Mr. Lewis Hay was hauling out manure and his niece, Beatrice, the little 8 year-old daughter of Mr. Jackson, who was hunting eggs around the barn, ran between Mr. Hay and the wagon just as he was in the act of throwing a fork full of manure. The fork struck the child, the prong penetrating right in the temple. The child was immediately taken to Dr. Brice's office and she was in such a critical condition the doctor thought it best for her to remain there which she did until about 3 o'clock Monday morning, when she died. The remains were taken in charge by J. L. Smith, undertaker, by whom she was prepared for burial and taken to the home of her parents in her casket late Monday evening. LEGISLATIVE NOTES.

The Legislature will close Monday night at midnight by the clock. It may be noon Tuesday by Washington standard time.

Democrats should redeem the party pledges and put the responsibility of a veto up to the Governor.

The Campbell Price oyster bill passed the Senate with only six votes against it, one of which was Senator W. W. Beck, of Kent. The Baltimore Evening Sun says Mr. Beck has consistently voted against any oyster planting bill, believing it to be against the interests of the oystermen of his county. The bill came up in the House Wednesday.

The present status of the bill in its chief provisions, is as follows:

A Marylander may lease 30 acres of barren or depleted bottom in the county water, 100 acres in Tangier Sound and 500 acres in the Chesapeake.

The Senate amendment prohibits the use of power boats in taking oysters, but allows the use of sail dredge boats. For the infringement of this provision a fine may be imposed of from $50 to $200.

An amendment leaves the fixing of the rentals in the hands of the Maryland Shellfish Commission, no rentals, however to be less than 25 cents an acre.

Under the present oyster laws there is no provision for conserving the natural beds, but the Campbell-Price bill apportions one-half of the proceeds from rentals to shelling the natural bottoms. Depredations on natural beds under the Campbell-Price bill are punished with forfeiture of the boats, imprisonment in the House of Correction, a fine up to $500 and denial of the right to the offender to take out a license for three years.

An interesting discussion occurred in the Senate over an order to adopt the cloture or gag rule. Senator Lee, who was leading the effort for cloture asked Senator Benson, leader of the opposition whether he would agree to come to a vote on the Local Option Bill, and to this Mr. Benson replied that he would not be a party to any gentleman's agreement.

He then continued at length to attack the cloture proposition, which he denounced in unmeasured terms, declaring it to be the instrumeat with which a brutal majority coerced the minority.

Senator Coady followed and denounced the proposed rule which he declared to be revolutionary. "You will regret the day you adopted this rule," he continued. The Democratic majority of today will be turned into a Republican majority two years hence, and you will get a dose of your own medicine."

Senator Beck created consternation in the ranks of his local option colleagues when he declared that it was time enough to pass such an order when the President showed unfairness. Until his decisions were manifestly unfair he would refuse to vote for cloture.

"So far as the Local Option bill is concerned," said he, "that has nothing to do with this decision. Whenever a rule is revolutionary it should go to a committee, and for that reason the reference is a proper one. We would do well to pause and consider the effect of such a proceeding. I want to say that I intend to vote for the local option bill when it comes over, and will do my part to have it carried; but until the President demonstrates that he is partial in his decisions affecting this measure I must refuse to vote against him."

The vote was then taken on the appeal and the President was sustained by 13 to 12. Senator Price did not vote and the only other change in the lineup was the transfer of Senator Beck's vote.

In explaining his position when his name was called, the President said that; in making the reference of the order, he had not in mind a single moment the local option bill, and it had given him no concern until it was mentioned on the floor.

Why Admission Price Increased.

To the Friends and Supporters of the Washington College Baseball Team:

We are writing this letter to explain why we have raised the price of admission to our games. This is no money making scheme on our part. We have arranged games with the best college teams in the country, and you must know that such teams will not come here for small guarantees. We could have arranged games with teams of less consequence at much less cost, but games with such teams would not be at all interesting, so looking to the
