WESTMINSTER, - MARYLAND.

Entered at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., as Second-class matter.

FRIDAY, JUNE 4, 1909.

Our motto is, "As much as lieth in you, speak kindly of all men." Our conservatory is larger than our brick yard. It is seldom that we have occasion to use the latter, and we regret that we have had to do so this week. We would rather throw bouquets than bricks anytime.

TALKING IT OVER.

In our news columns is published without comment the story of an article which appeared in the Hampstead "Enterprise" last week, and the action of the State's Attorney of Carroll County relative thereto. It is not within the province of an editorial at this time to discuss the merits of the case, nor to sit as judge or jury. There are, however, certain facts, which may be mentioned without prejudice to anyone. Under the law it is the duty of every grand jury to inspect the jail and render a report to the Court, consequently the sheriff needs no notification on the part of the grand jury other than the law. It has been the custom of the grand juries of this county from time immemorial to visit the alms house as well as the jail, and the custom for the grand jury to be entertained at both places. In this connection there is another pertinent fact, that Dr. A. P. Herring, secretary of the State Lunacy Commission, visited both jail and alms house absolutely without notice, seeking to find any abuses that might prevail, in order that they might be corrected, and in both written reports and in public speech has taken occasion to say that there is no better conducted almshouse in the State than that of Carroll, and to utter words of commendation of the jail, considering the fact that it is not a modern structure.

In connection with the reference in the article in question to the State's Attorney and the administration of his office, it is evident that that gentleman is abundantly able to take care of himself, but it may be said that this is not the first time that the present incumbent has filled the office, and that in nearly six years of service, there has hitherto been no slightest imputation that he has at any time prostituted the office through fear or favor in the interest of himself or any client.

As to the article itself, whether its words are or are not libellous is a matter for legal decision, but whether actionable or not, it seems to us that they were most unwise. Upon the integrity of the Court in all its branches and the proper administration of justice depend the safety and good order of the State, and nothing should be said hastily, calculated to bring into ridicule or reproach public officials, who are set for the carrying out of the laws. No officer of the law should be permitted to be guilty of misfeasance or malfeasance in office and go unwhipped of justice, and any citizen who has knowledge of such misconduct should bring it to the attention of the Court, that justice may be done both to the State and the individual, whose office should protect him from the attacks of gossiping tongues.

Another subject that needs considerable talking over is the changed attitude of the Good Roads Commission with relation to the improvement of the roads of the State, as indicated in its decision to begin the road between Westminster and Sykesville at the latter point and not at the county seat.

The Good Roads Commission announced as its policy the accomplishment of the greatest good to the greatest number in the improvement of the road system. A number of mass meetings were held in Westminster, at which all sections of the county were represented. The Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Westminster took the position that it should be the policy of the Commission to begin at the county seats of the State and build a number of miles of road in every possible direction, thus forming the beginnings of a net work of roads, which in time would cover the entire State.

When it became evident that it was the policy of the Commission to construct "through roads," the citizens of Westminster and of the county settled down to the agreement that the greatest good to the greatest number in the county would be subserved by the construction of a road to the southward from Westminster, a road to the north and a road to the west. A number of alternate possible routes were advocated, but there was never on the part of the commission or any one else public intimation that the county seat would be ignored, with its largest population to be benefited, and its largest portion of taxes paid.

At the Merchants and Manufacturers Association meeting on Tuesday night one of the speakers declared truly that "There is not an honest man in the county, who is disinterested and consequently unprejudiced, who will not condemn the Good Roads Commission for its action in the premises."

Exceptionally Strong Bargain Attractions in All Kinds of SEASONABLE GOODS

All over the Store are bargains. Every department is brimming with them—Bargains of real importance. Just the seasonable warm-weather things that everybody seeks right now. These bargains are the result of the abnormally cool weather that has prevailed all spring. Come to the Store and stroll through the various departments. Notice the price cards on all the center counters through the store for many of the special bargains. Whatever you seek you will find at very big savings—at very much less than the goods are honestly worth.

DIED.

In Baltimore, June 2nd, 1909, Mrs. Susan A. Nichols, wife of N. Kelly Nichols. Interment at Mt. Olivet Cemetery, Baltimore, this afternoon.

IN MEMORIAM.

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear wife and our mother, Mary J. Staub, who departed this life one month ago today, May 4th, 1909.

Dearest wife, where the rosebuds open
And the trees in beauty wave,
I take my little boys and lead them
Gently to their mother's grave.

For I am alone, yes all alone
In this great world of strife;
You are not here to walk with me,
Through this dark path of life.

By her Husband.

Often we will wander to the graveyard
Flowers to strew, with tender care,
On the grave of our dear grandma
Who is sweetly resting there.

By her grandchildren,
Daisy, Edgar and Wilbur Eyler.

Home is not home, grandma is not here,
Angels have taken her out of our care;
We have loved her, but God loved her more;
He's taken her away to that bright happy shore.

By her granddaughters,
Mary Bell and Geraldine Young.

She saw a hand we did not see
Which beckoned her away,
She heard a voice we did not hear
Which told her not to stay.

What is home without our mother?
'Tis a cottage robbed of flowers,
Where our broken, bleeding hearts
Have spent many lonely hours.

By the children at home.

I miss thee in the daytime, mother,
I miss thee in the night,
I miss thy kind and loving smiles
That used to be in sight.

By her daughter, Mrs. Jennie Eyler.
