WESTMINSTER, MARYLAND.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1893.

The free silver Democrats in the House of Represeniatives availed themselves of the power to filibuster, under the absurd rules of that body, a few days ago, and thereby to prevent needed legislation for the maintenance of the gold reserve in the treasury of the country. An amendment to an appropriation bill, in the Senate, provided for the issue of three per cent. gold bonds, in case of necessity, to prevent the depletion of the reserve to a point at which danger of a premium on the precious metal may be apprehended. The silver Democrats in the House, who are opposed to the measure, resorted to filibustering tactics to prevent concurrence, and by their course imperiled the whole measure, the defeat of which would have caused serious inconvenience to the government. Under the circumstances the House voted to non concur in the Senate amendment, which was stricken from the bill. The incident demonstrated the determination and energy of a considerable body of Democratic Representatives, and their purpose to maintain their ground on the silver question, at all hazards.

Partisan and Non-Partisan.

In its article of February 11th, in which the Advocate charges the SENTINEL with partisanship in relation to the district road law, the following paragraph occurs:

"What matters it then that the district commissioners are appointed and not elected? If elected the system would be carried into partisan politics, while the design was to make it non-partisan."

The only means we have of getting at the purpose of the framers of the law is to be found upon its face, and that, instead of indicating non-partisanship, clearly shows a contrary temper. It is partisan in the extreme. The people of the districts might have concluded, if the power to elect had been extended to them, to put aside all questions of politics and have chosen commissioners for their qualifications alone. The County Commissioners, in whom the appointing power is lodged by the law, might have seen fit to ignore the questions of politics in choosing the district commissioners, but the law says they shall not do so. They must name a majority of each Board from the majority party of the county. The palpable partisanship of this law, as far as we know, has no parallel in recent legislation, whatever the purpose and design of its framers may have been.

A New Regime.

At noon to-day Benjamin Harrison will surrender to his successor, Grover Cleveland, the chief executive office of this great Nation. At the same time a new Congress, in which the Democrats will be in a majority in both branches, will commence. The people have so decreed and their will is the law in which all good citizens acquiesce, whatever their judgment as to the consequences of the change may be.

The verdict is accepted by the victors as a deliberate reversal of the economic policy of the government concerning, particularly, the question of revenue and tariff, a policy under which American industries have been developed with a rapidity never paralleled in the history of the world. If this conviction of the triumphant party be honestly held, we may expect radical and far reaching changes in the existing economic system. Undoubtedly a large element of the party just coming into full power will insist that this is the logic of the situation and their contention cannot be controverted.

The platform upon which Mr. Cleveland was elected President and both Houses of Congress transferred to Democratic control, deliberately denounced the protective tariff system as unconstitutional and a fraud. In the face of such a declaration, if honestly made, every vestige of protective legislation should be swept away as speedily as an all-powerful majority can frame a law to take its place. This conclusion is logical and inexorable, but it is apparent that the law-makers under the new regime are not a unit concerning it. The most obtuse cannot fail to see that disaster awaits many a prosperous industry if the principle of the Chicago platform shall be enforced, and some "cowardly makeshift" to protect favored enterprises will more likely be the result of the tariff legislation to come, than a law that will tear up the protective system by the roots and comply, according to Democratic theory, with the constitution.

Since the reductions in tariff duties made by the McKinley law, the revenue from customs duties has not more than served, in connection with receipts from other sources, to meet the accruing obligations of the government. Further reductions will necessitate the imposition of duties on articles now admitted free, such as sugar, coffee and tea, articles of prime necessity in every household. The incoming tariff tinkers must wrestle with this problem, and, though difficult of solution, they will probably solve it by levying a tax on these articles and by striking out of the law the wool duties which now serve to promote the growth of that article by the farmers of the country.

Taking this subject alone the new regime will be compelled to meet and adapt legislation to a condition to which it will scarcely bring a united party and to which it will be practically unequal. In the meantime the country will suffer the consequences of uncertainty, as well as of ill-advised legislation, and adversity will probably take the place of prosperity until the people will become heartily sick of the new government.

Many other questions will confront the new administration and clamor for solution—questions upon which, it is apparent, members are as far apart from each other as the poles are separated. They will arise quickly and demand speedy adjustment. The responsibility rests with the new regime, and its failure to measure up to the situation will probably cause its overthrow in the near future.

While it cannot be said that President Harrison has gained, by personal magnetism, the undying devotion of a great host of friends, the ability displayed in his administration must be admitted. Of the many important questions submitted to the government for adjustment, during his term, it can with truth be said that all were treated from the standpoint of the highest patriotism, and with unsurpassed statesmanship. The administration, in these respects, has been equal to the ablest in the history of the country. It is now a part of that history and when it ends, at noon to-day, Gen. Harrison will retire from office with a consciousness that it will not suffer in reputation by contrast with previous administrations.

For the SENTINEL.

Wisdom Will Die With Him.

MR. EDITOR:—The writer of your New Windsor correspondence is wise beyond his fellows, or, at least, imagines himself so. His unnecessary and unprovoked assault upon the communication of the undersigned, on the road question, published in a previous issue of the SENTINEL, indicates a contentious spirit rather than a purpose to fairly consider the subject. To the wonder of everybody, probably, but himself, he flies to the defence of "Daniel D. Haysee" and "A Purveyor," against a purely imaginary attack. My communication contained no word of criticism of the letters of "A Purveyor," and its reference to the "Haysee" attitude on the bond question was wholly commendatory. The writers of those papers will hardly thank your New Windsor correspondent for his superserviceable zeal in undertaking their defense against an attack that is but a figment of his brain, a shadow, a myth.

The cause of that defense is not more baseless, either, than the assertion that "Haysee" and "Purveyor" had said the same things and "much more" than the undersigned in the communication criticised by your New Windsor correspondent. They wrote, as well as I can now remember without having their communications at hand to refresh my memory, against an increase of taxation for road purposes, and in opposition to the issue of bonds for road-making purposes. The "Haysee" letters were well written and presented the negative of the proposition quite forcibly. "A Purveyor's" were only faint echoes of "Haysee's" and were entirely lacking in the trenchant style of the latter when dealing in argument; but neither of them, as far as I can recall, attempted to show that better roads might be given us without increased taxation, or suggested the use of machinery for road-making purposes, and the employment of competent supervisors to work it. These points were intended to be, and I think were, the leading ones in my communication. I do not pretend that they were original with me. They have been discussed by others and I claim no merit and desire none for their production. My sole desire and object in the matter were to stimulate those most concerned to some effort to reform the present unsatisfactory methods in relation to road-making, and if a particle of influence has been or shall be exerted by the communication in that direction I will be more than satisfied and gladly yield the honor to anybody who may claim it. I am simply Declines to Accept Aid.

The Leader, of Cleveland, Ohio, has received a number of communications from citizens of that and other States, expressing sincere sympathy with Governor McKinley in his financial losses, and suggesting that the people show regard for the Governor and his noble wife by contributing to a fund from which the debts incurred by indorsing the notes of a friend might be paid. Governor McKinley has been advised of the receipt of these letters, and asked if he would permit his many friends throughout the country to come to his relief. In reply the following communication has been received:

"To the Editor of the Leader.—I cannot express the depth of my gratitude to the people who have sent money to the Leader for my use, of which you have advised me, but grateful as I am and always will be for their noble generosity I cannot accept their contributions. Nothing has touched me more in my misfortunes than the letters of sympathy and offers of help received from those of my countrymen who have little but what they earn. Please convey to such friends my heart's best thanks.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, JR.

"Columbus, February 27."

Gov. Brown's Tax Convention has been in session since Wednesday, considering the report of the committee appointed to formulate an outline of the legislation required on the subject. The discussion has taken a wide range, and great diversity of opinion has been exhibited among the delegates.

The Baltimore Conference, M. E. Church, in session at Hagerstown, has, by a decided vote, refused its assent to the transfer of Rev. Dr. Lanceley, of Toronto, Canada, to the Mount Vernon Church, Baltimore. Decided hostility to the importation of ministers from other conferences, is being exhibited by the members of the Baltimore Conferences

The stockholders of the Frederick and Pennsylvania Line Railroad held their annual meeting Friday of last week at the company's office, Centre and Calvert streets, Baltimore, and elected the following directors: Messrs. Charles E. Trail, John S. Lieb, R. D. Barclay, Geo. C. Wilkins, James P. Kerr, James McSherry. The following were elected on behalf of Frederick City: John Eisenhauer, General E. C. McSherry, J. E. THE PANSY FOR MARCH is strong, terse and energetic. It is entertaining besides. There are excellent short stories, and there are serials whose worth can only be estimated by reading. The American Literature paper this month concerns itself with the poet Longfellow, and a valuable paper it is, too. The shorter timely articles, verse and poems are supplemented by the popular Pansy Society of Christian Endeavor, everywhere well-known and highly prized. Price $1.00 a year; 10 cents a number. D. Lothrop Company, Publishers, Boston.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE FOR MARCH.

is unrivaled in the quality of its articles and in the number and value of its illustrations. It opens with a graphic and entertaining description of Florida—"Our own Riviera"—by Julian Ralph, the third of his important series of papers on the South. Several beautiful illustrations, including the frontispiece, by W. T. Smedly, accompany this article. The Editor's Study, by Charles Dudley Warner, includes comments and discussions upon a variety of social and literary topics of current interest. The Editor's Drawer opens as usual with an amusing character sketch by Thomas Nelson Page.

A SPLENDID NUMBER.

The New Peterson for March is a decided improvement on its predecessors, admirable as they have been. "Our Women Violinists," by Frances M. Smith, is a most interesting paper, accompanied by admirable photogravures of all the celebrated American women violin players. The success of The New Peterson is thoroughly established and is well deserved. No magazine has a finer array of contributors, and in many respects it is better suited to the needs of the entire household than any periodical in the country. Terms, two dollars a year. Address Peterson Magazine Co., Philadelphia.

THE CRUST OF SOCIETY.

Harris, Britton and Dean, the popular managers of that beautiful amusement temple, in Baltimore, known as Harris' Academy of Music, have just announced the engagement at this house of the dramatic event of the New York season, one of the most emphatic successes of recent years, "The Crust of Society," which will be given at the Academy for six nights, and Thursday and Saturday matinees, beginning Monday, March 13th. This remarkable drama has been pronounced a criterion of excellence from Maine to California. The sale of seats is advertised to open on Monday, March 6th, at the usual places in Baltimore. Notwithstanding the extraordinary expense attached to this great attraction, there will be no advance in the regular prices; one dollar will purchase the best seat in the house. The scenery and costumes are said to be marvels in themselves and alone worth seeing.

A bud from heaven to earth was sent;
We thought 'twas given, 'twas only lent:
That tie so dear, cold death has riven.
That bud of earth now blooms in Heaven.

Little snow-white hands are folded,
Folded on the silent breast:
Little voice is hushed forever,
Little feet are now at rest.

Near Morelock's Schoolhouse, February 26th, 1893, Joseph Young, aged 71 years, 1 month and 19 days.

Husband, and father, can it be?
It seems to us unjust
To lay you in the cold damp grave
To moulder into dust.

He's now happy, joyous and smiling,
In his new and beautiful home,
Where, free from earthly afflictions,
He's waiting for loved ones to come.

He was weary, worn with working,
His life-crown of power hath passed:
Off on the temples sadly aching
He was weary, let him rest.

When a week ago we gathered
Joy was in his mild blue eye,
But a golden chord is severed
And our hopes in ruin lie.

Farewell dear brothers, sisters all,
Shed not a tear of grief for me:
I can no longer with you stay,
The Lord has called, I must obey.

And you grandchildren, kind and dear,
I say farewell to you;
Oh! may we meet in heaven above,
Where all is peace, and joy and love.
