PLAY THE GAME

When your team is not holding the line
Play the game!
If mischances against you combine
Play the game!
Be loyal. Your score
May be less or be more;
Take the fortune of war,
Play the game!

When the ball inches nearer your goal,
Play the game!
When the pluck seems to slip from your soul,
Play the game!
Be faithful. You may
Save a desperate day;
If you don't anyway
Play the game!

Pocomoke City, Oct. 30.—Somerset, Wicomico and Worcester counties, Maryland, and Accomac counties, Virginia, were represented here tonight at a celebration in connection with the formal opening of a new street in Pocomoke city.

When, in April, 1922, fire wiped out the business section, the reply of the people of Pocomoke to the state and county offer of aid was: "We thank you, but we will take care of our own."

Residents of the town say with pride that as fast as the fire companies cooled the spaces, workmen began to erect temporary structures, and that some of the business concerns were open for business with a new stock of goods in 72 hours after the fire.

Then they began to build. They staked out a street 120 feet wide, with sidewalks 12 or more feet wide. Local banks told the business men to go range for the money. It was insisted on that every building erected should be fireproof.

For more than two years the building has gone on, and the first section of the new Pocomoke is complete.

Tonight the new lighting system went into service. All wires are under ground, the poles removed from the street. The street for two blocks was given over to frolic and dancing. Those who led in the celebration are men who saw their all go up in flames about two years and a half ago.
