EDITORIAL NOTES.

The President on Thursday addressed Congress, making a very earnest appeal for the repeal of the Canal exemptions, and to stand by the national treaty.

Said the President: "We consented to the treaty; its language we accepted, if we did not originated it; and we are too big, too powerful, too self-respecting a nation to interpret with too strained or refined a reading the words of our own promises just because we have power enough to give us leave to read them as we please. The large thing to do is the only thing we can afford to do, a voluntary withdrawal from a position everywhere questioned and misunderstood. We ought to reverse our action without raising the question whether we were right or wrong, and so once more deserve our reputation for generosity and the redemption of every obligation without quibble or hesitation."

There ought to be no doubt about the action of Congress in this matter.

The Snow Hill Messenger notes, as many people have observed, that there are visitors coming to the Peninsula two or three times a year—solemn-looking Turks or Armenians, soliciting money to build chuurches, etc., in their native lands. They have headquarters in New York. The New York Charity Organization Society has issued a bulletin warning against these Oriental beggars. They are frauds and confidence men, the bulletin states. Carolinians have contributed several times to these clerical-looking humbugs.

Caroline canners were much elated at the defeat last week in the State Senate of the proposed eight hour law. The enactment of this law would have been a serious embarrassment to the canning industry of the county. The fight was really made against the measure by the county men, who contended that the bill was introduced at the instance of the city packers, who do not experience the same labor problems that confront the packers of the county. The same bill attempted to place further restrictions on child labor.

The recent action of the Governor of Massachusetts in refusing to accept an increase of salary voted by the legislature constitutes an example worthy of note and emulation. The verdict of the election constituted a binding contract with the people, said the Governor.

Mr. John Bassett Moore, for years a counsellor of the State Department at Washington, has resigned. Mr. Moore was born at Smyrna in 1860, the son of Dr. John A. and Mrs. Martha Moore. Mr. Moore is engaged in Carnegie Institute work.

Prof. Brumbaugh, school superintendent of Philadelphia, has been discussed daily in the Philadelphia papers lately as a suitable candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania. Prof. Brumbaugh has a number of relatives in Caroline county.

Bishop Thomas Bowman, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died Tuesday at his home, in Orange, N. J. He was 96 years old. Bishop Bowman was the most prominent member of the M. E. Church in this country.

On Thursday last the Maryland Senate held a memorial service in honor of Hon. Isidor Rayner, a former member of that body.

THE FARMER AND THE INCOME TAX.

If a farmer is so fortunate as to have a net income of over $3,000 a year in case he is a bachelor, or $4,000 if married, he is subject to the income tax, and under the law each individual had to make return to the Internal Revenue collector of his district on or before the first day of March if he had a net income of $5,000 or over ($2,500 for the ten months of 1913.) While the interest of most farmers in this subject is purely academic, the Department of Agriculture has inquiries indicating that some wish to know just what is required of them under the new law.

The income tax law of October 3, 1913, places a tax of 1 per cent. upon all net incomes of over $3,000, with an additional tax on incomes of $20,000 or more. The first question arising in the minds of most people is what constitutes a net income. For a man receiving a regular salary, or a business man with a good system of bookkeeping, it is easy to determine whether or not his income is taxable. But the farmer who receives no stated income, and who often fails to keep accurate account of receipts and expenditures, it is more difficult to calculate his net income.

In order that farmers may be posted on the income tax as it may concern them, the following information has been furnished by the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department:

In general, an income consists of amounts derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service, paid in any form; also from professions, business, sales or dealings in property, or from rents, interest on bonds or mortgages, dividends on stocks, or other income from investments. These items constitute gross income, from which there should be deducted the expenses of carrying on the business; interest paid on indebtedness; worthless debts charged off; losses by fire, storm or shipwreck, not covered by insurance; exhaustion, wear and tear of property, and any income upon which the income tax has already been deducted at the source, as, for instance, dividends on the stock of a corporation which has already paid the tax on its earnings.

The provisions regarding net incomes of $3,000 apply only to unmarried persons, or to married persons not living with wife or husband. A husband and wife living together are entitled to an exemption of $4,000 on their aggregate income. This means that in case the wife has a separate income, if this added to husband's income amounts to $4,000 the total is subject to the tax; or, if the wife has no separate income, the husband's income is taxable only in case it reaches $4,000. But a return must be made if the aggregate income of both is $2,500 for the year 1913. The joint exemption, however, would be $3,333.33.

In arriving at his net income the farmer should start with his gross income. This would consist of any items of the kind above enumerated, and especially all receipts from the sale of products of every description from the farm. This would include all money received for produce and animals sold, and for the wool and hides of animals slaughtered, if the wool and hides are sold; but he may deduct from these items the amounts actually paid as purchase money for the animal sold or slaughtered during the year. When the animals raised by the owner are sold or slaughtered, however, their value should not be deducted.

From the gross income there should be deducted amounts of money actually paid as expense for operating the farm and producing the farm products, live stock, etc. This would include hired farm labor, farm supplies purchased that are necessary to carry on the business and not an investment that represents principal, etc. Expenses for repairs on farm property may be deducted, provided the amount deducted does not exceed the amount spent for such repairs during the year for which the return is made. The cost of replacing tools or machinery may also be deducted to the extent that the cost of the new articles does not exceed the value of the old. No deducation may be made for the cost of additional farm machinery, but credit may be allowed for the annual depreciation in the value of such machinery. For example, if a machine cost $100 and is regarded as good for ten years of service, the annual depreciation would be 10 per cent. and a deduction of $10 each year could be made on this account, as part of the expense of operating the farm.

The expense of supporting the family, however, can not be deducted from the gross income. Among items for which credit is not allowed are expense for medical attendance, life insurance, insurance on dwelling, store accounts, family supplies, wages of domestic servants, and cost of board, room or house rent for family or personal use. In case an individual owns his residence he cannot deduct the estimated value of his rent. But a tenant operating a rented farm as proprietor may deduct the rent of the farm as a part of the expense of his business.

Farmers are not required to include in their income the produce taken from the farm and consumed by the family. Only produce sold off the farm is to be included. A farmer is not entitled to a deduction for his own labor, or for expense of feeding live stock. He may, however, deduct such items as cost of fertilizer and other supplies and materials which are used up in the course of his operations.

PROPOSED JUNE PRIMARY AND THE FARMERS.

Senator Lee strongly advises against the change of the dates for holding primary elections in this State, as proposed by Senator Beck's bill, from September to early June. Senator Lee fears that if held in the rushing season of June a very great many of our farmers would be forced to neglect the work of helping to choose candidates; and certainly a decrease in the farmer vote in the Democratic primary would be deplored by every member of the party who wishes success. Senator Lee says in an interview:

"This is a serious and significant proposed change. It practically says to the busy farmer and all of those in the counties whose labor is greatest in the opening of the summer season: 'Your participation in the councils of the Democratic party is not desirable and a date has been selected that will make it hard for you busy men to take part in choosing county and State candidates.' And it says to the candidates, especially those running on some public issue, 'You shall have no fair opportunity to discuss the issues before the voters and meet them face to face.'

"In the former days the Central Committees in the various counties of the State and in Baltimore city were free to fix the dates in their respective jurisdictions, but the State-Wide Primary law involved the fixing of a single date best suited to the voters in every section of the State. When the matter came up in discussion in the preparation of the last amendments to the present Primary law, it was agreed, after the fullest discussion with representatives from every section of the State, that the dates fixed in the law, September 8 to 15, was the most available period for Baltimore city and the counties of the State, considered as a whole, and would insure the largest possible attendance at the polls.

"In all past discussions of this matter the question at issue has been as to whether the primaries should be held in the late summer or in the fall. Objection was made to late summer primaries because it was conceded that, although best suited to the counties, thousands of voters in Baltimore city would be absent on vacation at that season. And objection came from the counties to an early summer primary on the ground that the great mass of the farmers were at that time busily engaged in various kinds of farm work, which would render it impossible to make an intelligent campaign on public issues before the primaries or to secure a full attendance at the polls at the conclusion of an early summer or spring primary campaign.

"The pending bill, however, is practically a proposition for a spring primary, and it is important that attention now be called to the necessary effect of holding primaries at such a season of the year, more than five months before the election. To so hold them would tend to destroy the value of the present primary election system, which we have fought for so many years to establish and the good effects of which have already been demonstrated.

"The Democratic State conventions of 1911 and 1913 went to great lengths in assuring all elements of the party that no detrimental changes would be made in the primary election system. This was done in the interest of our nominees for State and local offices. The passage of the proposed bill without public discussion or public demand and contrary to the spirit of platform pledges would savor of a breech of faith which a Democratic Legislature can ill afford to sanction."

It is estimated that over every acre of soil there are 11,000,000 pounds of free nitrogen and to secure the presence of this nitrogen in the soil has been a problem for ages. One of the most successful growers of fruit trees in this country, Mr. Orlando Harrison, of Berlin, Md., has introduced the planting of cow peas in his great nursery and commercial orchards, as a cover crop, for this purpose. The cow-pea absorbs the nitrogen from the air and stores it in nodules on its roots. This is dissolved and absorbed by the trees and is more beneficial in the growth of fruit trees than any other fertilizer.
