Kent News.

CHESTERTOWN - FEB. 21, 1891.

"I would sit on my bed of coal and ponder over my hardships until I thought I should go mad. If I had had any means of committing suicide I would certainly have taken it.

"I did not occur to me to get on my car myself on one of the trips. If I had done so, I would certainly have been shot by the guard at the entrance to the mine.

"Time went on, endless as it seemed, and nothing occurred to break the monotony until one day an officer desceded with a large sheet of paper.

"He could not talk English, but merely motioned for me to get into the car. This I refused to do, because I was more scared to go up than to stay where I was.

"He then returned up the shaft and soon came down again with an interpreter, who told me that my term of imprisonment had expired.

"Crocker was released with me. I could get no tidings of the others, and I presume they died in the mines. Lately I have heard that Galder also survived, but I have no authentic information to that effect."

THE FAMOUS LETTER.

Text of the Epistle Which Gov. Hill Says He Never Received.

The following is the text of the famous letter, now the political sensation of the time, which appeared exclusively in the Baltimore Sun of Wednesday last:

"Courier-Journal Office, Louisville, Nov. 21, 1890.—My Dear Sir. I take leave to address you this letter as one of some millions of democrats who have never sought or held office, and who could not be induced to do so; but who are deeply concerned in the party welfare, and who believe you to hold the key to it. Outside of the State of New York there is a well-nigh unanimous demand among the rank and file of democrats for the nomination of Mr Cleveland. This is too strong for the party leaders and managers to resist. I think I have some influence in Kentucky. But on that point I should be overwhelmed in a State convention. If you should come to a national convention with a New York delegation solid against it you would be overwhelmed. You are powerless to prevent it. But you can defeat the election of the ticket.

There are democrats in every part of the Union who believe that you did this in 1888. I know that to be false. I know exactly what happened, and I have steadily defended you in public and in private. But it will cling to you as long as you live—even as the bargain, intrigue and corruption story clung to Clay—and will meet you in every national convention, if it be not dissipated by some act on your part great enough to blot it out. In default of this, if you have any hope of the presidency, it will defeat that.

My judgment is clear that, if you could reconcile it with your judgment and feeling to make peace with Mr. Cleveland and to take a delegation to the national convention in 1892 to put him in nomination, you will save the party and place yourself upon an elevation you can never attain if you fail to do it. You would be received by the country with enthusiasm; be accepted at once as a Warwick, and I do not see how you could be kept out of the succession. On the other hand, even if you succeeded in defeating the nomination of Mr. Cleveland, you will stand upon sinister and dangerous ground, with a stormy future before you.

These are plain words, and I have no relations with you which give me the right to offer you counsels. They may be disagreeable words, and I have no desire to obtrude upon your privacy. But they are true words, and I claim the right of a democrat who has some knowledge of the country at large, and has given some proof of intelligent devotion to the party interests to ignore ceremony and to send them to you.

In conclusion, let me say that I shall, in any event, be glad to know you better, and that, meanwhile, I am, most sincerely, your friend. HENRY WATTERSON.

The Hon. David B. Hill."

VANCE TELLS A GOOD STORY.

An Old Colored Man's Idea of Election and Salvation.

Senator Vance, of North Carolina, unquestionably the champion story teller of the Senate, writes a New York Tribune correspondent, has a broad stripe of Calvinism down his back, though he is not a communicant in the church. It is told of him that riding along in Buncombe county one day he overtook a venerable darkey, with whom he thought to have "a little fun."

"Uncle," said the Governor, "are you going to church?"

"No sah, not edzatly—I'm gwine back from church."

"You're a Baptist, I reckon—now, ain't you?"

"No, sah I ain't no Baptist, do most of the brederen and sisters about here has been under do water."

"Campbellite?"

"No, sah, I can't errogate to myself de Camelite way of thinkin'."

"Well, what in the name of goodness are you then?" rejoined the Governor, remembering the narrow range in choice in religions among North Carolina negroes.

"Well, de fac' is, sah, my old marster was a Herruld of the Cross in the Presbyterian Church, and I was fotched up in dat faith."

"What! You don't mean it? Why that is my church."

The negro making no comment on this announcement, Governor Vance went at him again:

"And do you believe in all of the Presbyterian creed?"

"Yes, sah, dat I does."

"Do you believe in the doctrine of predestination?"

"I dunno dat I recognize the name, sah."

"Why, do you believe that if a man is elected to be saved he will be saved, and that if he is elected to be damned he will be damned?"

"Oh, yes, boss, I believe dat. It's Gospel talk, dat is."

"Well, now, take my case. Do you believe that I am elected to be saved?"

The old man struggled awhile with his desire to be respectful and polite, and then shook his head dubiously.

"Come, now, answer my question," pressed the Governor. "What do you say?"

"Well—I tell [illegible] dis, Mass Zeb, I's been livin' in dis [illegible] rld nigh on sixty years, and I no[illegible] d of any man being [illegible] candidate."

"Good entertainment for all that passes,— Horses, mares, men and asses."
—From an ancient sign board.

On the morning of September 28, 1736, all the tavern signs in London were in deep mourning; and no wonder, their dearly beloved patron and friend Gin was defunct—killed by the new Act against spirituous liquors! But they soon dropped their mourning, for Gin had only been in a lethargic fit, and woke up much refreshed by his short sleep. Fifteen years after, when his "Gin Lane," royal gin was to be had cheap enough, if we may believe the sign board in that picture, which informs us that "gentlemen and others" could get "drunk for a penny," and "dead drunk for two-pence, in which last emergency, "clean straw for nothing" was provided.

That excellent, and by all physicians approved, China drink, called by Chineans Teha, by other nations, Tay alias Tee, is sold at the Sultaness Head Cophee House; in Sweeting's Rents, by the Royal Exchange, London.—The Mercurius Politicus, Sept. 30, 1658.

OVER-REACHED.

John Davis was a famous turkey hunter in Southwestern Ohio a few years ago. He caught hundreds of the birds every year, and was said to be possessed of quite a handsome property accumulated in this way. One of his favorite methods of capturing his game was by what he called a "spring trap." This was a small log house, with a big door which shut with a spring, managed by the hunter.

A trail of corn was laid from the door for a quarter of a mile into the bushes. The unsuspecting turkeys would follow this track of corn, and march inside, when presto! the door closed with a snap, and they were caught.

One day Mr. Davis was tending the door of this spring trap, when to his delight, he saw twenty fine, large turkeys approaching. They came up to the entrance. The first one ventured in, then the second and the third, until nineteen were in the log house. The twentieth bird lingered, and Mr. Davis waited, loath to close the door without him.

He was sure of nineteen, but the last one was a fine fellow, and he couldn't bear the thought of losing him.

While he waited, one of the turkeys inside stuck his head out of the door, and then hopped outside.

"He'll go back in a minute, an' the other one with him," thought the hunter; but instead of that a second one came out, and while hunter waited for him to go inside another came through the door. It would certainly be too bad to spring the trap now, and so Davis waited—and every turkey but one came out!

"Wal, I'll make sure 'o' him!" said the hunter to himself, and he sprang the door.

"That's 'bout as silly a performance as I have ever been guilty of—losin' them eighteen turkeys," said the old man in telling the story afterward. "That's the time I over-reached myself."

THE TWO MEN HANGED.

Proctor and Young Meet Death Quietly.

Jesse Proctor, aged 34 years, and Frederick Young, aged 17 years, were hanged in the rear of the old jail Friday afternoon, for the murder of Stephen Lindsay, aged 82 years, in Dover, Del.

The drop fell at 1.52 o'clock.

Proctor's heart stopped beating in 13½ minutes and he was cut down in 26 min.

Young's heart stopped beating in 14 minutes and he was cut down in 22 minutes.

Proctor died from strangulation and without a perceptible struggle.

Young's neck was broken in the cervical region (base of the brain, first vertebra.) Two minutes after he fell he drew both feet up about eight inches. They dropped quickly again in a record or two.

The men were placed in rough stained pine coffins and and will be buried in the county burial ground.

BROKEN LOTS
—IN—
MEN'S, YOUTHS' and CHILDREN'S CLOTHING.

WE HAVE had a good trade right along this season, no room to complain, and consequently we naturally conclude that Honest, Well-made Garments, at Fair and Square Prices, are appreciated every time. Now, as trade commenced early with us, necessarily leaves a good many Broken Lots, 36x40 of one kind, 35x37 of another, &c., which we can afford to close at a Small Margin Above First Cost, as no middleman gets a slice of our stock; they come direct from the manufacturer to us. We have sold a great many suits and the broken assortments we have bunched together and marked them down.

IN OVERCOATS

our trade has been correspondingly large and the remnants will be closed at the same reductions. Having a nice line of these goods, all new this season (as we carry no goods over) and not expecting margins to be made in sixty days, we can and will put a price on them that they must go. We have been selling goods in Chestertown so long now that the trade is fully aware of our full assortment without enumerating kinds, and the close price at which we sell these goods has never been more fully appreciated than this season. We can please you in style, quality and price.
