Happenings That Affect

The Future of Everyone

In April the Department of Agriculture published a booklet which represents more than a year of study and preparation. It is entitled "Development of Agriculture's Human Resources—A Report on Problems of Low-Income Farmers." Its importance is spotlighted in a letter written by President Eisenhower to Congress: "In this wealthiest of nation where per capita income is the highest in the world, more than one-fourth of the families who live on American farms still have cash incomes of less than $1,000 a year. They neither share fully in our economic and social progress nor contribute as much as they would like and can contribute to the nations production of goods and services . . . . We must open wider the doors of opportunity to our 1,500,000 farm families with extremely low incomes—for their own well being and for the good of our country and all our people."

In submitting the report to the President, Secretary of Agriculture Benson recommended the launching of pilot operations in not less than 50 of the 1,000 low-income counties during the coming fiscal year. He then described a 15-point program which is to be followed with the proper balance among the various elements involved to be determined by the special circumstances of each area.

These points include: Expand and adapt agricultural extension work to meet the needs of low income and part-time farmers. Develop needed research in farm and home management, marketing, nutrition, etc. Increase technical assistance, such as that provided by the Soil Conservation Service, to low income farmers. Encourage the states to expand vocational training in rural areas of low income. Request the Department of Labor to strengthen the Employment Service in rural areas and further adapt it to the needs of rural people. Encourage the expansion of industry in the rural low-income areas. Enlist the aid of the State agricultural colleges in conducting research and in other ways. Aggressively encourage farm, business, and other leadership to assume local responsibility and to unite in efforts to aid in the development of agricultures human resources. The Secretary also said that Congress will be asked for a $30,000,000 appropriation for the Farmers Home Administration to launch the program.

It is clear, as the President said in his letter to Congress, that the "program recognizes that this is not exclusively an agricultural problem but that opportunities for off-farm employment are a part of the solution."Most of the low-income farmers live on small, unproductive farms of a marginal or worn out nature. To many observers, one of the most important needs is to encourage large numbers of these people to take productive jobs in factories. Actually, over the years, much of the increase in our industrial labor force has come in this fashion.

There is still another reason why this would be good for the whole country as well as for the farm families concerned. Most economists believe that we will experience a labor shortage for 20 years or more. The low-income farm group is one of the few available or potential reservoirs of manpower left.
