THE SHENANDOAH IRRIGATION AND LAND COMPANY.

(Incorporated under the Laws of Colorado.)

COOPER BUILDING, DENVER, COLORADO.

CAPITILIZATION, $1,500,000. PAR VALUE OF SHARES, $10. NO PREFERRED STOCK.

ALL SHARES FULL PAID, NON-ASSESSABLE AND TRANSFERABLE.

"IRRIGATION IS LIFE."

The company holds, under charter from the State of Colorado, perpetual rights to the seven streams which constitute the sole water supply of the Shenandoah Valley, situated in the southern portion of Montrose county, and the northern part of San Miguel county, Colorado. This ownership gives the company absolute control of all the agricultural lands of the valley, amounting to 103,000 acres. The land is practically worthless without water but with it produces all kinds of fruit, cereal and vegetable crops in the greatest abundance and of wonderful quality.

Nearly $400,000 have already been expended in the construction of an irrigation system; more than sixty miles of irrigating canals and ditches have been built; two towns, Norwood and Shenandoah, have been established and 6,000 acres of the valley farms are now being cultivated by about 100 families.

Preparations are about completed to open the Land Offices of the company in Chicago where irrigated farms in The Shenandoah will be sold to persons who wish prosperous homes in this wonderful, rich, new country. The present average price of the farms, including perpetual water rights, is $35 per acre, which is about one-half what similar farms and water rights are selling for in other irrigated sections. The irrigation plant will become the property of the farmers, pro rata, after the farms are sold.

FARMING BY IRRIGATION.

The one safe, sure and scientific method of farming is by irrigation. It means applying water to the soil in such manner, and especially at such times, as will give the greatest benefit to the growing crop. It means agricultural insurance against droughs, flood, and crop failure. It does away with fertilizers, it compels crops of such magnitude and quality as seem marvelous to those who are not familiar with the extraordinary fertility of the arid West.

The soil of the arid region is a source of wonder to every eastern farmer who knows it. Twenty acres of land in the rich Shenandoah of Colorado returns as much to the farmer as one hundred acres in humid regions, and with far less labor. It is not necessary to depend on the uncertaintes of rainfall; the water is there to turn on as needed.

SHENANDOAH PRUDUCTS.

This valley is the natural home of such fruits as apples, pears, peaches, plums, prunes, nectarines, apricots, quinces, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, grapes, currants, gooseberries and all other fruits grown outside of a tropical region. Among grains the Shenandoah produces wheat, oats, rye, barley, milled, corn, etc.; grasses such as timothy, clover and alfalfa, and supplies bountiful root crops of every description. Among miscellaneous crops one finds potatoes, hops, celery, peanuts, sorghum, tobacco, and sugar beets which grow here more prolifically than anywhere else in the world.

YIELDS PER ACRE.

Oats, 80 to 115 bushels; wheat, 40 to 60 bushels; potatoes, 300 to 500 bushels; corn, 40 to 60 bushels; alfalfa, 4 to 8 tons; timothy, 3 to 6 tons; sugar beets, 16 to 25 tons with 17 per cent. saccharine, of 90 per cent. purity; strawberries, $350 to $900 per acre; raspberries, currants and celery, about the same value per acre.

Peach, plum and pear trees produce from 50 to 100 pounds of fruit the third year. Apple trees produce from 250 to 550 pounds the first season. The dried prune is a staple everywhere in demand. Each six year old tree averages 250 pounds of fruit before drying. An acre grows 150 trees, or 36,000 pounds of fruit worth two and one-half cents per pound before drying, or $900 per acre.

VALUES.

There are fruit tracts in Montrose county which pay ten per cent. yearly or more than $2000 per acre. Judge Felton has sold fruit from ten acres amounting to $6,013.89. Three acres of raspberries, blackberries and garden truck realized $2,135. One citizen, sixty years of age, gathered from his five year old trees $700 of fruit per acre, and from his four year old trees $300 per acre, and from his three year old trees, $150 per acre. He now has an assured income from ten acres of fruit of from $3,000 to $4,000 per year.

LOCATION OF FARMS.

5,000 acres of farms surrounding each village. Each twenty acres carries with it a bonus of two building lots in the village most convenient to the farm. This permits the farmer to live in town, with all the advantages of schools, churches, markets, amusements, etc., and at the same time be within a few minutes' walk of his farm.

Prices will be materially advanced in the near future. All farms are alike in fertility. There is a market for everything grown within a days' drive of the Valley.

CLIMATE.

No more equable climate is to be found anywhere. In summer the temperature ranges from 70° to 85°. During the present winter, while on the eastern side of the divide it was 30° below; in the Shenandoah Valley it was never below 20° above.

PROCEEDS FROM SALES.

As sales are made the proceeds, less expenses and fixed charges, will be divided, pro rata, among the shareholders. It is not a question of waiting two, three, five or more years for a dividend to be earned, as in most stock propositions. It is simply a question of making sales and dividing the proceeds. AS THE FARMS ARE SOLD THE SHAREHOLDERS RECEIVE THE PROCEEDS.

SPECIAL ALLOTMENT OF STOCK.

It is necessary to extend the canals and ditches and to add to the reservoir capacity in order to insure sufficient water to irrigate the full 100,000 acres. To expedite this work, in order to keep ahead of the demand for farms. the Company has decided to sell an allotment of its capital stock at $7.50 per share—par value $10 per share—full paid, non assessable and transferable.

LARGE PROFITS ASSURED.

Based upon the present selling price, the total sales of farms will, at the least calculation, amount to $3,500,000. The total expenses and fixed charges, figured on a most liberal basis, cannot amount to more than $1,000,000 which will leave $2,500,000 to be divided among shareholders. This gives the shares a profit of 166⅔ per cent. on their par value, or MORE THAN 220 PER CENT. ON THE PRESENT PRICE, if the shares are held until the farm sales are completed.

GUARANTEES FOR REDEMPTION.

In order that investors may feel perfectly secure in the purchase of stock, attention is called to the following Redemption Clauses: 1. In case the investor has not received in cash profits, on or before eighteen months from date of purchase, at least $7.50 per share plus 6 per cent. interest per annum, the company will at his option redeem his stock, in cash, for the amount of his investment, with interest, less the dividends paid to him. 2. Owners of these special shares, who desire to purchase farms, may do so upon the following terms: The company will accept their shares at par (less the cash dividends disbursed to holders of the stock) toward the payment of the farms, at the first or initial prices, averaging $35 per acre including perpetual water. No further cash payment is ever required. The company will accept one-third of the crop each year in payment of the balance until the farm is paid for. This gives the stockholder a direct advantage of 33⅓ per cent. over other purchasers. It gives him a prospective advantage much in excess of this, owing to increasing prices. It requires but $150 cash to secure one of these valuable farms. This offer holds good for eighteen months from date of investment in the stock, conditioned that at date of application the farms are not all sold.

FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS AS SECURITY.

To insure the carrying out of both offers of stock redemption, on the terms stated, the Shenandoah Irrigation and Land Company has deposited first mortgage 6 per cent. gold bonds with The Provident Securities and Banking Company, of Boston, Mass., as trustee, to secure the redemption of stock, either in cash, or in payment of the farms, as above stated, and as the shareholder may elect. The bank will issue its Certificate to each purchaser of the stock, attesting the deposit of bonds, at par, for said purposes. The bank Certificate must accompany the stock certificate in case of redemption.

A SURE AND PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

This is one of the safest and will prove one of the most profitable investments ever offered. The division of splendid profits from the sales of farms is certain.

People Are Getting Careless.

The following casualties were reported to the "Tidings" department yesterday by Frank Maynard Howe:

Little Henry; loaded gun;
Careless papa's out a son.

Small boy; live wire;
Little Jimmy's gone up higher.

Automobile; reckless driver;
Funeral, flowers, no survivor.

Can of oil; slow kitchen fire;
Bridget O'Sullivan's taking a flier.

Out with "steady;" fool rocks boat;
Dragging river; neither could float.

Fresh young Cholly on the street,
Tried to "mash" the maiden sweet,
Now young Cholly's changed his ways—
He'll break stone for thirty days.

I.

Mrs. Richard Burton opened the brown paper parcel left by the butcher's boy with an instinctive shrinking of fastidious finger-tips. She was a very new housekeeper, and it is hard to accustom dainty hands to the touch of cold raw meat.

"A duck!" she said. "How extravagant of Richard! And a note," she went on, taking a folded paper out of the creature's half opened bill. "What an abominable hand Richard does write, to be sure! Mr. Renwick invited to dinner; that's Richard's political friend. And he's sure one of my nice little dinners will 'fix him.' I suppose that means get Richard his appointment. Um—a fancy salad and a nice dessert. Those are easy; I learned all that sort of thing at cooking-school. But the duck is a feathered mystery. I don't even know whether to begin at his head or his tail. Dear me, why couldn't Richard have had him plucked?"

She sighed deeply, and turned to that invaluable first aid to young housekeepers—the cook-book.

"Poultry," she read, "must be scalded before being plucked."

"Of course," commended Mrs. Burton. "How stupid of me not to have known!"

She drew a bucket of hot water, and grasping the duck firmly by its legs, plunged it in. Her cherished cook-book, Mrs. Burton found, was not infallible. The hot water seemed to "set" the feathers, and they came out, if possible, less easy then when dry. But she shut her lips in a straight line and fell upon the enemy with grim determination and both hands. At the end of an hour she viewd the results of her labor with manifest disapproval. There was a great heap of feathers, "enough," she said disconsolately, "to stuff a young feather bed," and a painfully small bird, sufficiently plump as to breast, but unnaturally skinny as to wings and legs.

But time was pressing. She put the duck in the ice-chest, and turned her attention to the salad and the dessert. Both looked very nice and tempting when finished, especially the latter, which, Mrs. Burton called "heavenly pudding"—a concoction of angel cake, whipped cream, candied fruit, and sugar rose-leaves. Her spirits rose as she braced herself for the final tussel with the duck. But all the bread-crumbs it would hold failed to swell its meager proportions, and she dropped an almost hysterical tear on its decorously folded left wing when she placed it in the oven.

Every fifteen minutes she opened the oven door and conscientiously turned and basted the duck. It sizzled cheerfully, but grew perceptibly smaller, so that Mrs. Burton dreaded to leave it while she snatched time for a hasty toilet lest, when she returned, it should have disappeared altogether. But it was still there when she came back, hurriedly fastening the ribbons at her waist. Pathetically shrunken it was, and not at all tempting.

It was with a mixture of relief and apprehension that she at last heard her husband's voice and another man's—the guest's no doubt—in the parlor.

Mr. Burton on his way to the kitchen, looked with approving eyes at the daintily spread table in the dining room, and at the tempting dessert set forth in the butler's pantry. His face, when he entered the kitchen, wore a serene, satisfied look that jarred unpleasantly on his wife's mood of gloom.

"Renwick is in first rate humor," he said. "No end pleased to come."

"Indeed?" said Mrs. Burton listlessly.

"Didn't expect me to send home a canvasback, eh?" questioned Mr. Burton, rubbing his hands joyfully.

Mrs. Burton, on her way to the oven for the last time, paused and faced
