But when a Republican ticket is elected, confidence is at once felt that conditions will be favorable for business success. It is known that a reasonabl policy toward business will be pursued and that enterprising people will be given a fair chance to make good free Many of them look with contempt on ing up the bad habits of the street. But when there always a chance that the vote may be while they will make their living by what they consider higher forms of split up so as to throw the election into Congress. Such a result would be deeply deplored in most quarters.

A Congress that showed so little power of constructive action could not be depended upon to make a wise choice if it had to elect a president. This is the uncertainty that is holding up business. The way to put an end to such depressing influences is to vote for Coolidge and Dawes and secure an election by the people.
