of his term, may make the people of Illinois bitterly repent the folly which placed him in the executive chair of the State.

Farmers throughout Washington county are engaged in harvesting. The grain stands well for the reaper and cradle and is not lodged.

The Time for Action.

The government of British India, while not absolutely demonetizing silver, has adopted an act confining its coinage to very narrow limits. This action has created something like a panic in the silver market and the price of the white metal has had a heavy decline. The price yesterday was only 62 cents per ounce, making the silver in the American dollar worth only a little more than forty-seven cents. It seems that the effect of this state of things must inevitably result in the repeal of the Sherman Silver Purchase law and the limitation of coinage to the actual necessities of the country, but the silver men are said to be preparing for a desperate battle in behalf of their pet schemes. On the other hand, Boards of Trade and kindred organizations are urging President Cleveland to promptly call an extra session of Congress and recommend proper financial legislation, but he seems to imagine that only dire calamity can impress the representatives of his party with a sense of the necessity of adopting such remedial measures as he may consider imperative. And so his campaign of education goes on, to the manifest injury of the business of the people. The storm of financial disaster is rising, but Capt. Cleveland proposes to leave it break in all its fierce fury before giving the order to shorten sail. The ship will not be stranded, but she may suffer serious damage before September 4th, the date said to be set for the beginning of an extra session of Congress. The time for action is now, and the longer it is delayed the worse will be the consequences.

Farmers were assured by the supporters of Mr. Cleveland, during the campaign of 1892, that the success of the Democratic party meant better prices for their wheat, yet here, after four months of supreme Democratic authority in the legislative and executive departments of the government, wheat reached its lowest price for forty years in the Baltimore markets on Thursday. The quotations were 67⅞ @ 67¼. The quotations on the corresponding date last year were 86¼ @ 86¾, a difference of over 19 cents.

Woman's College of Frederick.

At the special meeting of the Potomac Synod of the Reformed Church of the United States, held in this city several months ago, the establishment of a Woman's College, under the auspices of the Synod, was projected and steps were taken to carry the enterprise into effect. Prompt action followed. A lease was taken of the buildings, grounds, apparatus and school appurtenances of Frederick Female Seminary, at Frederick. A faculty has been selected comprising exceptionally able instructors and every arrangement made to inaugurate the institution under favorable conditions and with promising prospects. There will be two terms, commencing, respectively, September 12th and February 1st. The first will end January 31st and the second June 15th. The accommodations for a large school are ample. There are two large buildings, each fronting 50 feet on Church street, one with a depth of 90 feet, and the other 165 feet. They are connected by a corridor and are three stories high with a fine basement to each. They are of the Ionic order of architecture, and of chaste and imposing appearance. The students, apartments are commodious and there are recitation rooms, laboratory, parlor, reading rooms, studio, gymnasium and dining room of ample proportions and a Collegiate Hall, 70x50 feet. The buildings are located in the centre of the city and on one of its handsomest streets. In fact there seems to be nothing lacking to make this a model college for women and one of the most desirable schools for the instruction and training of young women to be found anywhere in the country. The officers and instructors are as follows:

Joseph H. Apple, A. M., President, Science and Higher Mathematics.
Mary R. Apple, B. E., Vice-President.
Bine Holly, A. M., Higher English and German.
Anna Frohlich, M. E., English Branches and Physical Culture.
Alice B. Joynes, Latin and French.
Marie Diehl, Instrumental Music and Harmony.
Blanche Shriver, Vocal Music and Elocution.
Florence W. Doub, Art Department.
Lucy E. Sweisfort, Kindergarten and English Branches.

Deferred News Items.

The following news items were prepared for last week's edition, but were unavoidably deferred:

The coroner's jury who investigated the disaster in Washington by which so many government clerks were killed and injured, rendered a verdict charging Col. Frederick C. Ainsworth, Wm. G. Covert, Francis Sasse and George W. Dant with criminal negligence. Dant was the contractor for the introduction of the electric light and the others named are officers of the government.

Arthur Courtney and H. Taylor, colored, have been arrested for the murder of Captain Frank Cooper, of Irvington, Va., who was recently killed on board his vessel in the waters of Somerset county, Md. They were captured in Virginia and returned to Maryland under a requisition of the government. They at first confessed, but have since denied their guilt. The murder was a very brutal one and was committed for the purpose of getting possession of a small sum of money. Captain Cooper was but 26 years of age and is said to have been a very fine young fellow.

Fifteen to twenty people were killed and many seriously injured by a terrific cyclone in Jefferson county, Kansas, on Thursday. Not a tree or building was left standing in the track of the storm, which is six miles long and half a mile wide. The bodies of the dead were dreadfully mangled. One young lady was literally beheaded, and the arms of another lady were torn from her body and carried a mile from where her home had been.

A train returning to New York from the races at Sheepshead Bay, on Tuesday, was wrecked in the Parkville tunnel, and seven persons killed and many injured.

The Reunion of the Reformed people of Southern Pennsylvania, Maryland, W. Virginia and Virginia will be held this year at Williams' Grove, Cumberland county, Pa., instead of Pen-Mar. The date named is July 13th.

The price of silver in New York on Thursday was 62 cents per ounce. At this rate some of the daily newspapers estimate the value of the silver contained in a silver coin dollar at 47.9 cents. Others say it is worth fifty-three cents and a fraction. We suppose the first estimate is correct. The silver used in coinage is only 900 fine, while presumably the bullion is pure.

The British battleship Victoria was accidentally rammed by her companion ship the Camperdown, in the Mediterranean, on Friday of last week, and sunk in ten minutes, carrying down about 400 of her officers and crew. Admiral Tryon, the commander of the fleet, was drowned and his body has not been recovered.

The fifteenth annual fair of the Agricultural Society of Baltimore county will be held at Timonium, August 29th, 30th and 31st, and September 1st. The premium list is already out and is very liberal in character.

The tax levy for Frederick county for 1893 has been fixed by the county commissioners at the same rate as last year —62 cents on the $100. The taxable basis of the county is $24,932,000.

The annual meeting of the society of the Army of the Potomac was held in Boston, Mass., on Tuesday. The next meeting will be held in Concord N. H.
