The Arkansas Election--A Federal Election Law Necessary.

Meagre accounts from the election held in Arkansas on Monday indicate that the State, as might have been expected, has gone Democratic by a largely increased majority. The original Mississippi plan, combined with its more recent improvements, has been adopted in Arkansas and practically no election was held, because voters were prevented from exercising a free suffrage by varying degrees of violence, including murder, and by false counting, ballot-box stuffing, and the like. A long and dreary account of these outrages is given in a despatch from Little Rock to the New York Tribune which, if only half true, shows the stern necessity for a federal election law. The Democratic victory in the State is simply a usurpation based upon brute force, violence and crime. In this manner a Democratic majority is to made up in the National House of Representatives and the Republicans of the whole land defrauded. Republicans who deprecate federal interference in the election of Representatives, by perfectly constitutional and legal methods and only for the purposes of insuring a fair ballot and honest return, are driven to feel, in the absence of any other means to correct these wrongs, that it would be a crime to permit the failure of the federal election law now pending in the Senate. No other remedy is offered or suggested for a condition of things that must shock the moral sense of every individual whose perceptions are not blunted or destroyed by unreasoning prejudice. The repeated and persistent violation of the political rights of any class of citizens in a republic must subject that form of government to a fearful strain and, if not corrected, will eventually prove its overthrow. Confronted by a danger of this character and magnitude the country, by its representatives, is wisely seeking a remedy, and one must be found if republican institutions are not to be written down a failure. This assertion may be pessimistic, but it is none the less true.

The Constitution, whether wisely or unwisely, confers the suffrage upon the colored man and counts him in the basis of representation. He is entitled to cast his ballot unhindered and have it "counted as cast." In a large portion of the South he is defrauded of these rights, while being used to increase the representation of those who wrong him. The Arkansas election only furnishes another evidence of this portentous truth. Now, what is to be done? Shall the Nation confess its inability to cope with this question and quietly submit to these outrages without making an effort to prevent them? Who is prepared to give an affirmative answer to the question?

A Remarkable Proceeding.

The Democratic members of the Committee on Elections of the House of Representatives have been guilty of a most remarkable proceeding concerning the minority report in the contested election case of Clayton vs. Breckinridge. This minority report was made about three weeks ago, and bristled all over with denunciations of the majority, whom it charged with "discourtesy, unfairness, neglect of duty, unjustifiable artifices, bad faith, suppression of testimony and connivance at crime." Gross as are these terms there were many other phrases in the report as bad if not worse. The epithets applied to the majority would have made a denizen of Billingsgate green with envy. They were sent out and caught up by the Democratic press with avidity and with apparently no appreciation of their vulgarly abuseful and unparliamentary character. The report, signed by every Democratic member of the committee, was sent in that shape to the government printing office, from which it now returns in mutilated form, having been revised by its authors and the objectionable paragraphs eliminated. This is certainly a remarkable and high handed proceeding and calls for energetic treatment.

It is supposed the document was signed by its ostensible authors without a knowledge of its contents. It bears internal evidence of Mr. Breckinridge's own hand in its preparation. It is said to contain local allusions that could not have been known to the members of the committee and can no where be found in the testimony; and the reasonable inference is that when these facts, and the unwarrantable and vulgar language of the report, became known to the members of the committee they hastened to amend it without asking the consent of the House whose property it had become.

Judge Alvey has filed an opinion in the case of the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal, in the circuit court at Hagerstown, in which he declares his authority to decree the sale of that work. The opinion concludes with this language: "Upon the whole case I am of the opinion that the canal should be sold and that the present proceedings furnish proper foundation for a decree for sale, and I shall therefore pass a decree for the sale of the entire work with all the property and franchise of the company from one terminus of the canal to the other. The decree must provide for payment out of the proceeds of sale of all expenses incurred by the receivers of this court while in charge of the property and which may remain unpaid and for just compensation to them for services performed."

Let It Be Permanent.

Two years ago the great parties of this country met in opposition on well defined theories concerning the great economic question of tariff protection. The Republican party pronounced in favor of the theory in emphatic terms, while the Democrats followed the lead of Mr. Cleveland and declared for "a tariff for revenue only." The Republican doctrine was endorsed by the people and the tariff is about to be revised in accordance with that theory. After exhaustive inquiry duties will be imposed where they will best afford the protection needed to foster American interests. In this respect the McKinley bill is as well nigh perfect as a law embodying the principle of protection could be. Of course it probably has some defects; what work of human judgment has not? It may be, too, that in practice some of its provisions may not be found as beneficent and valuable as anticipated. But whatever its defects may be it is, as a whole, what the people voted for and what they want. Its maintenance will bring prosperity. It is admitted by business men that a settled policy on this great question will be conducive to the advancement of trade, even though it be not the best measure that could be devised or the best policy that could be adopted. Stability of plan, purpose and enactment in this matter are not only desirable but essential to the general welfare. Capital and enterprise are naturally careful and cautious and will not be ventured under uncertain conditions. With the McKinley tariff bill on the statute books, and the assurance that it is there to stay, enterprise will reach out into new fields of production and capital will join hands with it in their development. If the people want the benefit of this stability they must turn down by their ballots the tariff reform tinners who seem determined to keep up a perpetual agitation of this complicated and difficult question. Even a poor tariff law, with something of stability in its tenure, would be better than the uncertain promise of a good one, so far as the general trade of the country is concerned. But the beneficial effects of the protective system are too patent to be decried, and, as embodied in the McKinley bill, as it is about to be adopted, will be a grand stimulus to American enterprise and the development of American resources. There is no danger that agitation for its repeal can accomplish anything in half a decade, but such attempts will be, in some degree, a hindrance and obstruction to the full benefits that would otherwise flow from its enactment. Let us have tariff stability.

Democratic Tariff Reform Picnic.

The Democratic Tariff Reform Club, of Uniontown, is exceedingly anxious to have a large attendance of Republicans at its basket picnic, to be held in Mr. Edward Gilbert's grove, near Uniontown, to-day, and promises speeches by Congressmen Breckinridge, of Kentucky, and Wilson, of West Virginia, Hons. Chas. B. Roberts, Frank T. Shaw, and David N. Henning, Esq., of this city, as inducements. The cause of this anxiety is probably two-fold—the necessity of Republican attendance to give large proportions to the crowd and the hope that some of them may be favorably impressed with the arguments for tariff reform, or free-trade. Intelligent Republicans are not likely to permit exparte arguments to influence their well-formed and well-grounded opinions on this great economic question. To magnify defects in the protective system and exaggerate its burdens, on one hand, and glorify the theories of free-trade on the other, will be the business of this festive occasion, and Republicans can well estimate the value of these one-sided harangues.

This basket picnic arrangement is a skillful plan to entice Republicans to listen to free-trade theories without fear of controversy. The scheme is a shrewd one, but is not likely to have a widespread or extensive influence and need not be regarded with much apprehension by the Republicans.

The consideration by Congress of a proposition looking to the removal of Gen. Grant's remains from Riverside Park, New York, to the National Cemetery at Arlington, near Washington, has spurred the monument committee in the former city to renewed activity, and there is a probability that the work will be speedily commenced. New Yorkers are flattering themselves that this is out of respect to the memory of Gen. Grant, but it is hardly uncharitable to suppose that this new born zeal to honor the memory of the great warrior is largely mixed with local pride. Whatever the cause, however, a design for the monument is about to be selected and efforts made to increase the fund, which now amounts to about $150,000.

It is a common assertion that there are no tin mines in the United States worth developing, yet the census statistics show that the total production of pig tin in the country for the year ending June 30, 1890, was 8,523,374 tons of 2240 pounds. The product for the first six months of 1890 was 4,610,335 tons, show a gratifying increase. With all the material for making tin plate at hand why should not the industry be developed and the $33,000,000 now paid annually to England for the commodity be kept at home and paid to American producers and workmen?

In Arkansas the recent election contest was between the Union Labor party, supported by the Republicans, and the Democratic party; but Union Labor people received no greater courtesy at the hands of their opponents than the Republicans have done. Their speakers were mobbed, their tickets destroyed and their voters assaulted. In face of this the Democratic party still poses as the special friend of the laboring man.

Republican Congressional conventions were held in the First, Third and Fourth Districts of Maryland on Thursday. In the First District Col. George M. Russum, of Caroline county, was nominated on the fourth ballot. Rev. Dr. Royal H. Pullman, a brother of George M. Pullman, of palace car fame, was nominated in the Third District, and Hon. Henry H. Goldsborough in the Fourth.

The election in Vermont on Tuesday was carried by the Republicans by about 17,000, the smallest majority for a number of years. The full Democratic vote was out, but the Republican candidate for Governor is a very unpopular man and obtained his nomination by practices not consistent with the Vermont Republicans' idea of propriety, and many of them absented themselves from the polls.

The House of Representatives has passed a bill to set apart, as a public park, the tract of land in Tulare county, Cal., containing the big trees about which so much has been written and which are among the wonders of the world. The action of the House is timely and should be promptly concurred in by the Senate. By all means let this wonderful forest be preserved from spoliation by the money-grabbers.

On the 1st instant the Mail Publishing Company of Hagerstown began the publication of a daily afternoon edition of that paper. It is, as is the weekly Mail, Democratic in politics, outside of which it will commend itself to the community in which it is issued by its ample and well arranged local and general news. It is neatly printed and attractive in appearance, and will doubtless command a good home support.

A new steamship line between Italy and England has just been established with a subsidy of seventy thousand dollas per annum from the Italian government. European nations are applying this method of protection to their ocean carriers, while America still hesitates to adopt a policy that could hardly fail to restore, to a large extent, her ruined mercantile marine, and give remunerative employment to thousands of our own citizens. The House should pass the Senate subsidy bills without delay.

An inspector of the postoffice department has been looking after a steamboat mail route on the Yazoo river. The company carrying the mail receives $2,400 for the service. The inspector says there is not a single office on the route dependent upon it for mail facilities. The average mail carried by the route is three pieces each way per week, making the magnificent revenue of something like six dollars per annum. With an ocean subsidy at that rate the United States would soon have the grandest mercantile marine on the face of the globe.

Mr. Thomas E. Mittag, for many years a member of the firm of Mittag & Sneary, former proprietors of the Hagerstown Herald and Torch Light, died suddenly, in Hagerstown, on Monday afternoon last, at the age of 78 years.

Reception to Miss Mary B. Shellman.

The Worcester (Mass.) Daily Telegram of August 21st contains the following interesting account of a reception given Miss Mary B. Shellman, of this city, during her recent visit to Massachusetts, by Capt. John W. Hadley, of Worcester:

Captain John W. Hadley, assisted by members of the glorious old 6th Massachusetts volunteers, gave a reception last night at his house, 21 Florence street, to Miss Mary Bostwic Shellman, of Westminster, Maryland.

Although Miss Shellman was only a little girl of seven or eight at the time of the war, she was unionist to the backbone. Loyalty to the Union was imbued in her as a girl, and away down in the sunny South she remained firm and true to the principle that to-day she adorns as a woman. The lady's interest in the 6th Massachusetts regiment has extended over a quarter of a century. Ever since that memorable march through Baltimore, which was within 30 miles of Miss Shellman's home, the lady has had the old 6th very near to her heart.

At the time of the Gettysburg battle, when Stewart's cavalry marched through Westminster, Miss Shellman, then an interesting little maid of eight, was playing on the street with three or four of her girlish companions. Booted, spurred and sabred, the heavy cavalry rattled through the street. The rebel general's attention was attracted by the beauty of the little girl and as his troops rode onward he picked her up and deposited her in front of him on his horse. Then he attempted to kiss her. But the staunch little loyalist was determined that no rebel lips should be pressed to hers, and she struggled bravely to get free. Stewart was too much for her, however. He kissed her, and then he placed her on the ground again. Her companions were mighty indignant at the whole proceeding. They thought it very scurvy on the part of a rebel soldier to pick out the only unionist in the group for such a tender salute.

HELPING THE FIGHT.

Miss Shellman did not buckle on a saber nor handle a gun, but she nevertheless assisted the loyal north in its struggle against the South. The lady came to this part of the country to attend the recent Grand Army encampment in Boston. At the camp fire last week she met Vermont soldiers who, in the course of their reminiscences of the war, chanced to mention that they were in the old 6th corps at the battle of Gettysburg. They went on to relate to Miss Shellman an unusual instance of hospitality to loyal soldiers from the South. As they were passing through Westminster, they came across a heavily laden table outside of a house. It fairly groaned under its load of fresh milk and provisions. As the Vermont soldiers passed by, two little girls invited them to partake. The men were hungry and ready, and they set-to. They told Miss Shellman as they concluded their recital, that they had never enjoyed such a meal in their lives before. Miss Shellman then modestly informed the two veterans that she was one of the little girls who handed them the cup of milk and the loaf of bread on the streets of Westminster, 25 years ago.

THE OLD FLAG RAISED.

This was the lady whom Capt. Hadley and the old 6th met to do honor to last night. She is a very interesting woman, with a highly intelligent face. She makes no boast of her loyalty to the North at a time and in a country where loyalty meant persecution and very often death. She is modest, and retiring, and above all she has that sweet, low voice, which, as Shakespeare says, is such an excellent thing in woman. Capt. John threw out the old flag from his doorway last night, in honor of the adopted daughter of the old 6th Regiment association, an honor which has been bestowed on her by the regiment. By a vote of the association she has also been elected an honorary member of the association and last night wore the badge of membership upon her breast. Inside the house the stars and stripes were displayed in every room. There was in the house. They included J. M. Dyson, president of the 6th Regiment association, and wife, Charles Whipple, from Toledo, O., J. Stewart Brown, George A. Reid and wife, of Saxonville, Thomas Talbot, Amos Parker and wife, Wallace Woodward and wife, Charles Simmons and wife, William L. Robinson and wife, Fred. Briggs and wife, George Mills and wife, Mrs. B. F. Clough, president of the Woman's Relief corps, Mrs. M. R. Allen, secretary of the Woman's Relief corps, J. H. Brewer and wife, Miss Nellie Munroe and Miss Annie Hadley.

A MERRY AND INTERESTING GATHERING

The guests began to arrive about 8 o'clock, and were received by Captain and Mrs. Hadley. An elegant refection was served at 9 o'clock, after which Captain Hadley stepped into the parlor, called Miss Shellman to the front and as follows: "Ladies and gentlemen, ladies of the Women's Relief corps, comrades—I have been called upon unexpectedly to-night to take the place of a man who, although he was brave at the front, has shown himself a coward to-night. I will not keep you waiting, and I am not going to make a speech because I am hungry. I have simply to ask Miss Shellman to accept these flowers on behalf of J. Stewart Brown. He was brave enough at the cannon's mouth, but he isn't brave enough to face a woman. I am. I could hug them." (Laughter and applause.)

Captain Hadley then handed to Miss Shellman a magnificent bouquet of flowers. She modestly returned thanks, and then a couple of hours of music followed. The gift of flowers was very appropriate inasmuch as Miss Shellman has made it her invariable practice at every reunion of the 6th Regiment association to send a congratulatory letter and a basket of flowers.

FARMERS, if you wish to save money buy the best Fertilizer for the least money. This has been demonstrated time and again by the goods furnished by our Company. We use only pure chemicals, the best of the kind to be had on the market, and what you contract for you can with confidence and a guarantee rely upon getting. Our $18 to $20 goods have been tried side by side with other brands that cost from $23 to $25, and in no instance failed to equal in producing power, and in some instances our goods have been superior. We do not say that we can buy goods any cheaper than other houses, but we can and do buy them as cheaply. Another thing, we buy all pure goods, and purchasers need have no apprehension of getting inferior material at the same price charged for good goods.

WE CHALLENGE THE COUNTY

to find anything in our factory that is not pure. Our No. 1 and 2 Brands are the same standard as heretofore, and for wheat and grass have no superior. We cordially invite the farmer to give us a call before purchasing elsewhere. Any information relative to the best and cheapest methods in the application of Fertilizers will be cheerfully given if desired. As we have heretofore said our establishment is headquarters on formulas, whether our own or those of others, when pure and unadulterated goods are used. The ammonia in our goods is derived from animal matter exclusively, and our phosphoric acid is from dissolved bone, bone ash and high grade acid phosphate, precisely the same goods as used by members of the Company. By bringing your sacks with you you can save $1 on each ton of goods. Two per cent. is deducted for cash. Company's office at Roop & Zile's seed store, 24 W. Main St., Westminster.
