SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1897.

The little kingdom of Greece has displayed great courage in the unequal war with Turkey, but courage does not provide troops and the classic nation lies prostrate at the mercy of the "Unspeakable Turk," unless the stronger powers interfere to protect her, which will probably be done. The war has been like a conflict between a year-old baby and a giant—two millions of people against forty millions. The Greeks, in their chagrin and alarm at their defeat are disposed to overthrow their form of government, banish the king and set up a Republic.

It is remarkable with what unanimity civil service reformers are finding excuses for the deposed Surveyor of Customs at Baltimore, and for the administration which appointed him with the understanding that his principal employment would be to draw a fat salary, while his deputy performed his own work and that of his chief also. The fact that the office was given Col. Schley as a sinecure, to reward party services, cuts no figure with most of these gentlemen, who seem to be horrified if some humble station, with plenty of work and moderate remuneration, is sought by some one in humble life who has labored diligently to promote his party's success. The American people are fond of fair play, and they are growing very tired of seeing prominent, men reap political rewards, while the rank and file are shut out by the civil service rules. If this is to be a "Government of the people, by the people and for the people," it will not do to set up class distinctions.

REMOVAL OF COLONEL SCHLEY.

Col. Buchanan Schley, of Hagerstown, Surveyor of Customs at the port of Baltimore, under President Cleveland's appointment, was removed last Saturday by President McKinley, upon the recommendation of Secretary Gage, of the Treasury Department. The cause of removal was inattention to the duties of the office. Secretary Gage alleges that there was no politics in it. That the removal was made solely upon his recommendation and without the knowledge of Senator Wellington and the Maryland Representatives in Congress.

There is no doubt that since Col. Schley's appointment the duties of the office have devolved principally upon his deputy, Col. Washington Bowie. Col. Schley visited the office once or twice a week only. He has an extensive law practice in Hagerstown, and declined to abandon that or permit it to suffer by neglect. It is due to him to say that he accepted the office of Surveyor with something like an understanding that he would not be required to sacrifice other business interests while holding it. Those who recall the circumstances of his appointment will remember that he distinctly declared he only accepted it for the sake of the salary and would not neglect his law practice to attend to his duties.

Tacitly, therefore, the Cleveland administration consented to that arrangement, and Col. Schley, in discharging his official duties by proxy, was practically carrying out an agreement to that effect. When the administration changed, however, the agreement ended, and it is singular that the Surveyor gave no heed to repeated warnings, and that he did not either voluntarily resign or devote more time to his official obligations. The newspapers generally agree that his summary removal is no reflection upon his character, but the fact remains that he drew for several years, and desired to continue drawing, compensation for services which he never rendered. Possibly that may not be a stigma upon him, but plain people will very much question its propriety, to say nothing of the responsibility of Mr. Cleveland's administration for the existence of such a condition of affairs in an office supposed to be important to the proper transaction of the customs business at Baltimore.

MR. CLEVELAND SPEAKS AGAIN.

Ex-President Cleveland has been heard from again. This time his voice was raised at a dinner given in his honor by the Reform (Democratic) Club in New York, on Saturday last. It is hardly necessary to say that he did not take back anything that he has uttered in the past or make any apology for any of his official acts. Whatever may be said of the Ex-President it cannot be truthfully declared that he has ever displayed a vacillating temper in relation to any policy which he has once adopted. So, now, he takes back nothing of his opposition to a protective tariff and the free coinage of silver.

In this case he opposes the protective policy of the Republican party, but holds, practically, the same views advocated by that party in relation to free coinage. His tariff views are generally shared by Democrats, but his financial views are in sturdy opposition to the element which shaped the party policy on coinage, at Chicago, last year. In other words Mr. Cleveland is still in favor of the gold standard.

His assumption, however, that the Republicans won their victory last year solely on the financial question, is totally inaccurate. The sound money Democratic newspapers which advocated the election of McKinley frequently complained that his speeches were devoted too largely to protective tariff argument. The coinage question was forced into prominence as an issue, to be sure; but the Republican platform declared as decidedly for protection as it did for a sound currency, and the Republicans in Congress are only endeavoring to carry out a fixed and well established principle of the party in their efforts to enact a tariff law based upon the doctrine of protection.

But we think Mr. Cleveland has done wisely in raising anew a warning voice against the dangerous heresy of free coinage and a debauched currency. The Bryan wing of the Democratic party still clings to the idol of free silver and will make it an issue in the congressional elections next year. In fact, while it may not seemingly be a question in the various State and local elections this year, there will not be a ballot cast for any candidate for the legislature of any State in which a United States Senator is to be chosen, which will not have a bearing on the future of this grave and serious matter. Mr. Cleveland knows well that if gold Democrats do not raise the issue in these State elections, that the free silver party may be immensely strengthened by the election of Senators in sympathy with it, from States in which the friends of sound money are vastly in the majority. While he may be properly criticised by Republicans for his declarations in relation to their course on the tariff, we think he deserves credit for his efforts to unite the sound money Democrats in solid array against the most dangerous financial dogma that ever threatened the honor of a great nation.

DEDICATION OF GEN. GRANT'S TOMB.

The magnificent tomb erected as the final receptacle of the remains of the great Hero-President of the United States, in Riverside Park, New York, was dedicated with the most imposing ceremonies ever attending any event in American history, on Tuesday last. The President and members of his Cabinet, Senators and Representatives in Congress, distinguished Foreign Diplomats, Union and Confederate officers of high rank, and thousands of soldiers of the North and South who confronted each other on hundreds of battle fields in the bloody civil strife of a third of a century ago, participated in the wonderful demonstration of honor and affection for the memory of the conqueror in that gigantic war.

The union of every section of the country, in the payment of this tribute to the great soldier, was one of the most appropriate and expressive features of the event. While the war endured no Northern soldier fought with greater energy and determination to restore the authority of the government of the United States over the whole country, and when the arms of the Nation were victorious, under his leadership, none did so much to make a perfectly restored Union possible as did Ulysses S. Grant. His generous terms to Gen Lee and the Army of Virginia, his forbearance in refusing to enter the conquered Confederate Capital and in forbidding the army under his command to celebrate the victory by jubilant demonstrations in the presence of the defeated soldiers of the South, as well as his subsequent protests against the violation of the terms of surrender, by the civil authorities at the instigation of Andrew Johnson, all conspired to further the return of fraternal feeling between the people of the North and South, and the restoration of all the States to their legitimate relations in a permanent and enduring Union.

Incidentally it may be suggested that if Lincoln had lived the greatest statesman and the greatest soldier of the age would have worked in harmony toward the same end and the rehabilitation of the South would have been accomplished in half the time, or probably less than half the time, over which the reconstruction measures were prolonged.

The participation of Southern States and soldiers, therefore, in the dedication of the tomb of the illustrious soldier was not only fitting, but significant of the true character of him whose memory was thus honored.

The procession to the site of the tomb was a magnificent pageant on land and on water, many American and foreign warships moving to the scene on the Hudson, while soldiers and citizens marched to the common centre of attraction on land. The procession was headed by President McKinley, Vice President Hobart, Mayor Strong of New York and General Horace Porter, the orator of the occasion, followed immediately by Mrs. Grant, Col. and Mrs. Frederick D. Grant, Mrs. Sartoris, and other members of the Grant family. Military and Civic Grand Divisions of the parade, the former commanded by Major Gen. G. M. Dodge, and the latter with Col. Charles F. Homer as chief marshal, embraced United States Regular Army and Navy organizations, the National Guard of many States, with the Governors and their staffs; military cadets of many schools, veterans and Grand Army organizations. The Fifth Maryland Regiment was prominent in the military line, as was also the Virginia Provisional Regiment. In the Civic Grand Division were fire organizations, various orders, municipal authorities, clubs, leagues, &c.

The Sons of Confederate Veterans, who were to arrive at the tomb at 9.50 and place a floral wreath, with crossed swords, on the sarcophagus, were an hour late in reaching the scene. They were headed by James R. Branch, commander-in-chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans.

The tokens were reverently laid on the sarcophagus by General J. B. Gordon, while his comrades stood by with uncovered heads.

It is estimated that a million of people gathered on the line of the procession to witness its march to the scene of the dedication.

At the tomb the venerable Bishop John P. Newman, of the M. E. Church, who was Gen. Grant's pastor at Washington, offered a fervid and eloquent prayer which deserves reproduction and is added hereto, as follows:

BISHOP NEWMAN'S PRAYER.

Father Almighty, Maker of heaven and earth, Savior of men, God of all the blessed forevermore, hear us while we pray. Around this new tomb we gather to perform the last funeral rites for one we love, whom a nation honors and a world reveres. We pray not for him, for he is forever free from the repressive burdens, the grave responsibilities, the stern conflicts of this our inconstant life. He shall die no more; he lives with Thee, in the certainties and realities of the better life, sometimes thinking of us and the country he loved so well.

Forever with the Lord, he needs not our prayers to cheer his soul, nor our monuments of stone to perpetuate his memory among the sons of men. Thou hast ordained his place in human history for all time, by the largeness of his soul, the greatness of his mind, the uprightness of his character, by his love of truth, his devotion to our nation's welfare, by the sweet influence he still exercises for peace, justice and liberty, and here, today, we pour forth our libations of gratitude to Thee, O thou God of our fathers, that in our country's danger, when authority was challenged, and judgment imperiled, and freedom threatened, in the supreme hour of doubt and fear thou didst give us this man to defend our rights, to lead our armies to victory, and to administer our government in righteousness and honor. Around his sacred dust we give thee thanks that peace prevails, that those once divided on the field of battle are here united in prayer and praise, under a common flag, the symbol of universal liberty; and here we linger to pray for those he loved, for the precious woman, the wife of his youth, the companion of his manhood, the sharer of his joys and sorrows; that her last days may be full of heavenly rest; that in them thy word may be fulfilled—"Who were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they shall not be divided."

May their children, their children's children live in all virtue, happiness and honor, under thy fatherly care.

May the mantle of our departed chieftain and statesman rest upon him who is today the chief magistrate of our favored republic, that under his wise administration our land may be the home of peace and plenty; may the poor never cry for bread, nor the honest toiler languish in want, nor the virtuous citizen suffer from injustice; may the rich care for the poor, and the poor respect the rich, for thou art the maker of all.

We supplicate Thee, thou Supreme Ruler of the universe, for the welfare of our common country, that our legislators may discern their times, and our judges be worthy the smile of the infinite Judge; may our army be a terror to evildoers, and our navy be the bearer of a message of good-will to all nations; may the governor of this imperial state and the mayor of this great city be under thy divine guidance, to give us a wise and stable administration; and may our nation lead the advance of all peoples, in all that is beneficent in science, useful in art, noble in character, generous in devotion; may prosperity return to our people in the abundance of our fields, the richness of our industries and the wealth of our commerce.

And here, on some sacramental altar, we renew our allegiance to thee, thou God of our fathers; and on this memorable day, by this flowing river, in the presence of this noble monument, expressive of a nation's love and admiration, we pledge ourselves to be true to the cause for which the departed fought, to the Union he preserved, to the institutions he cherished; to love what thou lovest and to hate what thou hatest, until our nation shall be the light of the world, until knowledge, and virtue, and truth, and sobriety, and plenty, and Christianity shall fill our earth with gladness, through Him who taught us to pray:

Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our tresspasses as we forgive them who trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil, for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever. Amen.

President McKinley delivered a brief, but eloquent and appropriate address, which was, in full, as follows:

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY'S ADDRESS.

"FELLOW CITIZENS:—A great life, dedicated to the welfare of the nation, here finds its earthly coronation. Even if this day lacked the impressiveness of ceremony and was devoid of pageantry, it would still be memorable, because it is the anniversary of the most famous and best beloved of American soldiers.

"Architecture has paid high tributes to the leaders of mankind, but never was a memorial more worthily bestowed or more gratefully accepted by a free people than the beautiful structure before which we are gathered.

"In marking the successful completion of this work, we have as witnesses and participants representatives of all branches of our government, the resident officials of foreign nations, the governors of states, and the sovereign people from every section of our common country, who joined in this august tribute to the soldier, patriot and citizen.

"Almost twelve years have passed since the heroic vigil ended and the brave spirit of Ulysses S. Grant fearlessly took its flight. Lincoln and Stanton had preceded him, but of the mighty captains of the war Grant was the first to be called. Sherman and Sheridan survived him, but have since joined him on the other shore.

"The great heroes of the civil strife on land and sea are for the most part now no more. Thomas and Hancock, Logan and McPherson, Farragut, Dupont and Porter, and a host of others have passed forever from human sight. Those remaining grow dearer to us, and from them and the memory of those who have departed generations yet unborn will draw their inspiration and gather strength for patriotic purpose.

"A great life never dies. Great deeds are imperishable; great names immortal. Gen. Grant's services and character will continue undiminished in influence and advance in the estimation of mankind so long as liberty remains the corner-stone of free government and integrity of life the guaranty of good citizenship.

"Faithful and fearless as a volunteer soldier, intrepid and invincible as commander-in-chief of the armies of the Union, calm and confident as president of a reunited and strengthened nation, which his genius had been instrumental in achieving, he has our homage and that of the world; but brilliant as was his public character, we love him all the more for his home life and homely virtues. His individuality, his bearing and speech, his simple ways, had a flavor of rare and unique distinction and his Americanism was so true and uncompromising that his name will stand for all times as the embodiment of liberty, loyalty and national unity.

"Victorious in the work which under Divine Providence he was called upon to do; clothed with almost limitless power; he was yet one of the people—patient, patriotic and just. Success did not disturb the even balance of his mind, while fame was powerless to swerve him from the path of duty. Great as he was in war, he loved peace, and told the world that honorable arbitration of differences was the best hope of civilization.

"With Washington and Lincoln, Grant has an exalted place in history and the affections of the people. To-day his memory is held in equal esteem by those whom he led to victory and by those who accepted his generous terms of peace. The veteran leaders of the Blue and the Gray here meet not only to honor the name of the departed Grant, but to testify to the living reality of a fraternal national spirit which has triumphed over the differences of the past and transcends the limitations of sectional lines. Its completion, which we pray God to speed, will be the nation's greatest glory.

"It is right, then, that Gen. Grant should have a memorial commensurate with his greatness and that his last resting-place should be the city of his choice, to which he was so attached in life and whose ties he was not forgetful even in death. Fitting, too, is it that the great soldier should sleep beside the noble river on whose banks he first learned the art of war and of which he became master and leader without a rival.

"But let us not forget the glorious distinction with which the metropolis among the fair sisterhood of American cities has honored his life and memory. With all that riches and sculpture can do to render the edifice worthy of the man, upon a site unsurpassed for magnificence, has this monument been reared by New York as a perpetual record of his illustrious deeds, in the certainty that as time passes around it will assemble with gratitude and reverence and veneration men of all climes, races and nationalities.

"New York holds in its keeping the precious dust of the silent soldier; but his achievements—what he and his brave comrades wrought for mankind—are in the keeping of seventy millions of American citizens, who will guard the sacred heritage forever and forever."

General Porter's oration was an eloquent review of the character of the hero whose memory was thus honored.

The structure in which the remains of Gen. Grant will rest stands in Riverside Park, a hundred feet above tide water in the Hudson, and its height is 150 feet. It was erected at a cost of $600,000 contributed by 90,000 per ons, the whole sum, except $50,000, having been raised in New York City. By the side of the sarcophagus in which the remains of the dead hero rest, is another, in which the remains of Mrs. Gr nt will be placed after her death.

Miss Florence Mifflin Hood, daughter of General John M. Hood, president of the Western Maryland Railroad, was married on Wednesday, at noon, to Mr. Arthur Warren, of Columbus, O., at the home of the bride's parents, corner of Calvert and Preston streets.

The damage from floods in the lower Mississippi is not yet over, and the people of New Orleans are still alarmed and making energetic efforts for the safety of the city.

The Cottonwood river, a small stream running through Oklahoma, was swollen to the proportions of a mighty rushing river by a cloudburst, on Monday, causing the destruction of much property and the loss of many lives. The stream ordinarily winds its tortuous way between steep banks, and is not more than forty feet wide. It was swollen by previous rains and when the cloudburst occurred rose to the height of about 30 feet above its ordinary level, burst its banks and swept everything before it. The greatest destruction of property and loss of life occurred at West Guthrie, where the stream rose so rapidly that the people were unable to escape to a place of safety. One observer said a solid wall of water, eighteen feet high, rolled down upon them. Hundreds of houses were wrecked and carried away and many farms were completely ruined. It is estimated that over a hundred lives were lost and more than a million of dollars' worth of property destroyed.

Rev. W. C. Wire, pastor of St. John's Lutheran Church, near Littlestown, Pa., while on his way to the parsonage from a meeting of the church council, on Tuesday of last week, was seen to stagger and clutch at the fence along the path, as if stricken with sudden faintness. A moment later he dropped to the ground. He was promptly carried home and a physician summoned, but death had been before the medical man and the spirit of the faithful minister had passed away. Mr. Wire was in his 59th year. His death was caused by disease of the heart. He was in the ministry 35 years.

THE BEST REMEDY FOR RHEUMATISM.

From the Fairhaven (N. Y.) Register.

Mr. James Rowland of this village, states that for twenty-five years his wife has been a sufferer from rheumatism. A few nights ago she was in such pain that she was nearly crazy. She sent Mr. Rowland for the doctor, but he had read of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and instead of going for the physician he went to the store and secured a bottle of it. His wife did not approve of Mr. Rowland's purchase at first, but nevertheless applied the Balm thoroughly and in an hour's time was able to go to sleep. She now applies it whenever she feels an ache or a pain and finds that it always gives relief. He says that no medicine which she had used ever did her as much good. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by Joseph D. Zepp, Druggist, Westminster, and W. R. Rudy, Mt. Airy.

AN OPEN LETTER.

WESTMINSTER, April 10, 1890.

Mr. Jos. B. Boyle:

Dear Sir:—For many years I have suffered intensely, on taking cold, from a very troublesome cough, for which I have used a number of various remedies, and obtained but temporary relief. During the past Spring I was again troubled with the same cough, and through a friend was induced to try your Pectoral Syrup, which not only gave almost instant relief, but a permanent cure. It gives me great pleasure to say that I believe it to be the best remedy I ever used for the purpose for which it is recommended. Hoping that any person afflicted as I was may be fortunate enough to give it a trial, I am,

Truly yours,
EDWARD LYNCH.
