SEEK MAN WHO CAUSED PANIC

$600 Reward For Person Who Called "Fire" in Theatre.

28 KILLED IN CRUSH

Victims Smothered In Crush In Opera House at Canonsburg, Pa., When Film Exploded.

Rewards have been offered for the arrest and conviction of the person who cried "Fire!" in the Morgan Opera house at Canonsburg, Pa., during a moving picture show, causing a panic in which twenty-eight persons were trampled to death and at least forty others hurt.

The police fear that if he is captured he will be dealt with violently, as threats are heard on all sides. A report was circulated that a suspect had been arrested. In less than five minutes 1000 persons started on a run for the little lockup, but were told that it was all a mistake and that no arrests had been made.

Then, too, the coroner and his assistants are preparing for the searching inquiry, which is looked to to lay bare all the facts.

Two residents of Canonsburg are said to have obtained the roll of films and to have placed it in a safe to be used as evidence when the inquest is held.

John McCullough, operator of the moving picture machine, had just thrown the subject of the next series of pictures on the screen, entitled "A Little Girl Shall Lead Them," when the film exploded and the asbestos cabinet was filled with flames. For several moments the audience, numbering upward of 1500, was totally unaware of the accident, and the operator heroically fought down the flames and succeeded in extinguishing them.

Then, his hands burned and almost suffocated, he opened the door of the little box and staggered out. With the opening of the door a dense cloud of smoke poured into the auditorium.

At this moment some person yelled 'Fire!" The spectators turned in their seats, saw the smoke, jumped to their feet and then started the awful rush for the lone doorway leading to the narrow, eight-foot stairway.

At the stairway they collided and jammed into probably 200 other persons who were awaiting the end of the performance to take the places of those who had seen the show. Immediately the narrow stairway was packed and jammed ten feet high with the dead and dying, the shrieking injured and the screaming unhurt, while the crowds of townspeople rushed to the scene and added confusion to the din.

Within a few moments after the film flashed and the panic started the fire whistles were blown. Practically the entire population of the town responded and packed in narrow Pike street, from which the fatal theater entrance led. All of them were apparently terror stricken and could give little aid. The only cool persons were the firemen and the several members of the police force.

The removal of the dead was the only work left for the firemen, and in it the cooler ones of the spectators joined.

Pathetic scenes followed the disaster, when friends and relatives of the twenty-eight victims sought to identify bodies at McNary's and Hopper Bros.' morgues. Many of the mutilated and all but dismembered bodies were gathered together at the main entrance of the building where grief stricken relative tried to identify them.

The bodies were later removed to the morgue. While the room thronged thicker and thicker with women alternately covering their faces, they wept bitterly as they tried to identify missing loved ones. Men brok down as they busied themselves about the same sad duty.

Sends Himself to Jail.

J. A. Gilder walked into the office of County Attorney Harmon, at Enid, Okla., and made a demand for a warrant for his own arrest. He said he had been guilty of selling liquor contrary to the prohibition law of the state and would sign an information. When taken before County Judge Scott Gilder pleaded guilty and received a fine of $50 and thirty days' imprisonment. He is serving the sentence.

The Drum Major.

The dignitary known as drum major was not generally recognized in the English army till the close of the reign of Charles I. Corporal punishment up to the time of William III. was executed by the provost marshal and his deputies, but afterward the drummer was intrusted with the task. Among the records of the Coldstream guards is an order that "the drum major be answerable that no cat has more than nine tails." In 1661 a drum major of the army received 1s. 6d. pay per diem.—London Mail.

SECRETARY WILSON.

Who Was on the Stand In Pure Food Probe.

Puts the Blame on Dr. Wiley.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson, testifying before the house investigating committee, severely criticised Dr. H. W. Wiley, of the bureau of chemistry, for his course in regard to pure food and drug work, and told in a more or less general way of the "family troubles" which led to the recommendation for Dr. Wiley's dismissal.

Secretary Wilson declared that Dr. Wiley, in his testimony before the committee, had withheld material matters in regard to the controversy over sulphur dioxide in fruit. He complained that Dr. Wiley did not come to him to discuss subjects about which he had talked freely to the investigating committee and promised to have a little chat with the chief of the bureau of chemistry when he returned from a week's vacation. In appointing the pure food and drug inspection board Secretary Wilson said he considered Dr. Wiley had been done a kindness rather than insulted as a chemist.

Secretary Wilson shifted all responsibility for he employment of Dr. H. H. Rusby to Dr. Wiley. He said that Dr. Wiley was without question the head of the bureau. Asked about his object in creating a pure food and drug inspection board, the secretary said that he felt more power attached to a board decision than to a one-man decision.

Third Rail Kills Nine-Year-Old Boy.

While the three Gaskill brothers, of Landisville, N. J., were frogging in Buena Vista swamp, an argument took place about the power of the third rail of the West Jersey and Seashore railroad.

Henry, nine years old, told his little brothers that he knew all about how to fool the third rail, and invited them to the railroad, a short distance away, to see the fun.

As the boys climbed down the embankment to the tracks, Henry stumbled and fell headlong, connecting his body with the third rail and the regular rails of the road. He was dead in a moment, and his brothers were hurled several feet when they attempted to haul his body from the tracks.

Condemns Life In Flats.

"I am convinced that an all-wise God never intended human beings to live in flats," said Edward R. Pritchard, secretary of the Chicago health department, in addressing the Chicago Association of Commerce.

"A parent who places a child in a flat endangers its health and robs it of a real home. Some flats may be better than others, but all are bad."

Bar Profanity on the Canal.

Not even a gang boss is to be allowed to use profanity on the Panama cana.. Colonel George W. Goethals, chief engineer, has just issued an order, declaring that the use of profane or abusive language by foremen or others when addressing subordinates will be not be tolerated.

Dog Bite May Cost Finger.

A pet collie dog bit Mrs. Mary Finn, of Paterson, N. J., in the finger when she attempted to give medicine to it for the colic, and doctors said she probably will lose the finger. The dog also bit her son when he drove the animal away.

Kitten Has Six Feet.

A cat with two feet on each of her front legs, belonging to Judge L. J. Martine, of Newton, N. J., has just given birth to a kitten similarly deformed. The kitten's additional feet are perfectly formed.

TO A CRYSTAL SPRING.

I sing of a spring
On the farm in the hills,
Whose waters, so pure and so cold,
Trickle up through the rocks,
Then go singing in rills
Through green meadows and wheat fields of gold.

How the larks carol there,
Where the wild roses fair
Draw their life from thy pure, limpid pool,
And the thrush from the tree
Sings an anthem to thee,
Crystal spring, purling water so cool.

There the cows and the sheep,
Standing in grasses deep,
Bow their heads to thy life giving rill,
And the boy, whistling gay
From the field far away,
Comes to thee his brown jug to fill.

Oh, the lingering sips
That I took with my lips
As I dipped my hot face in thy cool!
And how often the time
That I dropped down a line
To ensnare the sly trout in thy pool.

Thirsty fowls of the air
As they quaff sweet drink there
Raise their eyes full of thanks to the blue.
Weary pilgrims that pass
As they kneel in the grass
Praise their Maker, oh, cool spring for you.
