of the business men you have known for fifteen years, and how much are they worth? A good many could not stand up long enough to be counted, if it were not for the all sustaining arms of Life Insurance which some enterprising agent thrust under them years ago, when they were beginners in their line.

The rich are swapping places with the poor every day. In truth, nothing is certain in these times, but gilt-edged life insurance.

HAND OF DEATH

George E. Ruhl died at his home in Baltimore last Thursday week. He was the husband of Lucy A. Ruhl (nee Fogwell.) The funeral was held from his late residence 1729 North Chester street, Saturday, interment in Loudon Park Cemetery.

Mrs. Sarah Temperance Coleman, age 75, wife of the late James Wesley Coleman, died at the home of her son, Joseph E. Coleman, Chester, Saturday afternoon, September 18, after an illness of only three days. She was the daughter of the late Joseph R. and Martha Ann Apsley. Mrs. Coleman was born in Piney Neck, Kent county, March 29, 1845, where she lived until about thirty years ago when her family moved to Kent Island, where they have since resided. She was married in November of 1861 to James Wesley Coleman, also of Kent county, he having died August 1, 1919, just a little over a year prior to her death. If he had lived three months longer they would have been married 58 years. She is survived by four children, two sons, Joseph E. and F. Whitefield Coleman, both of Chester; and two daughters, Mrs. Frank Gardner, of Baltimore. and Mrs. Alfred Kersey, of Chester; also a brother, Capt. Jas. E. Apsley, of Rock Hall, and two half brothers, Wm. and George Apsley, of Baltimore. Funeral services were held at Kingsley M. E. Church, Chester, Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock and interment was in Stevensville Cemetery. Rev. G. S. Thomas, pastor of the church conducted the burial service. The pall bearers were Charles Lewis, Jacob Gardner, Charles Kirwan, Richard Brown, Alfred and Elmer Jones.

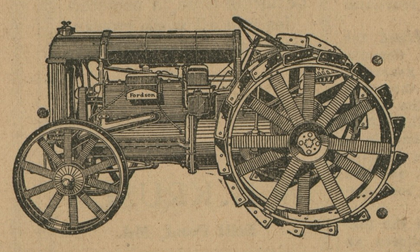
FORDSON TRACTOR

Startling and interesting facts showing how the Fordson Tractor MORE THAN PAID FOR ITSELF IN ONE SEASON.



"FORDSON TRACTOR PAYS FOR ITSELF"
BY W. S. HOOVER, FAIRLEE, MD.
Reprint from "Pennsylvania Farmer," August 7th, 1920.

I own a farm of 210 acres in Kent County, Md., which is level and free from stone. In the summer of 1918 I found myself using twelve head of mules in the operation of this farm. I had never owned or operated a tractor before, and on or about September 1st I purchased a Fordson with plows, paying $1025. I seeded 100 acres of wheat the same fall, doing all the work with the Fordson tractor.

I had no expense at all for repairs in 1918. I used $24 worth of oil and kerosene on the above work (not the price of one ton of hay).

I also sold mules enough that fall to pay for the tractor and I only keep four mules on the farm, also dispensing with two teamsters that cost me $6 a day (and lots of worry. Where I had been in the habit of keeping 500 bushels of corn to feed the above-mentioned mules I sold down to 100 bushels, which I found to be sufficient, as I do not keep cows but grow grain for market. I also sold $200 worth of hay that the mules would have eaten.

The tractor was idle during the winter months except sawing wood for farm use and was housed away and required no attention all winter, but had eight less mules to attend to twice a day all winter.

In the spring my neighbors were out early with their mules plowing their ground for corn, while it was wet and cold. I let my tractor alone until May 1st (neighbors' corn was planted and up). The second week in May took my Fordson and plowed my 30-acre field for corn in five days, worked the ground ready for the planter, using two mules to planter. The soil was warm and in fine condition; all came up, no replanting, and went ahead of any corn in the neighborhood and cribbed 70 bushels to the acre. I also want to point to the fact that it is impossible to plow land with horses like you can plow it with a Fordson.

How did I harvest? I took my seven-foot cut binder, sawed the tongue off, had the blacksmith make me a hitch and hooked up to the tractor. My wife put on a pair of overalls and rode the binder and I drove the Fordson and we cut 35 acres a day and could have cut more if I had had shockers enough. Where were my four mules while I was cutting wheat? In the corn field cultivating corn. The weather never gets too hot for the tractor to pull the binder, which is often the case with horses.

My total expense for repairs for 1919 was $4.40 and I have sold enough hay this fall to keep my tractor in kerosene and oil for several years to come (which otherwise would have been consumed by the mules.) My tractor today shows no wear and has as much power and "pep" as the first day I used it, and I think I am safe in saying that I have saved $1000 a year in labor hire, $500 or more in increased production (on account of better tillage) and feed sold that would have been consumed $600 or more. I admit my farm is ideal for tractor work, as the fields are square and level, with no obstructions in them. How long will the tractor last? I can't see why it should not last eight or ten years, or longer. It does not owe me anything now, as I would be ahead of the game if I had to buy one every year.

The proof of pudding is the eating thereof. Mr. Hoover has shown what can be done by using the Fordson. Why not be progressive? Investigate for yourself. We will prove these facts to your satisfaction. Let us demonstrate.
