THE BRIDGE WE DO NOT CROSS.

How oft we trouble borrow,
And suffer mental pain,
Conjuring clouds tomorrow
While yet no sign of rain.
Future gloom foreboding
At night on pillows toss,
In fear of overloading
The bridge we do not cross.

From road there is no turning
That we can see just now,
Trouble ahead discerning,
To avoid we know not how,
And so we roll and tumble
At night, with sleep a loss,
And hear the distant rumble
On bridge we do not cross.

We see no silver lining
On clouds our fancy paints,
No stars through rifts are shining,
Blackness our path attaints,
When daylight shows our folly,
We then may count the cost,
Passing streams of melancholy,
The bridge we have not crossed.

Septic Skirts.

From Scientific American.

The streets of our great cities are not kept as clean as they should be, and probably they will not be kept scrupulously clean until automobiles have entirely replaced horse-drawn vehicles. The pavement is also subjected to pollution in many ways, as from expectoration, etc. Enough has been said to indicate the source and nature of some of the most prevalent of nuisances of the streets and pavements, and it will be generally admitted that under the present conditions of life a certain amount of such pollution must exit, but it does not necessarily follow that this shall be brought indoors. At the present time a large number of women sweep through the streets with their skirts and bring with them, wherever they go, the abominable filth which they have taken up, which is by courtesy called "dust." Various devices have been tried to keep dresses from dragging, but most of them have been unsuccessful. The management of a long gown is a difficult matter, and the habit has arisen of seizing the upper part of the skirt and holding it in a bunch. This pratice can be commended neither from a physiological nor from an artistic point of view. Fortunately, the short skirt is coming into fashion, and the medical journals especially commend the sensible walking gown which is now being quite generally adopted. These skirts will prevent the importation into private houses of pathogenic microbes.

There are to-day, in all countries, more than 3,000,000 Italian emigrants.

It Always Ends That Way.

They had just returned from their bridal tour when the husband gently pulled her ear and said:

"Now, let us speak of buisness. While half of what I have belongs to you, I do not propose that you shall have to beg for your half. Being the head of the house, I shall carry the wallet, but I proyose to hand you a certain sum every Saturday night. It will be pin-money."

"How good you are, dear," she exclaimed.

"I think it is only just and right. I know a dozen married men whose wives have almost to go on their knees to get a dollar. I could kick such a man! How much do you think you can use a week?"

"A dollar, perhaps."

"A dollar! My wife trying to get along on a dollar a week? Why, you little darling, you shall have at least $10, and if that is not sufficient I shall make it $20 or $30."

It was the old story over again. He cut her down to $8, $7, $5, $4, $2, and at length, when they had been married about four months and she asked him for a dollar, he turned on her with:

"What! More money! Do you think I've got a gold mine? What on earth do you want money for?"

Cleaning Paper Money.

It is not generally known that a great deal of the paper money that is constantly circulating about gets frequent washing in the same way as the house wife or maid goes at the dirty clothes on a Monday morning. In some banks there is a regular washday every month, usually at the beginning, when o clerk may be seen bent over a tub and rubbing real money up and down a washboard. The dirty greenbacks that have been saved up for a month are soaped and rubbed just like handkerchiefs and socks, and are run through a wringer before being put ont to dry. The paper currency may be handled somewhat roughly, as it does not tear, because there is in it a great deal of silk and linen. After the notes have been passed through the wringer they are hung on a line stetched in the bank clerks' department. Said one clerk the other day: "I wash about a hundred notes every month, and when I am done you can hardly tell them from new money. The washing strengthens as well as cleans the notes."
