THE BOUQUET.

"MUCH YET REMAINS UNSUNG."

TO THE DEPARTED.

Sleep on—for thou art calm at last;
And all the wrongs and all the woes
That marked thy weary wanderings past,
Have left thee to thy long repose.—
Thy sun of life midst tempests rose,
In storms and darkness hath it set;
Yet rays of glory, at its close,
Burst forth, whose lustre, lingering yet,
Reveals to faith's uplifted eye,
How blest thine immortality!

Yes—thine is now a brighter doom,
A bliss unchanging as divine;
While he who shared thine hours of gloom,
Whose tears were even mixed with thine,
Is left to suffer and repine—
Oh not repine!—sad heart be still!
And let it teach thee to resign,
And bend thee to thy Father's will,
That she; whose sorrows were thine own,
Is blest at length—though blest alone!

I will not mourn thee, dearest—no!—
As one whose hope is quenched for aye,
The tears unceasing shall not flow
Which earth nor heaven can wipe away,
Rather from realms of cloudless day,
A light shall pierce the circling gloom,
To cheer me on my weary way,
And guide the wanderer to his home;—
A home, where all that grieved before,
Is known—or is deplored—no more!

AGRICULTURAL

EXHIBITION & FAIR

At a meeting of the Board of the "Dorchester Agricultural Society" held at the residence of Dr. Joseph E. Muse, in Cambridge, on the 6th of February, 1826; Present,

Joseph E. Muse, President.
Thos. Woolford, } Vice Presidents.
Levin Lake, }
William Hughlett. }
William V. Murray. } Curators.
John R. Pitt. }
John R. Steele. }
Thomas Hayward. }

After the transaction of the ordinary business, a member moved the following resolution which was adopted and ordered to be published:—

Resolved—That the following communication be published three weeks in the Cambridge Chronicle.

The Board of Curators of the Dorchester Agricultural Society, tender their acknowledgements to those farmers of Dorchester who by their zealous co-operative exertions have exhibited at the Cattle Show of last year, in Cambridge, the most unequivocal indications of a successful issue to the enterprise, and most satisfactorily solved the fastidious problem of the practicability of county cattle shows.

The Board earnestly invite those who have contributed to this useful institution, to continue their liberal exertions for its promotion; and they take this occasion to say, that they shall consider the membership of all those who do not notify the Secretary by the first day of April next, of their wish to withdraw, as continued for the present year; the necessity of which measure is too obvious to require explanation; and those, who from want of confidence in the experiment, have withheld their patronage, they hope are now convinced by the ample demonstrations submitted on November, 10th ult. that their apprehensions, though perhaps prudent, were not well founded—The Board invite such, generously to acknowledge their conviction of the success and obvious utility of this association, and to attest it by their prompt membership, and future exertions in its behalf.

The following scheme of premiums was then submitted to the Board, and adopted, for the next Cattle Show.
