SPAIN WILL ACCEPT.

It is announced from Washington that Spain has indicated, through M. Cambon, the French Ambassador to this country, her acceptance of the terms of peace submitted by this government, with some slight modification in minor details. These terms are substantially as stated last week. Spain is to evacuate all her possessions in the West Indies and cede, to the United States, Porto Rico and all the small islands over which she has heretofore exercised sovereignty in that quarter. Cuba is to be made independent, but will remain under American supervision until stable, self-governing authority shall have been established. The United States will assume responsibility for claims of her citizens against Spain in connection with Cuba and will look to the Cuban government, when properly established, to meet these claims in whole or in part. Other indebtedness of Spain, on account of the islands evacuated, will not be assumed by this government. No money indemnity is demanded.

A coaling station is to be ceded to the United States in the Ladrone Islands and also in the Philippines, with sufficient surrounding territory to make them available. The city of Manila, and probably the entire island upon which it is situated may be demanded for that purpose in the Philippines. Further disposition of the Philippines will be submitted to a joint commission composed of Americans and Spaniards. Spain is anxious to maintain her sovereignty over the islands, and will probably be willing to make large concessions to gain that end. The extent to which this country is committed to the cause of the insurgents will be an important factor in determining the disposition to be made of this oriental group. Leading American newspapers, among which the New York Tribune may be accorded the first place, take the ground that our relations to the insurgents are of a nature which precludes the consideration of any proposition for their abandonment. This appears to us a mere postulate. The proof is on the other side. If the United States withdrew entirely from the Philippines the insurgents would still be in better form for the prosecution of their revolt against Spanish dominion, than if Dewey had not wiped out the Spanish fleet at Manila. But the United States has no intention of retiring entirely from that field, hence, it is argued, it would be an act of bad faith towards the insurgents on our part to treat with Spain for the disposition of the islands without consulting Aguinaldo, the insurgent leader, and his advisers.

If this country formed any compact with Aguinaldo it has not been made public. If such an agreement ever existed, however, it has been violated by the party of the other part. Aguinaldo has assumed the dictatorship of the Philippines and poses before the world in that attitude. It would be utterly preposterous to suppose that this country was ever a party to any compact, contract, agreement or understanding of this character. This insurgent leader has declared himself and his people independent, not only of Spain, but of the United States also. He has been perfectly willing to accept the aid brought to his cause by the war between Spain and the United States, but in his assumption of a dictatorship has shown hostility to both the belligerents. The fact of this assumption has been so persistently reiterated that it can scarcely be doubted, although it may not have been the result of German intrigue, as has also been asserted. But, however or by whomever instigated, it has relieved this government from any obligation to insist upon Philippine independence and has left us free to take and hold the archipelago, or any part of it, if we so elect, as a possession of the United States.

Whether the latter would be advisable, either for commercial or other reasons, is a problem not easily solved. Its discussion here would occupy more time and larger space than we can give it. There are some considerations which make it the imperative duty of the United States to maintain a foothold in the conquered territory. Reforms are called for which could probably be accomplished by the permanent maintenance of such a just form of government as the United States would give at Manila, if that place and adjacent territory should be held permanently.

The administration of President McKinley, which has thus far proved equal to the demands and exigencies of the conflict with Spain, may, we think, be fairly trusted to deal with the problems which confront it in concluding an honorable and just peace. It must not forget, however, that it has to do, in this business, with a vacillating, procrastinating and scheming nation. Spain, if the movement for peace shall result in an armistice, will probably take advantage of the situation to defer final action and will seek to postpone a settlement as long as possible. She must be made to understand that no child's play will be allowed in the consideration of the questions to be determined by a peace convention between the two nations.

War and Peace Notes.

Gen. Miles is being heavily reinforced for the Porto Rico campaign.

Yellow fever and other diseases are prevalent among the soldiers at Santiago, and the removal of a large part of the force to a healthier locality has become necessary.

The evacuation of Cuba and Porto Rico and one of the Ladrone Islands by the Spaniards is demanded by the United States as a condition precedent to peace negotiations.

For the SENTINEL.

CARROLL COUNTY AND THE NOMINATION.

MR. EDITOR:—Your kindness in according space for my article in last week's SENTINEL, prompts me to ask a like favor in this space for a last word touching congressional matters.

Harford county has taken time by the forelock; held its convention, and named a delegation pledged to the renomination of Hon. Wm. B. Baker. Both Harford and Cecil counties have been accorded presidential appointments, of course through Mr. Baker's influence, and upon the policy of "You tickle me and I'll tickle you" Cecil will join Harford in supporting his renomination, thus giving the latter county the nomination for eight years in succession.

The situation in the district, to a disinterested on looker, appears to be, that Baltimore county, with Carroll and certain wards of Baltimore city, are expected to send delegates who will merely be called upon to go through the form of ratifying the compact made between Harford and Cecil.

When this unselfish result is brought about and patriotic resolutions are passed and backed up with fervid eloquence, extolling the brave soldiers and sailors now upholding our starry banner in foreign lands, with a little soft solder spread on the old veterans whose bravery made it possible for Old Glory to wave over a nation strong enough to plant it in two hemispheres, the convention will adjourn with a solemn admonition to every Republican to go to work with a hearty good will, take off coats, if need be to roll up sleeves, and fuss and shout lustily for the success of our nominee.

This is what every Republican in Carroll will be expected to do; it is what we have been doing for lo these many years, and, judging from the past, are likely to do again, even though we are rewarded with studied neglect. But before the coats come off, before our sleeves are rolled up, and before we begin the shouting, let us ask ourselves why we should glory in our continued isolation and humiliation. Are the Republicans of Carroll so worthless as only to deserve kicks and cuffs from the rest of the district? Are we in wealth and intelligence so far behind them as in their estimation to debar and prevent us from receiving political preferment at their hands or from a Republican administration? It is no vain boast to affirm that there are many men in Carroll who would and could represent the district as creditably as Mr. Baker has done in the past or can do in the future. If this is so, and who will doubt it, why not determine to send a delegation in behalf of a county man instructed and solemnly pledged to go to the convention and insist that this is our time to be accorded the nominee and demand favorable consideration of the claim as a matter of justice.

Having no political aspirations and no desire to hold public position, I can consider our rights in this matter absolutely free from personal aims. But as one of the old guard of the party, who for love of its principles has stood up in Carroll since the war, and in the face of continued defeats fought in my humble way to maintain our organization, I am not willing after all these years of effort to longer stand by and see the county contemptuously passed by and ignored in behalf of others, not one whit our superiors if they be our equals. I stand first last and all the time for a county man.

CARROLL COUNTY.

Stevenson Archer, whose sad fall from an honorable place in life by his defalcation when treasurer of this State, is fully known to the public, died at the Baltimore City Hospital at half-past five o'clock, Tuesday afternoon. He was about seventy years old. Mr. Archer was a leading Democratic politician and was twice elected to Congress from the Second district of this State. He afterwards became State treasurer and while in that office made use of $125,000 to $135,000 of the State's money for other than public uses. He was indicted, tried, found guilty and sentenced to the penitentiary in 1890, for five years, and served about four years of the time. His health failed and on that account Gov. Brown granted him a pardon. After his release he spent most of the time at the hospital, gradually growing worse until his death. Less than one-half the amount of the defalcation was recovered by the State from his bondsmen.

Winnie Lillis, aged eight years, her mother, Mrs. Johanna Lillis and Mrs. Bessie Wheltle, who resided at 211 Siemmer's alley, Baltimore, were assaulted about dawn on Tuesday morning by an unknown man, with an axe. The child's skull was crushed, causing her speedy death. Mrs. Lillis' nose was broken and part of the bone driven into her brain. Her injuries are of a dangerous character. Mrs. Wheltle's left jawbone was broken and cheek lacerated. Mrs. Lillis is a widow and supported herself and child by making overalls, at which she worked incessantly. Mrs. Wheltle was married, but is seperated from her husband. Parties who saw the perpetuator of the crime escape from the house and gave unavailing chase after him, allege that he is a colored man, but a different opinion is entertained by the police. Several arrests have been made.

A swindler is going through York county, Pa., pretending to buy up horses for the United States Government. He gives a check greater than the price of the horse and receives the difference in cash from the seller.

Good Roads Meeting.

MR. EDITOR:

The mneting in the interest of good roads, held at Fork, in Baltimore county, on Saturday last, was not very well attended by residents outside of Baltimore county, considering that the day had been set apart as "State Day," and that the call for the meeting had been extensively circulated. The absence of the members of the L. A. W., who have heretofore shown great interest in the good roads movement, was a disappointment to the promoters of the meeting. In view of the small representation from Carroll county and of the great importance of the subject of road improvement, the writer, with your permission, will give your readers a brief account of the meeting.

The time before noon was devoted to the inspection of half a mile of sample road being constructed near Fork by the County Commissioners, under the personal supervision of Mr. E. G. Harrison, a road expert sent out by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The appliances necessary to build the road according to the latest improved methods were furnished by the county and consist of a twelve-ton steam roller, a No. 3 stone crusher, several carts and a sprinkling wagon. The old road was one of the worst public highways in the State, being filled with boulders of trap rock, or "nigger heads," partly imbedded in the ground. The largest of these were blown out with dynamite, the holes filled in with dirt from the side ditches and the surface rolled until it became hard and smooth and of the same shape and slope as the road was to be when finished. It is an absolute waste, says Mr. Harrison, to put stones into a mud hole or on a foundation that is not hard and dry. A bed free from stones to begin on is better than one like the above.

The stones from the crusher are sorted by a revolving screen into three sizes, the largest being from two to three inches thick, the next smaller about half as large and the finest contained no pieces larger than a small marble. The most ingenious and greatest labor saving machine of the outfit is one of the carts for distributing stones on the road. The cart holds 2¼ tons of stone and the contents can be spread uniformily to any desired thickness in less than one-half a minute.

In constructing the stone part of the road, a layer of five inches of the largest stones was spread. After being rolled several times a small amount of dirt was thrown on the stones, the water sprinkler was applied and the whole then rolled again. Mr. Harrison explained that dirt should under no circumstances be used on any but the bottom layer and not then if a sufficient quantity of fine stone screenings could be procured. The first layer packs down to four inches. A second layer of the next smaller stone, not so deep by an inch as the first, is put on and rolled as before. The coating of the pulverized stone to a depth of one inch is then applied which is rolled at times every day for more than a week, the sprinkler being used more or less, according to the weather, which causes the material to pack and cement together. The finished road presents a smooth surface, as hard almost as cement, yet slightly elastic and perfectly water tight.

The cost of crushing the stone, which are of the hardest variety in the county, is 25 cents per perch. By using a larger crusher the cost could be reduced to 20 cents and for limestone the cost should be still less. Mr. Harrison said that the sample road should not be taken as a criterion as to cost, as an unusually large amount had to be expended in repairing the road bed. He said that he had built stone roads like the above for $1100 per mile, but that the conditions were then more favorable than in the vicinity of Fork.

Adjoining the sample road is a long stretch of stone road built by the road supervisor according to the methods generally in vogue in the county. Some of the defects of this part of the road, which were pointed out by the road expert, are the following: The stones had been put on all rolled all in one layer and the roller in places had pushed them before it into ridges. More than five inches cannot be rolled well at one time. Not having been sorted, the stones did not pack compactly. The clay which had been thrown on top of the road will collect water and in the spring will cause the road to thaw and become soft.

In the afternoon interesting addresses were made by Congressman Baker, Dr. H. F. Reid and Mr. Harrison. Dr. Reid is chief of the highway division of the State Geological Survey, which is making a thorough examination of the available road materials of the State and their relative value and cost for purposes of road-making. He exhibited a map which showed the location of good road material known at present. Carroll county is fortunate in having two of the best varieties for road construction, within its borders. Mr. Harrison illustrated the money value of good roads to the farmer. The practices of setting the fences out on the road property and of allowing the hedges to grow up were condemned. He also said that the method of awarding the construction of the road to the lowest responsible bidder is the most economical way of building roads, and then he emphasized the importance of removing the roads entirely from politics he was loudly applauded. The funds for building stone roads, he explained, could best be provided by the sale of bonds, this being the method that has been adopted largely by States which are most successfully improving their roads.

The meeting was under the auspices of the Fork Improvement Association, the members of which went to considerable expense and trouble to make the occasion a success.

When we consider the wonderful improvements that have been made in the methods of constructing stone roads within the past ten years and then observe the tenacity with which we cling to the methods of our grandfathers the outlook for road improvement in Carroll county is not very encouraging.
