DEMOCRATS FOR TARIFF REFORM.

At last Congress is in session. Promptly at noon Monday the gavels of Senator Frye, the new President of the Senate, and of Alexander M. Dowell, Clerk of the House called those bodies to order and the opening session of the Fifty-Seventh Congress was thereby inaugurated. In the Senate Senator Hanna was promptly recognized by the Chairman, and in a few well-chosen words informed his colleagues of the death of President McKinley and moved for adjournment out of respect to the deceased. The motion was unanimously carried.

In the House the Members were sworn in, the Speaker, General Henderson and the other officers elected; seats were chosen by lot with the exception of that of ex-Speaker Galusha A. Grow, who in accordance with precedent, was permitted to choose his seat before the lottery commenced. As soon as Speaker Henderson had taken possession of the chair he recognized Representative Grosvenor of Ohio, who formally announced the death of the late President, and moved that the House adjourn out of respect to the dead until Tuesday, which motion was unanimously carried.

The Democratic minority, which completed its organization in caucus on Saturday, though small in numbers, is prepared for vigorous action and strenuous opposition to the extravagant expenditures of public funds which is characteristic of the Republicans when in control of both Congressional chambers.

As I have already predicted in these letters, Representative Richardson, of Tennessee, was nominated for the speakership, a purely complimentary nomination but one that carries with it the leadership of the Democratic forces in the current Congress.

Mr. Richardson's ability as a parliamentarian, his quiet but determined methods of warfare and the gentle and dignified manner with which he can excoriate his opponents when their indifference to the public welfare demands it, all combine to render him exceptionally well qualified for the responsibilities of his position.

Republican majorities in both the House and Senate are too large to permit of the Democrats taking the initiative in the introduction of needed legislation but they will persistently urge the reduction of the tariff, at least in so far as its provisions are prohibitive, whether they see that such reduction will be most surely accomplished by the ratification of reciprocity treaties or by a change of the tariff schedules.

An especial effort will be made to secure the abolition of the war revenue tariff. It will be remembered that the original war revenue bill, justified only on the ground that this country was at war with Spain, aimed at providing an extra income of $100,000,000 per annum. Last session, the Republicans having announced that the war was over, an effort was made to secure the repeal of the law, the Democrats using every means in their power to relieve the people of this unnecessary burden, but they succeeded only in so far as they compelled the Republicans to pass a measure which reduced the revenues by $30,000,000. The remaining $70,000,000 a year has continued to accumulate in the Treasury until the surplus has assumed proportions which the Republican Secretary of the Treasury has been forced to admit are inimical to the welfare of the country.

A consistent effort at retrenchment in expenditures and the curtailment of extravagant appropriations will be exerted and it is hoped that unity of action under the direction of an able leader may accomplish much along these lines.

Legislation calculated to control or suppress the trusts will be demanded by the Democrats and the anti-trust measure, which the Republicans buried in a Senate Committee last session, will be resuscitated and many Republican Congressmen will be placed in a position where they will be compelled to vote for it or absolutely stultify themselves and violate the pledges which they made in the recent campaign. The Democrats realize that, small as may be their numbers, they have the American people back of them in their fight on the trusts and they will leave no stone unturned in their efforts to force the Republican majorities to heed the peoples' wish.

At the Democratic caucus held Saturday morning, after Mr. Richardson had been nominated for speaker, Mr. Kerr, of Pennsylvania, for clerk, etc., a number of resolutions were presented and eventually referred to a committee which was instructed to report to a caucus to be held on January 10th. The resolutions include a condemnation of the highly protective features of the tariff, a condemnation of the trusts; and of all legislation which enables American manufacturers to sell to foreign producers more cheaply than to American consumers; an expression favoring "just and generous treatment of Porto Rico and Cuba; an expression of opposition to the ship subsidy bill as presented at the last session of Congress, and to all measures designed to use the public funds for the benefit of private interests.

They also expressed determination to insist on the "sacred force of the fundamental American rule of Democratic self-government" and opposition to any colonial form of government. Other resolutions provided for the internal government of the Democratic minority; condemned the solicitation of patronage from the administration and opposed any change in the existing standards of values, the latter resolution being forced by Eastern and opposed by Western Democrats.

ABOUT FARMERS' INSTITUTES.

To the Editors of the Journal.

At the State Fairs, Agricultural Colleges, and Experiment Stations on many farms in the North and the North-west, including Canada, the Pan-American and its Live Stock Exposition, I have met many men and women who are recognized authorities and leaders in their lines as educators, importers, exhibitors, expert judges, breeders and feeders, whose acquaintances will be an enduring resource I shall always cherish. That my friends, the Institute patrons, may share the privilege with me, I have thought it possible, where the work of our Department is appreciated, and we are sufficiently encouraged and supported, to give a Special Institute, before the regular institute season, where two or three of these well-known men or women could be invited to meet our farmers. With this thought in mind, I have asked several of those I have met, if we arrange such a meeting as mentioned, where a visit can be made pleasant and profitable, in a better understanding of Maryland, would they accept an invitation to it? Without an exception we received favorable replies, with a complimentary expression showing an interest in our State and the hospitable habits of its people.

Though the thought came late to offer this treat at this time we now have the promise of four, (who, when our patrons meet them, they will long remember) to attend a Special Institute, one on the Eastern Shore, at Easton, Talbot county, December 17th; one, accessible to all patrons, at Towson, Baltimore county, December 19; and one for Western Maryland, at Westminster, December 20. The first and last to have an evening session.

Our invited guests will be Col. Jos. H. Brigham, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture at Washington; subject: "The United States Department of Agriculture and our Foreign Markets."

Mr. L. H. Kerrick, Bloomington, Ill., the Champion Baby Beef feeder, who, in 1899 and 1900, took the first prize on a carload of cattle at the Chicago International Live-Stock Exposition, selling the lot for the highest price ever paid in any market for a carload of cattle. This year, December 2nd, he will again show a load selected from 60 yearlings I saw in one of his feed-lots in October, 1900—cattle I then thought more beautiful and picturesque in their pasture than any I had ever seen. His subject will be "Why and How I Grow Baby Beef."

Hon. O. C. Gregg, Superintendent Farmers' Institutes of Minnesota. I met Mr. Gregg first in 1896 in Chicago, at a meeting of International Institute Workers. Speaking of his experience, he said: "My father was an itinerant, and I was ordained a minister, but not feeling called to the work, accompanied by my good wife we moved far out, by wagon, into the open country, where we carved a good farm out of the plains, fought Sioux Indians, taught school, helped my neighbors when I could, and have conducted Farmers' Institutes for 15 years." Mr. Gregg is every inch a man, one of those characters and frontiersmen to whom we Americans owe so much, for this our great and prosperous country. I have asked him to speak of "The Dairy Cow," and "The Farmer of the Past, Present and Future."

Miss Emma Suter Jacobs, Director of the Cooking Schools of Washington, a tireless worker and constant student, having begun her work under adverse conditions, understands the needs of housekeepers and how to make their work light and pleasant. Her subject will be "The Staff of Life—Demonstrated."

If this first effort, to bring men and women whom we read of and have learned to admire, and whose writings and speeches we accept as a text on which to base our life-work, succeeds, it shall grow under our management into a prominent feature of institute work, but we should have a large audience, of our representative people, to meet them, or it will injure rather than improve the work, as such visitors will exercise great influence over others we invite in the future. As an advertising feature for our State, we know of nothing better, as their impression obtained when among us will be accepted as facts by thousands of hearers they annually meet or who read their writings from the press. We hope that everyone, men and women, will come to meet them. It is quite possible that another opportunity will not be offered in this State to hear them.

Though I shall send a private letter to every patron who has shown enough interest in our work, to give us his name and address, about five thousand, if you will make mention of the above facts through your press, I shall be very grateful, and I have no doubt your patrons will be also, who have not accepted repeated warnings, that there is in agriculture, as in all other callings, an everlasting need to hustle, and to keep informed what others are doing and how they do it, that they may continue to have a thanksgiving turkey every year, grown by themselves.

Watches given with Boys' Clothing until Christmas

As has been our custom for years past, we are giving until Christmas real time-keeping Watches with Chains with every $5 and $10 worth of Boys' clothing, hats and shoes. We do this as an advertisement and to make our house popular with the little fellows. The Watch given with $5 is the celebrated Yankee Nickel Watch, and with $10 is the Triumph Silver Watch. Neat chain with charm goes with every watch. The clothing costs you no more than regular price, the watch and chain cost you nothing. During the past 4 years at Christmas times we have given away more than 1000 of these watches and feel well paid for the extra expense of their cost.

Open Tuesday and Saturday nights.

Of special interest now is the fall and winter stock of Clothing. Some folks have regularly gone to the city to buy their outfit, but with the lines now on hand such an expense may be saved. Gray and Brown Overcoats—the stylish Raglans—range in price from $5.50 to $3.50; Brown Cloth Overcoats, very neat and of attractive texture, $7; full suits for men and youths, at figures which you will say will compare very favorably with the most satisfactory terms obtained in the city. Boys' suits for lads ranging in age from eight to sixteen years—in artistic styles. One specially good for the money is a blue with a little pin stripe, $2. Other colors are green, brown and black—prices from $2 to $4.25: We want to remind the extra large men that we have some extra sizes in pants, up to fifty inch waist measure. That ought to be big enough for anybody, including our two hundred and fifty pounders.

DRESS GOODS AND FURS.

Ladies' Furs at this store range in price from $1 to $6.50. In the matter of Dress Goods our stock embraces French Flannels, with embroidered edges, for waists; Venetian Cloth, of various colors; Melrose Cloth; Black Henriettas, ranging in price from $1 to $1.60 a yard. New supply of Carpets and Window blinds.
