MEETING OF REPUBLICAN CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The members of the Republican County Central Committee, of Carroll county, will meet at the

FIREMEN'S HALL,

in Westminster, on

MONDAY, JULY 17th, 1905,

at 10 o'clock, A. M. A full attendance is desired as business of importance will be transacted.

WALTER R. RUDY,
Chairman.

If the Democratic newspapers continue fulminating columns of editorials upon the disfranchising amendment it will become a nauseating subject to their readers before the election in November.

The Advocate says: "The Governor is a party man and believes in party organization, and when the State Convention speaks, endorsing the amendment, he will stand by the will of the majority." It would be interesting to know whether that is merely a surmise, or whether the Governor has given anybody the assurance that he will submit to the dictation of the State Convention. Can the Advocate tell us?

When an advocate of the disfranchising amendment to the constitution of Maryland, upon the adoption or rejection of which the electors will be privileged to vote at the election in November, expresses the opinion that it is necessary to preserve the political ascendancy of the white race, he exhibits a very poor opinion of his fellows. There are more than four white men of legal age in the State to one colored man. It is worse than cowardly to feel that this one with the black cuticle is more than equal to the four white skinned individuals. The employment of such a plea is sufficient in itself to show its inherent dishonesty.

The Novoe Vremya, a Russian newspaper, unwittingly pays the late Secretary Hay as high a compliment as has emanated from any source. It says: "As 'China's wet nurse,' as the enemy of Russia and the encourager of Japan he was mainly responsible for the check administered to Russia's dream of empire in the Orient." If Secretary Hay had done nothing else than this with which he is charged by the Novoe Vremya his fame as a great premier would be firmly established. To have been mainly responsible for the check placed upon Russian aggression in China and her designs upon Korea and Japan, ranked him as a leader of nations rather than as the head of the State Department of our own country, great as is that station. The Russian press, generally, speaks of him in terms of respect and praise, but the newspaper which designed to condemn has only shown the exalted character of his influence and work upon the destinies of the world.

JOHN HAY.

In another column will be found a short account of the death of John Hay, Secretary of State of the United States, an event which has caused universal regret throughout the land and in foreign countries as well, for Mr. Hay's reputation, as the foremost premier of all the great powers, was known all over the world. That reputation does not rest upon his possession of extraordinary skill in diplomacy, as that science is commonly understood. Mr. Hay did not compass the ends he had in view by tortuous and round about methods. He had the capacity and judgment to solve difficult problems in international affairs and a refreshing frankness in going straight to his purpose. And these were the qualities that made him great. He led all the great premiers of the world in insisting upon fair dealing in the intercourse of nations and in all matters of an international character in which this country had a sufficient interest to justify her interference.

Mr. Hay knew the power of his country and the respect in which she has been held since her speedy triumph in her war with Spain. Consciousness of this power made him bold to take the initiative in affairs in which, ten years ago, the country might have been treated with scant courtesy if she had interfered. He was undoubtedly a great and good man and he had behind him a great and powerful country to lend force to his views.

Some comparisons have been instituted between Mr. Hay and some of the other great premiers of the country, and the conclusion has been arrived at that he was the greatest of them all. Such comparisons are invidious and should not be made. It must not be forgotten that such men as Webster and Clay have filled the office of Secretary of State, and that at a period of the country's history when she was not more than a third rate power. And Webster, Clay, and others also, maintained the dignity and enforced the rights of the country in her relations with other nations without having been backed by the great power which she has now developed. It can add nothing to Mr. Hay's fame to detract from that of these great men.

Mr. Hay was a great premier and his administration of his great office has shed imperishable luster upon the history of his county. His death is a great loss to the nation and it is well that mourning for the sad eveut is so widespread as to be really universal.

The latest news from Russia is that the entire Crimeam Peninsula is in revolt. It is reported that the battleship Kniaz Potemkin has been abandoned and destroyed by the mutineers, but the report lacks confirmation. The other warships on the Black sea are apparently making no effort to capture the Potemkin. In the fighting that has taken place at Odessa it is said that 7,000 people were killed and large numbers wounded.

Mr. Elihu Root, of New York, has been tendered the office of Secretary of State, by president Roosevelt, as the successor of Mr. Hay. Mr. Root is an eminent lawyer. He was formerly Secretary of War, an office which he filled with marked ability.

Mr. Charles J. Bonaparte qualified as Secretary of the Navy on the 1st inst.

SECRETARY HAY IS DEAD.

John Hay, America's great premier, whose serious illness, at his summer home, "The Fells," on lake Sunapee, Newbury, N. H., was noted last week, died very unexpectedly at 12.25 A. M., Saturday. His condition had been improving on Friday and the prospect of his again entering actively upon public life was so encouraging that his death was a complete surprise to his physicians and his family. According to the official statement of the physicians the cause of death was "pulmonary embolism." This phrase will convey but a vague idea of the actual cause which terminated Mr. Hay's life. The word pulmonary means pertaining to the lungs, and the word embolism, in pathology, the obstruction of a blood vessel "by a clot of fibrin or other substance abnormally present and brought into the current of the circulating medium from some more or less distant locality" in the anatomy. Its usual effect is to cause paralysis in the brain and a greater or less degree of apoplexy. The existence of such a clot, in Mr. Hay's case, could not have been known by his physicians, and hence they were not prepared for his sudden taking off.

Mr. Hay was born at Salem, Ind., October 8, 1838, and was in his 67th year. He was of Scotch and English descent and was a great grandson of John Hay, who settled in Virginia in 1750. He was educated at Brown University, Rode Island, and studied law in the office of Abraham Lincoln, at Springfield, Ill., which he entered about the close of 1858. From that time until Mr. Lincoln's death he was closely identified with him and became one of his private secretaries. For Mr. Lincoln he conceived a love and veneration bordering on idolatry, and it is probable that in contact with that great man he learned lessons in patriotism, devotion to duty and singleness and honesty of purpose which rounded out his own character and made him the great and successful premier of this great nation.

Following the death of Lincoln he was secretary of legation at Paris and charge d'affaires at Vienna for five years. In 1870 he returned to America and entered journalism, becoming a member of the editorial staff of the New York Tribune and for a time chief editor of that paper. He was a poet of some note and also the author, in collaboration with Mr. Nicolai, his colleague as Mr. Lincoln's private secretary, of a detailed and most interesting history of the martyred President.

In 1897 he was sent as Ambassador to England by President McKinley and at the close of the Spanish war was recalled and appointed Secretary of State, holding that position continuously till his death. During his incumbency of the office many of the most important questions of an international character that have ever confronted the world have been forced upon the great powers for their consideration. In all these questions Mr. Hay was the acknowledged leader, and conferred upon his country a degree of honor in diplomacy not equaled by any other nation. His suggestions, in dealing with great questions of moment to all the great powers, have been accepted without dissent and today, through his straightforward, wise and upright policy America stands foremost in all that makes a country great.

Mr. Hay leaves a widow, who was Miss Clara L. Stone, of Cleveland, Ohio, a daughter of Amasa Stone, from whom she inherited great wealth. One son and two daughters, both married, also survive him. His remains were taken to Cleveland and interred in the family burying plot in Lake View Cemetery, on Wednesday. Great honor has been paid to his memory in every section of the country and many of the distinguished statesmen of the country, including President Roosevelt, attended his obsequies, which, at the request of Mrs. Hay, were without pomp or parade.

While gathering raspberries on Sunday Florence, the 15-year-old daughter of Jeremiah Small, of Bittinger Station, York county, Pa., fell into an abandoned quarry filled with water and was drowned. She was lured to her fate by a well-filled bush, which stood close to the water's edge. The body was soon recovered. This is the fourth victim of drowning in the same family. Several years ago a three-year-old boy fell into the same quarry, and his 13-year-old sister tried to rescue him, when both were drowned. Fourteen years ago a two-year-old girl was drowned in a well.

While playing in the wheat field of of Mr. Solomon Crum, near Walkersville, Frederick county, last Saturday afternoon, Frank Eyler, aged twelve years, son of the late John Eyler, fell under the wheels of a heavily loaded wagon, which ran over him, crushing him so badly that he died 20 minutes later. His mother was overcome by his tragic death and has since been in a serious condition.

A cloud burst near Timonium, Wednesday evening, caused a flood in Jones' Falls which damaged property in Baltimore county of the value of $100,000, and in the city $50,000. The tracks of the Northern Central Railway were washed away in a number of places.

"Gone but not forgotten."

It was just three months ago
Since his dear spirit fled:
How sudden was the summons
When word came he was dead,
Time was too short to say farewell
To those he loved so well.

By his wife.

Tribute of Respect to the Memory of the late J. Wesley Myers, passed by the Board of Directors of the Westminster Savings Bank, June 30th, 1905.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father, in his wise Providence, to remove from our midst, our esteemed friend and Co-Director, J. Wesley Myers, and

WHEREAS, We desire to express our high appreciation of the many manly and worthy characteristics which adorned his life, and made it a great pleasure to have him associated with us in this Board, and desiring to express our sincere sympathy with his afflicted family in his removal from our midst.

THEREFORE, Resolved, That the Secretary be instructed to place this memorial of our departed friend upon the minutes as a part of the proceedings of this meeting, and that a copy of it be sent to the family, and that it be published in our local papers.

By order of the Board,
