DISFRANCHISEMENT DISAGREEMENT.

While the platform adopted by the Democratic State convention last year pledged the party, if given a majority in the general Assembly, to the passage of a law to submit to the vote of the people an amendment to the Constitution to disfranchise colored men, the lawmakers are perplexed by disagreements among themselves concerning the form in which this is to be accomplished. The party managers have had the subject under consideration ever since the election and have had an amendment prepared by a committee of the most prominent Democratic lawyers in the State. But it transpires that, while the lawyers agreed upon a plan and the phraseology in which it should be couched, it is not acceptable to all the legislators.

By the draft of the measure submitted by the lawyers provision is made for the full enfranchisement of all white men, native or foreign born, without specifying their color. This is done by giving the right to vote to all male citizens of legal age, who were entitled to the suffrage, January, 1869, anywhere in the United States, or who are descendants of such citizens or have been naturalized since the date mentioned, or are the descendants of such naturalized citizens. For other classes, meaning colored men, of course, an educational test is provided, or a property qualification.

It is well known that Governor Warfield was strongly in favor of such a property qualification when the legislature submitted the amendment which was overwhelmingly defeated at the election in 1905. Now, it is said, Senator Gorman is strenuously opposed to its incorporation in the amendment proposed by the lawyers and will make a strong fight against its adoption. It may be that the Ex-Governor's advocacy of the provision renders it objectionable to the Howard county Senator and that the same sentiment may excite opposition on the part of other regular Democrats in the Legislature. The Ex-Governor, it is well known, does not stand well with the dominant faction of his party and an effort will probably be made to thwart his wishes in the matter.

There is little doubt, however, that some sort of amendment to disfranchise the colored people will be agreed upon before the close of the session, not because it is necessary for the maintenance of white supremacy, but for partisan advantage. The party is pledged to it and the majority in the Legislature must act accordingly or acknowledge that all this talk about disfranchising the colored voters, in the past, has been the purest buncombe.

This is a view of the subject which has heretofore attracted little attention, but the thought is at least suggested that, perhaps, after all, the Democratic leaders are not as ardently anxious to disfranchise the colored voters as they pretend to be. They must realize that, in the event of the adoption of a disfranchisement measure, they will be shorn of the most potent and effective campaign material heretofore employed by them—appeals to race prejudice. To wilfully disfranchise the colored man will be to eliminate him as an issue from the politics of the State and leave the Democratic managers naught but their past unsavory record to stand upon. Still, they are face to face with the issue and cannot ignore it, nor well fail to reach an agreement of some sort upon it.

To keep the subject alive indefinitely they may decide to submit an amendment so drastic in its provisions that its rejection by the people will be a foregone conclusion.

Since the above was written influences have been at work which have led to the endorsement of the measure by a caucus of the Democratic members of the legislature.

President Roosevelt's Special Message.

Prompted, apparently, by the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States declaring the employers' liability law, passed by Congress, unconstitutional, President Roosevelt sent a special message to the House and Senate, last week, which has excited much discussion, much comment and much diversity of opinion as to the views it expresses and the propriety of their utterance at this time. The gist of the opinion of the Supreme Court, referred to, is that Congress has no warrant in the Constitution for enacting a law making employers liable for injuries sustained by their employees, by accidents occurring in the discharge of their duties, unless such service is being rendered in business of an interstate character. As the law passed by Congress did not contain this limitation, the President, by his special message, advises that a law be passed upon the subject that will not be inimical to the objections of the highest judicial tribunal of the country.

But the message is not confined to this one subject. It goes into the trust and monopoly abuses with which the Administration is endeavoring to deal under the interstate commerce law and is, practically and in substance, a repetition of the President's views, as heretofore officially enunciated in messages to Congress and otherwise. It is couched in the vigorous language of which Mr. Roosevelt is a master and forcibly points out conditions which, to the minds of thoughtful citizens, have become intolerable and which the masses of the people agree must be corrected. But not all of those who entertain this view are agreed as to the prudence and propriety of the President's forcible way of advising remedial legislation at this time.

The country is gradually recovering from the financial stringency and panic into which it was thrown a few months ago, it is believed by the very agencies against which the message is fulminated, and timid people are apprehensive that the message will arrest or retard that recovery and may even occasion a recurrence of the panicky condition referred to.

It must be conceded that much of the criticism to which the President's utterances have been subjected, whether favorable or unfavorable, has been been of a flippant and hasty character, ill advised and careless in expression. The subject is too large to be dismissed with hasty approval or hasty denunciation of the utterances of the Chief Magistrate of the Nation. It calls for the exhibition of the wisest statesmanship ever exercised in the history of this country. There is no question that the abuses perpetrated by the trusts and monopolies of the country must be corrected and eliminated from the business methods heretofore pursued by these organizations. And it must be done by law, or worse conditions may arise through violent efforts of the great body of the people to right the wrongs complained of.

It may be that the President is advocating methods of too strenuous a character, or is unnecessarily alarming the country by his fervid presentation of the matter; that his methods of destroying the vermin which infest the house may endanger the structure itself. That is a question to be considered and most carefully considered by the law making power, and it should be considered patriotically and not politically. That is, there should be no question of partisan advantages to be gained by this or that action in the premises. The wrongs complained of undoubtedly exist. Shall their perpetrators be assailed with a bludgeon and knocked out, without consideration of the effect of this course upon the general interests of the country, or shall such measures be taken as will prompt the wrongdoers, by voluntary action, to agree to such governmental supervision as will prevent the continuance of the wrongs and deliver the country from this blighting incubus upon the rights and welfare of the great mass of the people? This seems to be the question at issue. The milder course may be unavailing, and in that event the "big stick" must be brought into play, even at the risk of great temporary damage to public interests generally. President Roosevelt may be too strenuous in his methods of dealing with the existing evils, but, after all, it may be that he is doing the country good service in keeping the magnitude of those evils constantly in the public mind. His desire to attain the objects aimed at are shared by many of the prominent statesmen of the country, without regard to their party affiliations. Between them, it is to be hoped, some means may be devised to overcome the difficulties which confront the Nation in dealing with the question in issue and forever rid the country of the gigantic evils under which it has suffered from improper combinations in restraint of legitimate trade and business.

LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

In the House of Delegates the following bills were introduced: By Mr. Myers, to sanction a bequest to the Meadow Branch of the United Baptist Brethren. Referred to the Judiciary Committee. By. Mr. Myers,—To refund to Sarah E. Parish money erroneously paid for taxes.

The Company's lines will be wholly within Baltimore and Carroll counties, in which it is permitted to dispose of electricity. The capital stock of the company is $250,000. The par value of shares is $100. The right to consolidate with other railroads is given.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

The Court of Appeals of Maryland recently decided a question, in an insurance case, of more than ordinary interest to the legal profession and of great importance to merchants in particular. A policy of fire insurance, issued by the German-American Insurance Company to Frank M. Reynolds, provided that the insured should take a complete itemized inventory of stock on hand at least once in each calendar year, and if no inventory had been taken within 12 months prior to the date of the policy, one should be taken within 30 days of its issuance or it should be void. The insured had completed the last inventory Dec. 8th, 1904, which was not within 12 months before the date of the policy, Dec. 22nd, 1905, and that having been issued he did not take another until Feb. 1st, 1906, or 10 days after the time allowed under the provisions of this policy.

Recovery was refused by the lower court, where the case was taken from the jury, because the policy was null and void, by reason of the failure of the insured to comply with the terms thereof. In affirming this ruling of the lower court, Chief Judge Boyd, delivering the opinion of the Court of Appeals, logically asked: "If taking an inventory 10 days after the time allowed be sufficient to revive the policy, why would not 10 months have been?"

"Chasing the Cure."

The last issue of the Methodist Protestant says, "Our worthy young friend Thomas C. Galbreath, of Harford county, Md., widely known as a bright, cultured and honorable young gentleman, is in Colorado, where he has gone for his health. * * He has written a most interesting book, entitled, "Chasing the Cure in Colorado," which contains many incidents to show how the unfortunate sick become the victims of boarding houses, quack doctors and heartless money grabbers. "The Methodist Protestant advises all to read the book, especially if they think of going to Denver in search of health. Mr. Galbreath was a student in Western Maryland College, and is well known in this city, where a number of copies of his book have been sold. The book sells for twenty-five cents. Every copy purchased helps a worthy man."

Sykesville Items.

Mr. P. T. Hammond went to Washington Thursday to spend a few days.

The sleighs were out in good form Thursday, enjoying the snow. Some people of the town went sleighing before breakfast.

There will be a citizens' meeting at the Lyceum to discuss the advisability of a new charter for the town of Sykesville, as the roads are in a very bad condition and citizens have been a long time talking about doing something to better conditions. They can depend upon something doing now. Our honorable Mayor, Wade H. D. Warfield, has his shoulder to the wheel.

Patapsco Conclave No. 412, I. O. H., at its meeting Tuesday night discharged the committees on entertainment and banquet with a rising vote of thanks and especially the ladies committee for the fine manner in which they conducted the affair. The conclave goat expects a warm time next meeting, 18th inst., as there were 8 applicants for membership.

Officers Brandenburg and Barnes had a busy time last week and our honorable justice, Harry Curley, did not leave any grass grow under his feet during the affair. He held Sam Dorsey, alias Leisher Sam, alias Hodo, the wild man from Borneo, as he is better known, in $500 bail in default of which Sam went to jail. He also held Wm. Thomas in $500 bail and Dick Thomas in $1,000 bail. Both went to jail. These three were arrested for stealing Mr. Geo. Schrade's chickens and Hodo and Wm. Dorsey confessed, implicating Dick Thomas in robbing John Harris Saturday before Xmas.

Constable Brandenburg arrested two colored men, Charles Ray and John Ryan, and Justice Curley sent both to the House of Correction for 12 months. W. H. D. Warfield, mayor of Sykesville, said he is going to break up the colored loafers in the town.

Sykesville Athletic Club minstrels entertained the patients at Springfield Hospital last week. The entertainment was much enjoyed.

Mrs. E. M. Mellor and Miss Dorothy Mellor spent several days in Baltimore this week.

Mr. W. H. D. Warfield paid a visit to Baltimore this week.

Mr. W. W. Ritter, deputy supreme archon of district 18, and Mr. M. H. Weer, cashier of the First National Bank, installed officers at South Mountain, Middletown, for Conclave 425, I. O. H., Saturday.

We are having a good harvest of ice this week and the farmers are loading their ice houses up with a stock of frozen water.

Mr. Samuel Cradeler, employed by the David E. Evans Co., building the electric road at Sykesville, for Springfield State Hospital, was severely hurt by a blast of rock. He sustained a compound fracture of both bones of his leg and the limb may have to be amputated. He was attended by Dr. Heffinger, of Sykesville, ann was sent to the University Hospital on the 5.52 P. M. train. This is the first accident which has occurred on the line. Mr. Cradeler was too near when the blast was sent off.

Sykesville Athletic Club gave another performance at Glenwood Thursday night and all who attended were very much pleased.

Mr. Charles Carroll, Supt. of the construction of the electric road at Sykesville, which the David E. Evans Company is building, has resigned to accept a position with Mr. Phelps, of Baltimore.

The Sykesville Home Bakery, controlled by Chas. Obrecht, has moved to the new building which was improved by Wm. H. Bennett for the business.

The Farmers Institute on Tuesday, was attended by most of the farmers of the vicinity. They enjoyed the occasion very much even though they did have a disagreeable drive home. The speakers were A. J. Lovejoy, on "The hog as a consumer of the by products of the dairy," D. Ward Keny, on "Good roads right now," and F. H. Rankin on "Developing the American Farm Boy."
