ELECTION—TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 6TH, 1900.

The Populistic Democrats should drop Jefferson as their patron saint and adopt Bryan in his stead. It is a libel on Jefferson to call him a Democrat of the Bryan type.

Strange things happen in politics and one of the most singular in recent years is the support of the Populist candidate for the Presidency by the Baltimore Sun.

Hon. Charles Denby, of Indiana, Ex-United States Minister to China, a life-long Democrat, is out in a letter announcing his intention to support McKinley. He discusses the Philippines question at length and shows up Mr. Bryan, the Populist-Democratic candidate for President in a very unenviable light. He brings out with great force the fact that it was mainly through the efforts of Mr. Bryan that the treaty with Spain, by which the Philippines were ceded to the United States for the consideration of twenty millions of dollars, was ratified by the Senate and our title to the archipelago perfected. The inconsisteney of Mr. Bryan's course at this time is exhibited in a way that should make him blush with shame for the part he is now playing in the matter.

JEFFERSON AGAINST THEM.

The claim of modern Democrats that Thomas Jefferson was the founder of their party and the author of the dogmas to which they adhere to-day is flippant, false and utterly baseless. It was conclusively shown during the campaign of 1896 that Jefferson never had any sympathy with an unsound currency and that his views on the subject were the very antipodes of Bryan's 16 to 1 theory. While the Democrats still adhere, by the declaration of their platform, to that heresy, they have made another issue, and are striving hard to make it paramount in the contest, with which Jefferson's whole career was at variance, and to which his views, freely expressed, were absolutely hostile. This is the issue of territorial expansion and imperialism. He was a pronounced expansionist and imperialist, and the proof of this assertion is to be found in his writings. Funk & Wagnalls, of New York, have recently issued "A Comprehensive Collection of the Views" of Mr. Jefferson, edited by John P. Foley and entitled "The Jeffersonian Cyclopedia," which quotes freely from his views on every subject of public interest in his day. This volume gives the authority from which its quotations are made and is thoroughly reliable in every respect. Take this from his second inaugural address in 1805:

"I know," he said, "that the acquisition of Louisiana has been disapproved by some from a candid apprehension that the enlargement of territory would endanger its union. But who can measure the extent to which the federative principle may operate effectually? The larger our association the less will it be shaken by local passions."

To Monroe he wrote:

"I candidly confess that I have ever looked on Cuba as the most interesting addition which could ever be made to our system of States."—Ford's Edition, Vol. X, page 278.

And this to Elbridge Gerry:

"The extent of our territory secures it from the vindictive passions of the petty incorporations of Greece."—Ford's Ed., Vol. 6, page 63.

Writing to Monroe again, in speaking of the absorption of the Spanish Possessions, he said:

"However our present interests may restrain us within our limits it is impossible not to look forward to distant times, when our rapid multiplication will expand itself beyond those limits and cover the whole Northern, if not the Southern continent.

That is sufficiently explicit to satisfy the most incredulous that Jefferson was an expansionist of expansionists. But there is more of it. In "Letters to M. de Marbois, VII, 77 (M. 1817,)" he said.

"I have much confidence that we shall proceed successfully for ages to come and that, contrary to the principle of Montesquieu, it will be seen that the larger the extent of country the more firm its republican structure."

Jefferson was not averse, either, to extending our territorial limits by force, if necessary, as see the following to Governor Claiborne, XV, 487, (W. May, 1803.):

"I consider war between France and England as unavoidable. * * * * In this conflict our neutrality will be cheaply purchased by a cession of the island of New Orleans and the Floridas; because, taking part in the war, we could so certainly seize and securely hold them and more. And although it would be unwise in us to let such an opportunity pass of obtaining the necessary accession to our territory even by force, if not obtainable otherwise, yet it is infinitely more desirable to obtain it with the blessing of neutrality rather than the curse of war."

This is not much short of the emphatic declaration of the Ostend Manifesto of Buchanan, Mason and Slidell, in 1855, that we should acquire Cuba, by purchase, if possible, or by force, if necessary. It shows that expansion was a fixed principle of the genuine Democratic party in its early history and up to and past the middle of the nineteenth century. One more quotation, according to which, taking the interpretation of the Bryanites, who falsely call themselves Democrats, Jefferson was, to all intents and purposes, an Imperialist. In writing to President Madison, in 1809, he said:

"I am persuaded no Constitution was ever before so well calculated as ours for extensive empire and self-government." Ford's Ed., Vol. 5, page 444."

Taking these utterances of Jefferson as a test of pure Democracy, can any Bryan Democrat reconcile himself to the belief that he is a genuine political descendant of the author of the Declaration of Independence? Is it a matter of wonder that Jefferson, having in anticipation, perhaps, the present heresy, should have said? "I tremble for my country when I remember that God is just?"

The new census gives Baltimore a population of 508,957, an increase of 75,518 since 1890, or only 17.15 per cent. This is disappointing to the people of the city and of the State also. Maryland people take pride in their metropolis and watch its increase in substantial wealth and population with constant interest. There is reason to suppose that the enumeration has been far from accurate—not from neglect of duty on the part of the enumerators, but because the census was taken at a time when large numbers of residents of Baltimore were engaged outside of the city at berry picking and other employments, and many citizens had closed their houses for the summer.

The population of New York City, under the new census, is 3,437,202. But this is Greater New York and includes Brooklyn and other adjacent places. The area of this great city is 307½ square miles. Chicago, with a population of 1,698,575, covers 190½ square miles of territory. Philadelphia includes 129 square miles and has a population of 1,293,697. St. Louis, which covers 62½ square miles, has a population of 575,238. Cleveland's 33 square miles contain a population of 381,768; Buffalo's 42 square miles a population of 352,219; Cincinnati's 35½ square miles a population of 325,902. Baltimore, with a population of 508,957, has an area of only 32 square miles. Most of the other cities referred to favor expansion of their local limits.

As the computation of the recent census progresses some idea of the aggregate population of the United States can be formed and the census authorities place the figures, approximately, at seventy-five millions. Seventeen thousand of the 52,600 census districts have been counted and show a population of 25,000,000. If this ratio could be maintained the population would reach 77,000,000, but some falling off is expected.

The National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, in session at Chicago, Ills., selected Judge Leo Rassieur, of St. Louis, Mo., grand commander, on Thursday. D. C. Milliken, of Maine, was elected senior vice commander; Frank Seamons, of Tenn., junior vice commander; John A. Wilkins, of Ohio, surgeon general; Rev. A. Drahms, of California, chaplain. The order has a membership of over 300,000.

The American Minister to China will be ordered to leave Pekin and the American troops with him. This government will endeavor to induce the other Powers to join in opening up the way for the return of the Imperial Family to Pekin so that negotiations for the restoration of order may be taken and the integrity of the Chinese Empire be preserved.

Mr. Edward Elmer Harn, a member of the Frederick county bar, died at his home in Unionville, a few days ago, at the age of twenty-five rears, of consumption. Mr. Harn was an active young Republican. In 1897 he was elected a member of the House of Delegates, on the Republican ticket, and served during the succeeding term.

CURED OF CHRONIC DIARRHOEA AFTER THIRTY YEARS OF SUFFERING.
