A ROMANTIC MEETING. — When the st British Crown arrived at Philadelphia on day from Liverpool a nervous old gentlema eagerly up the gang-plank. On the deck w old lady anxiously awaiting him. They bo each other long before the vessel reache wharf, and the recognition was immediate, th they had been separated for twenty-eight The old lady was Miss Benedicta Price, 63 of age, and the old gentleman, who is 70 her intended husband. Thirty years ago became engaged, but they were not able married, and the gentleman set out for Am to make his fortune. The lovers had kept regular correspondence ever since, and the had at last come over to be married.

ORCHILLA GUANO
"The Best and Cheapest"
FOR ALL
CROPS.

The history of Agriculture for the last seventeen years, records no greater triumph than has been exhibited in the annual results of the use of

ORCHILLA GUANO
IN THE PROMOTION OF THE GROWTH OF GRAIN AND GRASS

and in the improvement of the soils to which it has been applied. The large aggregate to which its sales now reach, proves at once, its popularity and its worth.

Its claim to favor arises from—

1st. The Valuable Constituents of which it is Composed: being just what growing plants require for perfect growth, and just what is needed to make poor land rich.

2d. Its Perfect Chemical Combination: which no human skill or mechanical contrivance can successfully imitate.

3d. Its Perfect Purity: there being only 1½ per cent. of dross, contained in it. In other words, it is all fertilizer.

4th. And all this at a Low Price.

The most eminent Chemists of our land have repeatedly analyzed and certified to these facts. But farmers have been so often imposed upon in buying fertilizers, that they have learned caution, and therefore, even so valuable an article as ORCHILLA, has to win its way,

BY ITS MERITS.

This it is doing; and as it makes friends, it keeps them. Those who have used it longest, use the most of it.

Our claim for the value of Orchilla Guano is a high one; but we have the testimony of thousands of farmers who use it, that it is not an extravagant one.

And now comes additional evidence so conclusive that all controversy is silenced:

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE OF VIRGINIA,

WAS ESTABLISHED PARTICULARLY FOR THE protection of farmers in the detection and prevention of imposition in the preparation and sale of fertilizers, the purchase of which, in our days, constitutes so large, important and necessary a portion of a farmer's expenditures. DR. J. M. BLANTON, himself a successful farmer, and for a number of years past, the GRAND MASTER OF THE STATE GRANGE OF VA., was placed in charge of the Department last year, and immediately proceeded to take vigorous measures to carry out the intention of the law. Among other things he dispatched his "samplers" all over the State to obtain samples of any and all fertilizers offered or sold to the farmers of the State wherever they could find any, and forward them to his office at Richmond. There they were numbered and given for analysis to Dr. W. J. GASCOYNE, the Chemist of the Department, who also calculated and certified to the actual value of each, according to the constituent parts he found in them. The result of his work for the fall season of 1882 is embodied in the official report published. In this report, analyses of 76 fertilizers are given; and the commercial value of the constituent parts of each, is stated. According to it, many of them are not worth the prices asked for them! Of those which are, very few can show an excess of 10 per cent., whilst ORCHILLA, far surpassing all others, is certified to be worth about 50 per cent., over the price asked for it! [Send to us for a copy of this Report.]

We take pride in having this high, disinterested and incontrovertible endorsement of our claim that Orchilla Guano is the

"CHEAPEST AND BEST" FERTILIZER IN THE MARKET.

Send for our little book containing verbatim copies of letters from some of the most successful farmers of the country, who have used Orchilla Guano for years and will have nothing else, the burden of whose story is—

"IT HAS MADE OUR POOR LANDS RICH."

ODE TO FRIENDSHIP.

WHANITA.

Surely Heaven never gave us
Treasures of an earthly kind,
Greater, than for one to crave us
Dearest friend of heart and mind;
And when the earnest love we feel,
That deep, sincere affection,
She stamps an eternal seal
And vows her sure protection:
Then faith for love to each avowed,
A mystic bond is then enshroud;
And ties around two hearts are spun
That only end when life is done.

The bloom from off the cheek may fade
And leave it yet an ashy white,
The raven locks may all be grayed
And eyes changed from dark to light,
Old age may come and with her bring
Changes wrought alone for worse,
And every feeling in the bosom sting,
And every chord within it burst:
But constant is the friendly heart,
No change of Time's can ever start,
Or take from us which from heaven is given,
The strongest tie that within heart is riven.

Ah! friendship what a boon thou art,
And little do we know thy worth,
Since from the darkest corner of the heart
Unconsciously thou art given birth.
It is thy loving, gentle hand—
That hand so eager to appease—
That smoothes over the cares of man,
And thinks the most of others ease.
It is the heart, when others change
And all their love for us estrange,
That leaves us not, but opes the more
And deeper feels for hearts that sore.

Stripped of every earthly friend
Left destitute and alone,
Say, where then would my feelings tend?
Or would they have a throne?
Would there one be left to care
What would be my earthly lot?
One, when I'm dying to lisp a prayer
And say "thou wilt not be forgot?"
Ah! no, an outcast I would be,
With none to love or care for me;
For to many an iron hand we bend
And many a father is not a friend.

Yea, rather far had I to die
And leave this world forever,
Than think to live without this tie
That death alone can sever.
Let fortune take her wings to flight
And flit the foreign sea,
And fame with all her gorgeous might
Be but a dream to me.
Rob me of every earthly pleasure,
Leave me not a boon or treasure,
Take away my heart and mind;
But leave, oh! leave one friend behind.

SOCIAL FORCES.

There is no doubt that whatever woman is to be or not to be, potentially considered, she is in the actual present the strongest social force of the day. Life is her keyboard, and she sweeps the scale with practical ease. From old discord she evolves harmonies; from fragments of a song half sung she is bringing the grander creations of musical art. The power that lies in a woman as a social force is its own responsibility. Great gifts are less designed by God to confer privileges than they are to indicate duties. Opportunities are sometime given in Chaldean language and read backward to renunciation rather than reward. The woman of today stands with tremulous eagerness on the threshold of this new life of womanhood which is to her practically a new heaven and a new earth. To her all doors are opened. The limitation of individual capacity is the only limitation of her life. Art, literature, the professions, the industrial vocations await her inspirations and her ministries. It is a beautiful and blessed world in which she stands.—What shall she do in it?

The ideal woman of the future must be symmetrical. She must recognize the one great work of life—character-building. The moral and the intellectual forces must find their point of reconciliation and of unity. She must recognize the profound significance of tendencies. Habit becomes an automatic action, and if it is not wise to do anything repeatedly it is hazardous to do once. An action repeated gathers momentum and becomes the active and controlling rather than the massive and controllable force. The coming woman will recognize the importance of those tendencies and will guard her life in that direction.

The ideal woman of the future will be the complete woman. Ethics will not crowd out æsthetics in her character. She will give the sensitive shading to the values of life. Intellectual pursuits, great ideas, will neither be subordinated emotion and decorative vanities, nor will they eliminate from her character that nameless elegance of manner, the finish of address, the beauty of costume, that all unite to make up that perfect woman nobly planned. Dress and address in this higher significance constitute the symmetry, the fruition of the social force. Yet it is the striving after beauty, a line that lies between the Scylla of sensuous gratification and vanity and the Charybdis of disregard of the subtle, pervasive influence of æsthetics. Prof. Sargent, of Harvard, said, in his grand address before the Moral Education Society a few weeks since, that we carry decorum and refinement to excess and to sin. "I believe," said he, "in the stern simplicity of nature." If we could but recognize the true beauty that lies in this simplicity, and the cheap and tawdry effect produced by over-decoration, we should arrive at one important truth that must govern the woman who sways the social forces of the future. Dress and decoration may become the clog rather than the garniture they were designed to be.

The ideal woman of the future will be a strong woman—clear in her intellectual perception, trained and balanced in her judgment, discriminating between nobility and cheapness, and comprehensive of that other fine truth stated by Professor Sargent, that it is vulgar to seem and not to be. She will unite the trained power of the developed intellect, the generous sympathy of the heart, the grace and social ease of the elegance of society, and by right of these pre-eminent gifts of influence will she stand as one of the elemental powers of life, as the needed social force of the age.

SENSIBLE ADVICE.

There is nothing like their own home for married people, and especially for young married people, even if the wife shall have to cook and sweep the floor and clean the windows. If she be a healthy girl the exercise will do her good—and no young man who has to labor for a living should marry a girl that is not healthy, strong and willing to do her own work while they are too poor to hire a servant. This thing of marrying a girl that you have to hire another girl to take care of is not a wise thing for a poor young man to do. He should look out for a girl that is broad-shouldered, strong in muscle, having of course other virtues. The ideal girl, the consumptive, tight-laced, party-going, piano-playing, fashionable girl, can be no proper wife for him. This language the girls may think unkind, but it is not. It is better for girls that are not fitted to be poor men's wives to remain with their parents than to become such. It will be better for their lovers, too, and better for society. A girl that does not know how to cook fairly, or who would not when necessary cheerfully cook for her husband, ought not to marry any but a rich man—and no poor man should marry her. If, then, girls without a dowry are content to marry young men who have only their fond hearts, their good name, their strong arms, their ambition to make their wives happy, and their hope to work up to a competence through frugality and industry, these girls should know how to cook—and they ought to be ashamed to marry any such man until they have learned the art of cooking. For such a girl to marry such a man would be neither more nor less than a social fraud, unless she shall before engagement inform him of her ignorance on the subject. It is well then to have these schools of cookery to which girls whose mothers have not taught them the art can go and learn—and we hope that the day is near at hand when girls that are candidates for matrimony will pride themselves more on their ability to cook a good dinner than on their ability to dance, sing, play, or fool away precious time on less useful things. Then the world will be better and the people happier than they are now, and the youth that shall be born in the land will be of greater bone, tougher sinew, and of purer blood.

EVERY young man ought to take a vacation, especially if he has a girl. It will enable her to retire at an early hour when he is away, and thus get a much-needed rest.—Rome Sentinel.

ELECTRICITY FOR A HORSE.

"About three weeks ago you had an item in your paper telling about a new scheme for curing balky horses. It was an electric battery to be placed in the buggy with wires running to the horse's bit, and when the horse balked the instructions were to touch a button with the foot, when the electric current would go to the horse's mouth, take his attention from his balkiness, and he would get along all right. Do you remember such an item?"

The editor scratched the bald spot on his head, looked wise and said he did remember something about it, and asked the visitor if he had purchased a battery and tried it.

"Tried it!" said he, as he picked up one of the crutches and fixed the splints on his sprained arm, "yes, sir, I tried it, and it is a wonder that I am spared to come in and maul you. I live out near Eagle, and have got an old mare that has been balky, off and on, for sixteen years. I read about that battery, and sent to Chicago and got one and rigged it up in the bottom of a wagon, and fixed the wire in the bit just as you said. One morning, about a week ago, I hitched up the old mare to take a few cans of milk to the cheese factory, and I was afraid she would balk so I could cure her. Well, I got almost to the cheese factory, and the old mare balked. I touched the bottom with my foot, and I could see that the old mare got the shock, because she stuck up her ears and shook her head. Just as I stepped on the bottom again, to give her the second dose, she switched her tail around and caught the wire, which was quite slack, and wound it around her tail about four times, and my foot was on the bottom. Oh, how she kicked! I forgot to take my foot off the bottom, in the excitement, and kept the electric current going, and the air was full of heels, and pieces of wagon, and milk cans, and me. She seemed to have the strength of a hundred horses, and it seemed to me as if the whole conveyance, horse and all, went over the trees as though carried by a cyclone. I and the wagon came down first, and then it began to hail milk cans and rain milk, and the old mare stood there with the copper wire wound around her tail, kicking and pawing milk cans, and tipping pieces of wagon on me. The boss of the cheese factory got me by one leg and pulled me out of the wreck, and one of the neighbors got hold of the battery and pulled the wire off from around the mare's tail, and she went to eating grass, and drinking some of the milk that had collected in a hole in the road, and they got me home, and I have been in bed ever since till this morning. I came in on the train to see what you would give to settle. I don't want to be hard on any man that is struggling along to build up a business, but it does seem to me there ought to be a responsibility somewhere for such outrages."

The editor looked wise some more, and finally told the man that if he had not paid a royalty for the use of the electric balky horse persuader he was liable to be arrested by a United States marshal and taken to New Jersey for trial on a charge of infringement on a patent, and that it would cost him thousands of dollars.

BASE BALL MEN'S SALARIES.

"There is a good deal of head work about base ball," said Manager J. J. Mutrie, the other day, at the polo grounds, "and the proof of it is seen in the considerable number of collegians and students who have made their mark in it, and adopted it as a profession. So far as the remuneration is concerned, there is every reason why they should do so, for first-class base ball players now receive salaries which would be considered prizes by many young ministers, lawyers and doctors. There are now thirty-one professional clubs—eight in the American Association, seven in the Inter-State Association, eight in the North western League. This requires say 350 skilled players, and the competition to secure the best has gradually run up the salaries, until it is not an uncommon thing for a first-class player to receive more than $6,000 for eight months' work. An ordinary salary is from $1,200 to $2,500 for a season. The combined salaries of the Metropolitan team amount to $30,000, and those of the New York League to about the same sum.—You may judge how sharp the competition is when Al. Reach, manager of the Philadelphia team, offered $10,000 a season for four men, and could not get them. Do you see that young fellow in the Chicago nine who just caught that ball so beautifully in the center field? He was getting $10 a week working in a paper mill not long ago. This season he refused an engagement at $2,500 and must be getting more.

The contracts with professional players are now so strict that only men who have pretty good habits can live up to them. From the opening of the season in April to the close in November a professional must play in and about 150 games. To do this he must be temperate, must take regular sleep, and must keep in good health. It is erroneous to suppose that professional players are sluggers and rowdies or drunkards. Such men do not last long in prominent positions now. A professional player is liable to expulsion if he is seen in a pool room, and gambling is strictly prohibited.—New York Sun.

THE QUESTION OF JOINING A LODGE.—A woman who has been married four weeks to a clerk in an agricultural implement agency in a country town, writes to know what Peck's Sun thinks about her husband's joining a Masonic or Odd Fellows' lodge. She says they have talked it over themselves, and he is twenty-one years old, gets $14 a week and they are boarding with her aunt, and they have agreed to leave it to Peck's Sun. This paper does not wish to encourage or discourage any young man from joining any order that he feels it his duty to join; but when a man becomes of age and gets married, he has other duties to perform the first year which are more important than joining a lodge. Several things are liable to occur that will make the $14 a week look tired without joining a lodge. The girl that the young man has married
