Taxation of Personal Property.

The statement made in the communication signed "On Wheels," in last week's SENTINEL, to the effect that under "doomage" laws put in force in New Hampshire, Vermont and Pennsylvania, between 1880 and 1890, the increase of personal property available for taxation was 203 to 288 per cent. during the decade, presents a series of interesting facts for the consideration and action of the tax-payers of this county and State. It is commonly asserted and generally believed that a large amount of personal property, especially in Baltimore, escapes assessment and taxation in consequence of the defective character of the tax laws of this State. The Declaration of Rights asserts that "every person in the State, or person holding property therein ought to contribute his proportion of public taxes for the support of the government, according to his actual worth in real or personal property;" but the assessment laws have been so framed that the provision is a "dead letter."

The Hayes bill, passed by the last Legislature, provided methods of reaching the character of property now largely exempt through evasion, but it was vetoed by Governor Brown because of its inquisitorial character. The Governor's Conference, to devise a measure that will meet his approval, will, it is presumed, soon be held, but the probability is that it will be largely constituted of citizens interested in keeping up the prevalent violation of the principle recognized as just by the Bill of Rights. It may be that the measure which shall come from the conference will be satisfactory to its projectors, but, unless it shall provide relief from existing injustice, should not be accepted by the Legislature. The fact is that the assemblage of a body of private citizens at the request of the Governor, to formulate legislation, is an extraordinary proceeding and inconsistent with the character of the State government. The law-making power is vested in the Legislature, with limited authority to veto lodged in the Governor. It is not his province to concoct laws nor to invite other unauthorized citizens to do so.

But this is a digression. Our purpose is to call attention to the facts referred to by our correspondent, as an incentive to the people of Maryland to put similar methods in operation here. The "doomage" laws referred to should be obtained by possible and prospective legislators and studied in detail. Inquiries should be made of the authorities, in the States named, charged with the enforcement of the laws, as to the methods employed and the manner in which practical effect is given to the legislation referred to. Much can be learned in this way that would be of value in the preparation and passage of a new assessment law in this State.

And finally, the people should see to it that capable and honest representatives be selected to carry their views into effect and to give them the force of law. The remedy for past neglect to provide a proper assessment law is with themselves. They will never realize it by delegating their power to party bosses.

A Revolution in Hawaii.

The monarchy in Hawaii, the principal of the Sandwich Islands, has been overthrown and a Provisional Government established. The event occurred January 15th, and the revolution was bloodless. Queen Lilliuokalani announced her intention to promulgate a new constitution, the terms of which have not transpired, but, it is supposed, were more arbitrary and despotic than the then existing organic law. There are many foreigners in Hawaii, with extensive business interests, Americans largely predominating, and it appears that the native government was quietly set aside, the queen deposed and the Provisional Government inaugurated by the latter. S. B. Dole, son of one of the American missionaries to Hawaii, was made Provisional President. He is a man of acknowleged ability, an associate justice of the supreme court of Hawaii, and a graduate of Williams College.

Three hundred marines were landed from the United States steamship Boston, which, it appears, had been sent to Honolulu in anticipation of trouble with the native government, for the purpose of preserving order. The queen, it appears, quietly retired to her country residence and her soldiers promptly accepted the new order of things and submitted to the Provisional Government.

The most interesting feature of the proceeding, so far as this country is concerned, was the immediate appointment of a commission instructed to proceed to Washington and negotiate a treaty of annexation with the United States. This commission, headed by Mr. Thurston, or Thornton, reached San Francisco on Saturday, bringing the information briefly outlined here. The commissioners at once proceeded on their journey to Washington and were expected to reach there yesterday. Pending their arrival the subject is being considered by the government and Senator Chandler has introduced a bill in the Senate, providing for annexation. The sentiment in both Houses of Congress is said to be strongly in favor or that course, while, for the present, the Administration favors a protectorate.

The English press denounces the proceeding and declares that that country will resist the annexation project. As American interests in the Island, however, are paramount, it may be regarded as certain that this nation will see that they are thoroughly protected, even to the extent of annexation, if necessary.

The Commissioners appointed by the City of Baltimore to examine into the condition of the Western Maryland Railroad, accompanied by President Hood and other officials of the road, have been going over the lines, and, it is said, are pleased with the results of the inspection, having found the physical condition of the road in a very encouraging state.

By the death of James G. Blaine this country loses its ablest statesman. He was not only brilliant but profound. His genius in statecraft was transcendent and no man is left in this land who measures up to his standard. As a parliamentarian he was unequalled, as a premier without a peer, and as a patriot without a superior. Mr. Blaine was not a politician in the ordinary sense of the word, and was unskilled in the wiles and artifices by which many another man of less ability has attained to high political distinction. Ambitious he was, without doubt, to reach the highest station in the gift of the American people, but he was incapable of plotting to attain it. His political opinions amounted to conviction and he maintained them with a directness and force which could not be withstood. He served his country well and probably sacrificed years of life in doing it. He had relentless foes, but, if that be possible, more devoted friends. His death leaves a void not easily filled and impresses the Nation which he loved so well with profound sorrow.

Mr. Cleveland, it is said, has sent Mr. Don M. Dickinson as a special messenger to the Democratic Senators and Representatives at Washington, to notify them that unless the Sherman silver act is repealed before March 4th, a special session will be called within thirty days after his inauguration. The probability now is that, whatever may be done in the House, the bill to repeal cannot pass the Senate, and the problem will be left for the Democrats to wrestle with after they shall have come into full possession of the executive and legislative departments of the goverment. It is not surprising that Mr. Cleveland desires its settlement before the beginning of his administration.

President Harrison took his party and the country by surprise, on Thursday, by appointing Judge Howell E. Jackson, of Tennessee, Associate Justice of the Supreme Conrt as the successor of Judge Lamar. Judge Jackson is a Democrat. He is said to be possessed of high legal attainments, and is said by Representative Houk, of Tennessee, to be a thorough disciple of the doctrine of States' rights. He is an Ex-United States Senator and his appointement will probably be confirmed.

John C. Hodja murdered his two little sons, Joseph and Charles, aged respectively 3 and 4 years, at his home No. 2333, East North avenue, Baltimore, on Monday morning. A third child was uninjured. The presumption is that Hodja is insane. He was a Bohemian and was educated for the priesthood of the Catholic Church. He was pastor of St. Wenceslaus Church, Central avenue, Baltimore, about 14 years ago, but renounced the priesthood to marry a lady to whom he had become attached while studying at Prague. After his marriage he became a member of Trinity Lutheran Church, Baltimore. His wife and their four children died and five years ago he married again and the children slain were by this marriage. He is held for the action of the court, but it seems impossible to imagine that a crime so unnatural could have been committed by other than a maniac.

The Island of Zante, one of the Ionian group, in the Mediterranean and belonging to Greece, was terribly shaken up by an earthquake, on Tuesday morning. Many buildings in the town of Zante were wrecked, including a prison and a hospital, and numbers of persons were killed, while others are more or less injured. The volcano of Stromboli, on the Island of Stromboli, in the Mediterranean, off the north coast of Sicily, is in violent eruption and the island was badly shaken by an earthquake on Tuesday.

September 12th has been selected as Maryland day at the Columbian World's Fair.

DEATH OF MR. BLAINE.

As briefly announced in the SENTINEL last week, Hon. James G. Blaine died at his residence in Washington, D. C., at 11 o'clock, Friday, 27th ult. The history of the great statesman is familiar to most Americans. He was born January 31st, 1830, at West Brownsville, Pa., in a house built by his great-grand-father before the War of the Revolution, which still stands. The Gillespies and Blaines were people of standing before the Revolution. Colonel Blaine, who was commissary general of the Northern Department of Washington's army during the Revolution, was James G. Blaine's great-grandfather. When eleven years old, he went to live with his uncle, Thomas Ewing, in Ohio, where his mother's father, Neal Gillespie, an accomplished scholar, directed his studies. Later he attended Washington College, at Washington, Penn., graduating at the age of seventeen.

After leaving college he taught school at Blue Lick Springs, Ky. It was as a professor in the military school there that he made the acquaintance of the lady—Miss Stanwood, a school teacher from Maine—who afterward became his wife. Later he went to Philadelphia, where he taught school and studied law. But after two years he abandoned law studies, went to Maine, and became proprieter and editor of the Kennebec Journal.

At the birth of the Republican party he was a delegate to the Philadelphia Convention in 1856, which nominated Fremont. After serving as Speaker of the Maine Legislature, he was sent to Congress and began his National career in 1862, at the outbreak of the war. He was elected Speaker of the house in 1869 and was re-elected in the Forty-second and Forty-third Congresses.

Mr. Blaine's administration of the Speakership is commonly regarded as one of the most brilliant and successful in the annals of the House. He had rare aptitude and equipment for the duties of presiding officer, and his complete mastery of parliamentary law, and his dexterity physical endurance, his rapid dispatch of business, and his firm and impartial spirit were recognized on all sides.

In 1875 Mr. Blaine was appointed to the Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Senator Morrill, and the next winter was elected by the Legislature to the succeeding term. His career in the Senate was both brilliant and distinguished, as it had been in the House. He was called from the Senate to enter President Garfield's Cabinet as Secretary of State in 1881. It was while passing through the railroad depot leaning on Mr. Blaine's arm and pleasantly chatting with him about his coming holiday that Garfield received the assassin's fatal bullet. The death of Mr. Garfield led to Mr. Blaine's retirement from the Cabinet, in December 1881. From that date until he entered Mr. Harrison's Cabinet as Secretary of State, he was in private life, except during his campaign for the Presidency in 1884.

During his retirement Mr. Blaine wrote his "Twenty Years of Congress," a work of great historical value. It was in accordance with his original suggestion and due to his earnest efforts that provision was made in the McKinley bill for the reciprocity treaties which formed such prominent features of National policy. The Samoan difficulties, the complication arising out of the lynching of Italians at New Orleans, and the killing of American seamen at Valparaiso were also disposed of while Mr. Blaine was at the head of the State Department, and it was largely through his masterly presentation of the American side of the Bering sea question that the subject was finally submitted to arbitration and placed in process of adjustment.

Mr. Blaine's canvass for the Presidency in 1884 was probably the most brilliant in the history of the country. He entered the campaign handicapped by the defection of a large element in his own party, and against odds was returned as defeated by the slender majority of about twelve hundred in New York. There is good ground for supposing that this majority was fraudulent. Nobody can doubt the willingness of the ruling powers in New York City to perpetrate such a crime. On Sunday last Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur preached a sermon in Calvary Baptist Church, New York, of which he is pastor, in the course of which he said that he believed that James G. Blaine had been elected president of the United States in 1884. Democrats, Dr. MacArthur said, had told him that they knew the polls at which a sufficient number of ballots had been changed to give Mr. Cleveland an apparent majority, and, also, that they knew the men who had done this deed.

Of Mr. Blaine's six children, three—two sons and a daughter—were suddenly stricken down by death after reaching maturity. His eldest son, Walker, a young man of fine parts, who had given evidence of rare abilities and was apparently destined to a brilliant future died two years ago. Emmons, his second son, a bright business man, in manner and character closely resembling his father, also died suddenly in the heyday of youth and prosperity. A third and crushing bereavement was the death of the eldest daughter, Alice, who was married to Lieutenant Colonel John J. Coppinger. It followed closely on the death of her brother, Walker Blaine, whose funeral she was attending when seized by the fatal illness. Of the three surviving children, the son, James G., made an unfortunate marriage, the results of which embittered the latter years of his father's life. One of the daughters, Miss Margaret, is married to Mr. Walter Damrosch, the famous New York musical director, and the other, Miss Harriet, is unmarried. Mrs. Blaine is still an active and brilliant lady. She has been a devoted wife to the great statesman, whom she married forty-one years ago when both were school teachers in a country district with but little to indicate the prominent places they were destined to fill in the highest circles of the Nation.

After a brief service at the house the funeral of Mr. Blaine took place at the Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, at Washington, on Monday. It was the desire of the family that it should be as unostentatious as possible, but great throngs gathered around the mansion and the most distinguished of the land, the President, Vice-President, Senators, Members of Congress, Judges, heads of Departments and others were present. The floral decorations of the church were magnificent and wagon-loads of choice flowers were heaped upon the grave. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Hamlin, and the body of the dead statesman was interred in Oakhill Cemetery, where the remains of his son Walker Blaine repose, and near the tomb of John Howard Payne, the author of "Home, Sweet Home."

The will of Mr. Blaine will be probated in Augusta, Maine, which was his legal residence. The disposition he makes of his property is characteristic of the confidence he always reposed in his wife, and which was such a noticeable feature of the family relation. Everything is left unreservedly to Mrs. Blaine; she is to be sole executrix of the instrument, and is not to be required to give any bond. Mr. Blaine's estate, according to the estimate of a gentleman whose relations with the deceased enables him to speak with correctness, will amount to about $800,000. It is composed of improved real estate in Washington and in Maine, and of coal and timber lands in West Virginia and other states, and small holdings of personal property. Mr. Blaine's expenses, especially in later years, have been very heavy, and had he devoted his time and energy to the development of his property, the valuation of his estate would probably have been double what it is. The coal and timber lands are likely to increase in value as their resources are developed, so that when the time comes for a division of the property among the remaining children, the estate will doubtless amount to considerable more than at present. There are but three children now living—Mrs. Damrosch, Miss Hattie and James G. Blaine—but Mrs. Blaine cares for the children of Mrs. Coppinger, her eldest daughter, who died three years ago.

The will was executed several weeks since, at about the time Mr. Blaine was seized with the first serious heart failure which announced the rapid approach of the end.

SOMETHING NEW.

We have heard of all sorts of catalogues, but a Poetical catalogue is something entirely new. In reading Vick's Floral Guide for 1893, on every page one comes across happy and appropriate quotations from prominent authors. Whether if takes the mind off from the work of making out a list of Flowers and Vegtables, or makes the Guide more fascinating, will have to be determined after a trial, by the publishers, James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y. Another feature is the family of Pansy Sailors who appear on the cover and through the book. It contains five colored plates, hundreds of illustrations and lists, with descriptions of everything required in the garden. This work is really given free, as the 10 cents asked may be deducted from the first order sent the house.

Near Taylorsville, January 14th, 1893, after a short illness of membranous croup, Althea Irene, youngest and beloved daughter of James and Maggie J. Barnes, aged 3 years, 7 months and 15 days.

Day by day we saw her fade
And slowly sink away,
Yet in our hearts we prayed
That she might longer stay.

Farewell mamma, lay me gently,
In my little narrow bed;
For 'twas God who gave and took me,
Now I'm numbered with the dead.

Weep not for me dear papa,
For I am so bright and fair,
I have gone to join the angels,
I have climbed the golden stair.

Alas, my only sister,
When you gather around the door
You no doubt think of Allie,
But you'll see my face no more.

And my one and only brother,
You'll miss me in your plays;
When you sit so lonely sighing
Through the long midsummer days.

Farewell dear grandmas, how you'll miss me
When you enter at the door;
You will miss my loving face
And will hear me sing no more.

You may strew my grave with flowers,
You may sing to me a song,
Sing to me a song of heaven
When the summer days grow long.

LEGORE'S IMPROVED COMBINATION OF LIME

Is Superior to all Common Grades of Lime.

By this system and process, a full combination of the salts of lime are furnished, and as a cheap and powerful agent it beats bone. It has no equal. The choicest carbonates of lime exist here, perhaps, as no where else. We use from three different strata or deposits, burn in separate furnaces, and then mix and proportion it so as to act on all kinds of soil and crops. This has never been attempted by any other manufacturer. Our rock and improved facilities exceed any in the State. Farmers will not need a pound of bone where this lime is used. Don't be deceived or imposed upon any longer. Be sure you are right and get Legore's combination, and be convinced how easy, quick and cheap land can be improved and full crops grown. Furnished in car load lots to suit. Farmers can order their own lime. Guarantee a genuine article or no pay. Send for testimonials, prices, etc. Address

J. W. LEGORE,
