In the Baltimore Sun's report of the proceedings of the House of Correction Board on Thursday, the superintendent, J. Jesse Moore, is credited with stating that the cost of feeding the 550 prisoners in the institution is 5½ cents per day each. If that be the total cost the statement is almost incredible. What sort of food can be furnished for so small a sum? The House of Correction authorities must have been studying the works of Confucius.

The anti-expansionists don't believe the insurrectionary soldiers in the Philippines, who are surrendering to the forces of the United States and taking the oath of allegiance to this government, are sincere in their action, but that they will again, at the first opportunity, take up arms against American authority. The foolishness of this view will be apparent when it is remembered that with themselves these insurrectionists also surrender their arms, stores and all military equipments and are thus divested of all means of warfare.

PARTY RECORDS ON CUBAN QUESTION.

There are many Cuban annexationists in the United States, but annexation is certainly not the policy or purpose of the present Administration. Undoubtedly President McKinley is in good faith endeavoring to promote the organization of a government, by the Cubans themselves, which will be able to stand alone. He approves, however, of the action of Congress which binds Cuba to such constitutional action as will ensure her proper attitude toward the United States in the future. The Cuban Commissioners who visited Washington last week were not left in doubt about the views of the Administration on that point. They learned that the purpose of this government is to insist upon proper guarantees in the premises. They learned a good deal more than this however. The record of the past attitude of parties in this country in relation to Cuban annexation was revealed to them and they learned that the Democrats were, as a rule, the annexationists, while their opponents were generally opposed to such a proceeding.

Mr. Jefferson, the Apostle of Democracy, was a strong annexationist and an expansionist as well. In a letter to President Madison, written April 27th, 1809, less than two months after the beginning of the latter's first term as the National Executive, he argued in favor of the acquisition of Cuba by the United States. His views on the subject never underwent a change, for twice in June, 1823, he wrote to President Monroe to the same effect. He evidently regarded the acquisition of Cuba at that time as intensely desirable. The letters referred to were written June 11 and 23, respectively, and in that on the latter date he said: "Her (Cuba's) addition to our confederacy is exactly what is wanted to round out our power as a nation to the point of its utmost interest." He evidently regarded action looking to that result as not only desirable but urgent. In the same year John Quincy Adams, then President Monroe's Secretary of State, expressed the views of the Administration as favorable to the acquisition of Cuba. Mr. Monroe is claimed to have been a Democrat. President Polk, a Democrat, in 1848 instructed the American Minister at Madrid to propose the purchase of Cuba from Spain, an offer which was indignantly rejected as an insult.

The SENTINEL has heretofore called attention to the Ostend Manifesto. This was a paper prepared in 1854 by the United States Ministers at London, Paris and Madrid, all Democrats, of course, in which they advised and urged the Secretary of State that a fair offer should be made to Spain for the purchase of Cuba, and that, if it were rejected, the island should then be taken by force. One of these Ministers, Mr. Buchanan, became President of the United States in 1857, and in his second, third and fourth annual messages urged the purchase of Cuba and declared that the possession of the island would be of great importance to the United States.

The record of the opposition to the Democratic party on the Cuban question, while of less extent, is not less emphatic; but it is on the other side. For instance, Henry Clay, then Secretary of State, wrote to Edward Everett, in April, 1827, that if the acquisition of Cuba were desirable there was then "no reasonable prospect of effecting that object." The Cuban question was not referred to again by any anti-Democratic administration until 1869, when President Grant, in his first annual message, declared that the United States had no disposition to interfere with the Spanish ownership of Cuba, but hoped to see the island eventually become an independent power. Hamilton Fish, President's Grant's Secretary of State, in February, 1874, asserted that Cuba ought to belong to the great family of American republics" and that "the desire of independence an the part of the Cubans is a natural and legitimate aspiration." This aspiration, he said, was approved by the United States.

Thus far, it must be said and acknowledged, that no Republican Administration has taken any other ground upon the question. During President McKinley's first term the United States delivered Cuba from the galling yoke of Spain, and this government is now employing its best efforts to establish an independent and self-govering nation upon the island. Whether the effort will succeed is problematical, but it will be given an honest trial. No other course could be pursued with honor by the United States, and charges of insincerity and ulterior motives made by the Democratic party, against the Administration of President McKinley, are unjust and without foundation in fact. If Cuba ever comes to the United States during a Republican Administration, it will be by the voluntary action of her people.

The 1-cent, 2-cent, 4-cent and 8 cent stamps of the new Pan-American series were placed on sale on Wednesday. They are printed in different colors and bear respectively pictures of a steamship, a railroad train, an automobile and a lock on the Sault Ste. Marie canal.

A lot of crank alumni of Harvard College have petitioned the governors of that institution against a proposal to confer the honorary title of Doctor of Laws upon President McKinley. It is needless to say that the ground of their objection is what they allege to be his imperialism. The authorities of the institution, however, have been deaf to their piteous plea and the President will get his degree. Having been twice elected President of this great nation by the people, he will probably not regard himself as highly honored by Harvard's action in the matter; nor would he have been at all disgraced if the action had been otherwise. The Filipinos are rapidly learning that the kind of liberty they will enjoy under the American flag is far preferable to the dictatorship of Aguinaldo, but the opponents of the Philippine policy of the United States Government cannot be convinced, by sense or reason, of their egregious error.

The supporters of Rasin and of the old Ring in Baltimore are greatly exercised over the proceedings of the Reform League. The league has not forgotten the conditions which prevailed in Baltimore when Rasin and his henchmen formerly dominated the city. Most citizens, indeed, have a lively recollection of the unsavory acts of the city boss and his machine at that time, and those who desire honest government and the maintenance of the political rights of the people, do not regard the danger of a return to that condition with pleasure. The league, in the membership of which there are numbers of prominent Democrats and influential citizens, is antagonizing Rasin's nominations for the city council in no uncertain manner and the boss and the creatures of his bounty are evidently in fear of the consequences of this opposition. The people of Maryland, too, have a deep interest in the matter, as Rasin, the city boss, is only the lieutenant of the greater boss, who was so roundly denounced by a Democratic convention in Carroll county, some years ago.

The President in the South.

At all the towns at which the train, which is bearing President McKinley through the Southern States, on the first part of his trip to the Pacific Coast, halts, he is receiving marked demonstrations of regard from the people. Even in towns which the train passes without stopping many people congregate to see it go by. There is fervid enthusiasm in the greetings extended and in the public receptions given the Executive of the Nation and he hears many expressions of patriotism and appreciation of his bearing toward the South during his Administration. Mrs. McKinley is also the recipient of many kindly attentions. The Baltimore Evening Star—an excellent newspaper, by the way, barring its politics—expresses the opinion that this uprising of the Southern people to greet the President is purely and solely an evidence of their respect for the great office he holds and has no personal element whatever in it. This we believe to be a mistake. President McKinley has wisely used his influence as the Chief Magistrate of the Nation to prevent drastic legislation in relation to the course of the South in restricting the suffrage. He has done much to further the growth of a spirit of amity and good feeling between the sections and to relieve the Southern people of their fears of federal interference with the extent of their representation in the National House of Representatives, a course which has gained for him their confidence and regard in a very considerable degree.

There may be no political significence in the exhibition of enthusiasm for a Republican President of the country, but there is reason to believe the South is learning that the policies of the Republican party are better calculated to promote its prosperity than are the vagaries of modern Democracy, and that when once it can be fully assured that it will not be interfered with in the management of its internal affairs Republicanism will have a remarkable growth in that section.

Rural Free Delivery Routes.

Special Agent M. S. Plummer, of the Postoffice Department, has mapped out a rural free-delivery route to run from Reisterstown west to the Carroll county line. Mr. Thomas Logue has been recommended as the carrier for the route and Mr. Raymond Russell will be his substitute. The carrier will leave Reisterstown about 6 o'clock in the morning and return in time to dispatch mail on the 1.52 P. M. train going south. The proposed route is 20 miles in length and will reach 163 families. It extends as follows:

West from Reisterstown on Berryman's lane to J. Gore's road, on Mr. Gore's road to Deer Park road, north thereon to Long bridge, returning by Nicodemus road to Berryman's lane, west to the Bailey road, thence to Delight Postoffice by way of Cherry Hill and Nicodemus Mills, thence to Berryman's lane [illegible] the starting point.

Rontes from [illegible] office and from Boring [illegible] Fourth district, which were recently laid out, will be put in operation on the 16th inst. John S. Hughes and Harry Myers have been appointed carrier and substitute carrier, respectively, for the former route and Kenzey Marshall and Joshua Gill for the latter. The Upperco route is 26 miles long and includes about 200 families. The route from Boring is 25 miles in length and supplies about 175 families.

The President's Trip.

On Monday last President McKinley started on a trip to the Pacific Slope. The course of the outing and other facts relating to it will be as follows:

It will extend through 25 States, first taking in a number of the Southern States.

It will pass over 13,500 miles of railroad tracks.

It will take 48 days.

It will be shared by 80 persons, 40 of whom are servants.

The other 40 include the Cabinet officials, their families and other guests.

Six reporters, four photographers, two telegraphers and three stenographers are taken along.

Eight finely furnished cars make up the special train.

Of these the most magnificent is the Olympia, in which the president rides.

The taking of the census of Maryland by virtue of the law enacted at the extra session began on Wednesday, the law requiring the enumerators to go to work not later than May 1. The enumerators are allowed $3 a day for the time actually at work, not to exceed fifteen days, and must make their returns to the superintendent not later than June 1. The superintendent is required to submit to the Governor a tabulated statement of the population of the State on or before July 20th, and upon that statement the Governor is to base the representation of the several counties in the House of Delegates. In extreme cases the enumerators can be allowed under the law compensation for five additional days for the completion of the work. Heavy penalties are imposed upon officials for neglect of duty or for making false returns.

An Interesting Discovery.

A story, in which Ex-Judge James A. C. Bond, of this city, takes much interest, comes from Philadelphia. It relates to Dr. Thomas Bond, of Philadelphia, who died in 1793, and who was a first cousin of Judge Bond's great-grandfather. The story is told at some length in the following account, published in the Baltimore Evening Star of the 23rd ult.:

Philadelphia, Pa., April 23rd.—Following closely upon the discovery of the finding of the burial place of Dr. Thomas Bond, of Philadelphia, in the graveyard of the Old Presbyterian Church in Morgantown, W. Va., comes the discovery that at the time of his death, in 1793, he left property which may result in the bringing of a fortune of several million dollars to his descendants here, all of whom are members of old Philadelphia families.

In 1879 Jonathan B. Wells, house sergeant of the Bridesburg police station, then a policeman, in removing a pile of rubbish discovered a bundle of old papers folded together and bearing all the marks of time and neglect. Among them were six deeds, signed in 1780 by Patrick Henry, then Governor of Virginia, in the name of Dr. Thomas Bond. They conveyed to the latter about 6,000 acres of land in Harrison county, that State. All inquiries of Wells, who attempted to restore the deeds to the descendants of the rightful owner, proved futile until he saw in the daily papers several weeks ago the announcement of the finding of Dr. Bond's body. In connection with the story appeared the name of Dr. Charles Cadwalader, of 240 South Fourth street, as one of Dr. Bond's descendants. He communicated with Dr. Cadwalader and later turned the deeds over to him.

After securing possession of the deeds and at the request of several of the local heirs of the Bond family, Dr. Calwalader wrote to Morgantown to ascertain the disposition made of the property covered by these papers. He also inquired the whereabouts of any of the lineal descendants of Dr. Bond in that State. It is not known that Dr. Bond left any direct descendants. His wife and two children are buried in the churchyard of Old Christ Church, on Second street. The local descendants of the family are all the descendants of Dr. Phineas Bond, an uncle of Dr. Thomas Bond, and include, in addition to Dr. Cadwalader, John Cadwalader, his brother; Dr. Travis Cochran, William, George and Henry Cochran, Mrs. Samuel L. Shober, Dr. John Bond Shober, and the family of Samuel Chew. It is believed that Francis Bond is also connected with the old Bond family.

The deeds, now in Dr. Cadwalader's possession, convey to Dr. Thomas Bond 5,000 acres of land, on part of which the town of Parkersburg, W. Va., now stands. The rest is said to be underlaid with coal and oil, and the whole is valued at several million dollars. Dr. Cadwalader said yesterday that no legal steps had been taken as yet toward proving their ownership in the property, nor did he know whether any would be taken.

Dr. Cadwalader is now in correspondence with Judge Bond, of Westminster, Md., who is looking after the interests of the Philadelphia descendants of Dr. Bond in West Virginia.

The Western Maryland Railroad is building a large tabernacle on the site of the old pavilion at Pen-Mar. Such a structure has been considered very desirable by the several religious denominations—Lutheran, Reformed and Presbyterian—which hold annual reunions at Pen-Mar and the erection of the tabernacle is principally to accommodate those reunions. The building will be 100 by 128 feet, with a seating capacity of 3,000 people. Ornamental pillars will support the roof and the seats will be substantial benches. The building will not be inclosed, but canvas curtains will be arranged for storm protection. The tabernacle is expected to increase the attendance at the reunions.

A new and beautiful method of remembering the dead who fell for the Union, but lie buried under the waves, where no flowers can adorn their graves, will be adopted this year by the Department of the Potomac G. A. R. It consists of casting flowers into the river. This pretty tribute was first adopted by the G. A. R. ladies in California, where in all the seacoast towns the school children went to the seashore, and there, after appropriate exercises in remembrance of the sailor dead, threw great bunches of flowers into the sea.

He was about fifty-seven years old.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore,' and she became so enthusiastic over its merits that I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him. I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smiling and informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by W. Scott Zepp.
