"Is it a Queer Cure?"

We find in our exchanges this paragraph on diphtheria going the rounds:

"A QUEER CURE FOR DIPHTHERIA."—A child in Auburn, ill of diphtheria, whose life was dispaired of, was cured by slaking lime. Small lumps of lime were kept constantly slacking near its mouth for more than a day and a-half, until more than a barrel was thus slaked. The child was thought to be dying before this remdy was employed. It breathed the fumes of the lime constantly until cured.—Bangor (Me.) Whig, Dec. 3d."

This may sound 'queer,' but it is not only a cure—if properly used—for diphtheria, but in connection wfth hot steam it positively cures membraneous croup. That dread scourge of so many households, whose light and joy of life has gone out with the loss of loved children, is no longer an unmanageable disease. In the hands of such practitioners of the regular school as Dr. Goodrich, of Vernon, and a number of others, the method of using steam mingled with the fumes of slaked lime is very successful in both diphtheria and "old fashioned croup." The bed is covered over and made as close a tent as possible. Into this close tent where the little patient lies and must be kept, a pipe is introdnced which leads from boiling water near the bedside. (Dr. Stevens has—and all doctors should have—a handy little portable contrivance for their purpose.) Into a pan of warm water lumps of unslaked lime are occasionally dropped; the slaking makes of course a hot ferment and bubbling, and the limy fumes pretty well fill the tent and are breathed by the child.

It may or may not require a nurse or parent to stay much of the time in the tent, on the bed with the child to keep it quiet and contented. Sometimes it takes two or three days—the boiling water and lime being duly renewed as often as they fail, and the hot air and steam in the little tent kept up night and day. One little boy on Trumbull street in this city, lay for six days without change, while suffering from membraneous croup, which threatened death—but at last, when all the doctors, and even Dr. Stephens himself began to almost despair, the croup yielded, and the little fellow's life was saved. The remedy, we think, works equally well in diphtheria, and the time required, either in diphtheria or croup, is not often more than two days. But in the case of diphtheria, burning sulphur is a very important additional advantage, which must not be omitted. The sulphur may be burned on a hot fire-shovel, held under the tent.—Hartford Times.

Beautiful Women Enslaved.

From the Chicago Times.

The capture of Turkman women by the Persian governors is one of the great crimes of Persian rule in the districts east of the Caspian sea. "An order," says Maj. Butler, of the British army, "is sent to one or more of the governors of those districts to the effect that no presents have been forwarded to the Shah by them of late and if they do not immediately dispatch substantial gifts another governor will be found to replace them. The distracted governor, who has already robbed his own people until they have nothing left to take, wistfully turns his eyes and thoughts to his rich neighbors—the Turkmans. Forthwith he organizes an expedition and sends forth spies to ascertain at what point are encamped the greatest number of Turkman women and horses and the smallest number of men. This being ascertained, he starts at the dead of night, accompanied by his murdering robbers, and swoops down upon the unfortunate victims. Those Turkmans who are able to fight or likely to give any future trouble are ruthlessly murdered and the old men, the boys, wives, daughters and sisters are bound hand and foot and brought back into Persian territory. Then comes a scene disgraceful alike to humanity and morality. The old women and infants are separated from the young and beautiful (and many of the Turkish women are very beautiful); every point of the latter is looked into and discussed by the men told off for this purpose, just as the intended purchaser of a horse trots out the animal to examine him. Those possessing the best points are sent off to the Shah and other great men at Teheran. Those with some fault or other are kept by the governor himself and distributed among his favorites, high and low, his servants being always generously treated in the distribution of the human spoil. The horses and other stolen property are likewise disposed of. But what becomes of the old women and little ones? These are locked up until some Turkman relation can buy their release for £20 or £25 each and if this happy arrangement cannot be effected they probably die of starvation. I could mention many startling instances of the above which have lately taken place. There is a regular season for these expeditions, commencing about April and ending about October. The Turkman never gave any cause whatever to the Persians for these barbarities and that all the marauding and kidnapping is on the part of the Persians."

HYDROPHOBIA has been proved to be a disease, and one which is transmissible by inoculation. Some French surgeons recently made direct experiments with the blood and saliva of a man dying of the disease in a Paris hospital. Rabbits were inoculated with the saliva, and after the interval of a short period of incubation showed unmistakable signs of hydrophobia, finally dying in convulsions. The blood, however, did not act with the same poisonous effects.

HEATING STREET CARS.—A New York horse-car company has adopted a new mode for heating cars. Under each seat, and protected by wire netting, are run terra cotta pipes, to be filled at the beginning of each trip with hot salt water. At each end of the car is placed a cylinder, opening upon the platform, into which, every trip, will be placed a large red-hot iron slug, heated in a furnace at the station.

A Remarkable Result.

It makes no difference how many Physicians or how much medicine you have tried, it is now a established fact that German Syrup is the only remedy which has given complete satisfaction in very cases of Lung Diseases. It is true there are legion, thousands of persons who are predisposed to Throat and Lung Affections, Consumption, Hemorrhages, Asthma, Severe Colds settled on the Lungs, Pneumonia, Whooping Cough, &c., who have, on personal knowledge of Boschee's German Syrup, to such a wide extent say that 50,000 dozen were sold last year, without one bona fide complaint. Consumptives try it. Regular size 75c. Sold by C. F. Stamm, Chesterton, and F. M. Goodman, Millington.

SENATOR HAMPTON'S VIEWS.—Senator Wade Hampton, of South Carolina, has expressed himself fully on the financial question to a correspondent of the New York Herald. He is very decided in his approval of the resolution recently introduced by Senator Bayard, and expressed himself strongly in favor of its adoption and support by the democratic party. "Mr. Bayard," he said, "is one of the comparatively few men in the country who had rather be right than President, and his course in regard to the currency has left no room for doubt, if any man of any party were disposed to doubt, that he is guided in this matter solely by his sincere, and, as I believe, sound convictions of what will conduce to the best interests of the whole country." Continuing, Senator Hampton said the democrats had always been a hard-money party, and should hasten to seize the opportunity now presented of declaring its devotion to its old financial principles, and of placing itself squarely on record in their support. There is absolutely nothing to be gained by further compromises with the soft money theory, and none should be made, in his judgment. Senator Hampton thinks the financial question is, in fact, the real ground upon which is based whatever feelings of distrust and dislike the North may entertain towards the South. "The South," continued Senator Hampton, requires only to be fully understood in order to be trusted, but we can prove these facts only by our action upon financial questions as they come up in Congress. A proper occasion for such reassuring action is now presented, as it seems to me, and the South should put itself promptly and emphatically on record in support of a settled financial policy, a settled currency and a settled country. But whether we should succeed or fail, whether it is expedient or not, I would make the fight on this issue and on this line. It is the line of consistency and principle, and we had better be whipped fighting for the right than to win upon any other ground."

A STRANGE TRAGEDY.—A curious tragedy was recently enacted at Littowk, on the Russian frontier. Two Jews, father and son, had long lived on very bad terms, and at last the son hired a peasant for twenty-five pieces of silver "to facilitate the old man from this vale of tears." On the day fixed for the execution of the crime the peasant repented, and, going to the intended victim, confessed all that had passed. The father made him promise to pretend to his employer that the crime had been committed, and he then went to the Rabbi, Joseph Beer, before whom he laid the whole matter. After due deliberation the Rabbi determined to see the son, inform him that his murdered father had appeared to him in a dream, and he asked his murderer whether he would appear before a terrestial or celestial jury.

The son quite overwhelmed, chose the former tribunal, which was accordingly formed and consisted of ten influential parishioners. The father was placed behind a curtain. The prisoner having been placed at the bar, the judges rose, and the rabbi selemnly invited the spirit of the dead man to bring forward his accusation. Hardly had the son recognized the voice of his father when he was seized with terror and fell dead. The procurator of the province, on learning the facts, at once caused the rabbi and the other members of the court to be arrested.

WHO ARE AMERICAN ARISTOCRATS?—Twenty years ago this one made candles, that one sold candles and butter, another butchered, a fourth carried on a distillery, another was a contractor on canals, others were merchants and mechanics. They are acquainted with both ends of society, and their children will be after them, though it will not do to say so out loud. For often you find these toiling worms hatch out butterflies—and they live about a year. Death brings a division of property, and it brings new financiers. The old gent is discharged, the young gent takes revenues and begins to travel—towards poverty, which he reaches before death, or his children do if he does not, so that, in fact, though there is a sort of moneyed rank, it is not hereditary; it is accessible to all. The father grubs and grows rich; his children strut and use the money. The children in turn inherit pride and go shiftless to poverty. Next their children reinvigorated by fresh plebean blood and by the smell of the clod, come up again. Thus society, like a tree, draws its sap from the earth, changes it into seed and blossoms, spreads them around in great glory, sheds them, to fall to the earth again, to mingle with the soil, and at length to reappear in new dress and fresh garniture.

IT is all very well to be a promising youth, but the hard part is to keep your promise in after life.
