The ... ENT NEWS:
CHESTERTOWN - JUNE 25, 1887

A FOE IN THE LAND.

BY MRS. L. H. WASHINGTON.

There's an enemy at hand
Shall we forward march or stand
While there is within our land a deadly foe?
For that charge is on the soul
Lurking in the sparkling bowl
Luring on to folly, ruin, crime and woe.

CHO:—On, on, on the foe is marching,
Leading to death a mighty throng
Let us rally at the call
Rally bravely, one and all,
God is leading in the battle 'gainst the wrong.

'Tis a foe with smiling face,
Who, with charming, winsome grace,
Binds his victim first with pallest silken bonds,
But his power will increase,
He will banish joy and peace
As he holds with fatal grasp, and iron hand.

CHO:—
Forward for that noble son,
Rally for the precious one,
Upon whom the light and joy of life depend;
Are thy treasures all secure?
Has thou nothing to endure?
Rally then with loving heart for neighbor, friend.

CHO:—
Forward march without delay,
Or the foe may win the day,
He is raising new recruits on every hand;
Forward with the battle cry.
Those we have may surely die,
If we do not route the foe within our land.

CHO:—

Hints to Swimmers.

"When the bathing season arrives," remarked a natatorium professor the other day, "we'll hear of the usual maximum of drowning cases, and among them, as usual, a fair share of expert swimmers. The chief reason why good swimmers are so often drowned when they are accidentally thrown into the water is because the shock causes them to lose their presence of mind. The loss of presence of mind leads to paralysis of body, or to such wild exertions as accelerate drowning, instead of contributing to preservation. The ability to behave wisely in case of sudden accidents can only be acquired by experience, just as everything else has to be acquired. The theory of the matter can be taught in swimming schools, but the practice must be acquired by experience. Hence, in some of the European swimming schools, says the Hebrew Journal, the pupils are taken out boat-riding and purposely upset, as though the upsetting were accidental. They are also suddenly pushed overboard, and subjected to all manner of prepared accidents, so as to accustom them to acting in emergencies. In this way they learn how to behave in case of real accidents, and are protected against the loss of their presence of mind on occasions of danger on the water. They are also taught to have faith in the sustaining power of the water itself. They get to know that the water will sustain them if they will only render it the least help.

A finger laid upon an oar, or the gunwale of an overturned boat, or a board, or almost any floating substance, will sustain the human body in calm water. Persons who have been properly taught, and have acquired the habit of acting with self-possession in the water when they are upset, do not attempt to climb upon the overturned boat, but simply take hold of it and quietly support themselves. A boat half filled with water, or completely overturned, will support as many persons as can get their hands upon the gunwale, if they behave quietly. In a case of accident, a person who understands and acts in accordance with these facts would stand a better chance of being saved, even if he were a poor swimmer, than an expert swimmer would stand who should lose his presence of mind.

Effect of Odors.

The aroma of red cedar is fatal to housemoths; the aroma of black walnut leaves is fatal to fleas. It is a matter of common observation that persons engaged in the business of making shingles from odoriferous cypress timber in malarial districts are rarely if ever, affected by malarial diseases; and that persons engaged in gathering and distilling turpentine do not suffer from either malarial diseases or consumption. It is said that when cholera was epidemic in Memphis, Tenn., persons working in livery stables were entirely exempt from it. It is affirmed that since the destruction of the clove trees on the island of Ternate the colony has suffered from epidemics unknown before; and in times when cholera has prevailed in London and Paris those employed in the perfumery factories have escaped its ravages.

Too Much Sponge Cake.

They are telling in Boston of two or three Japanese students of rank who have been in the habit of dining each Sunday at the residence of one of the solid citizens of the Hub. On a recent Sunday one was absent, and when the host asked why, one of the guests said solemnly, "Oh, he cannot come. He very, very dissipated!" The host thought it best not to make any further inquiry at the time, but after the meal he ventured to ask the same young man in private, "You say Mr. Nim Shi is not well?" "No; he not well—he very dissipated." "He hasn't been drinking?" "Oh, no, no! He no drunk." "Not gambling?" "No, no! He no gamble." "May I ask what he has been doing, then?" "Oh, he very dissipated. He eat sponge cake allee time—he all broke up now."

A New Asparagus.

Some little interest has been excited by the announcement of the discovery of a new and remarkable variety of asparagus on the steppes of Akhal-Tekin. It has not been botanically identified, but it is represented as growing perfectly wild, the stalks being nearly as thick as a man's arm and attaining a height of five or six feet, so that one of them is said to suffice ten Russian soldiers for a meal. If the preference of experts for wild asparagus finds justification in this variety—and its flavor is described as equal to that of the best European asparagus—asparagus lovers may have a good time before them.—Scientific Amer.

The Geese Objected To It.

A barrow-shaped flock of wild geese, the Waterbury (Conn.) American says, went northward over the city recently. They seemed to attend sharply to the business of traveling until they spied one of the numerous kites the boys in the northern portion of the city were flying. This kite was uncommonly high in the air and the geese objected to it. At least they circled about it two or three times, and then four of their number, delegated for the purpose, attacked the kite and tore it into shreds, and went on their way.

ACCORDING to an eminent English authority a goose lives fifty years. It then becomes a boarding-house delicacy.—Phila. North American.

A REMEDY FOUND AT LAST TO CURE
HOG CHOLERA!
LIEBERMAN'S
Hog Cholera Remedy
WILL POSITIVELY CURE
AND PREVENT HOG
CHOLERA!
IT is not a new remedy, but has been tried and experimented with for two years and found that it used when the hogs are first attacked that it will cure the Diseased Hogs and prevent the contagion from spreading to the others in the same pen.
SYMPTOMS OF HOG CHOLERA:
It is essentially a malarial fever. The animal however fierce and obstinate formerly is found more gentle and tractable; it shows decided signs of fever, elevated temperature alternating with cold shivers; the ears are more or less loped; hindquarters weak and the hog shows a strong tendency to lie down on the least provocation and hide in the litter, rising only when wanting to drink; no appetite but great thirst. It often stands drawn together, with arched back and tucked-up abdomen. Its gait is staggering and its grunt weak. Its cough is hard and has a peculiar hollow sound, not easy to describe. It breathes hard, with pumping flanks and soon loses flesh. The skin is harsh and scaly and soon becomes discolored with purplish patches around the snout, between the forelegs and inside the thighs.
PRICE 50 CENTS, BY MAIL 75 CENTS.
