Fifteen years ago, or in 1919, The Maryland Tuberculosis Association, realizing that the prevention of tuberculosis in children would eventually reduce the mortality from this disease, opened the Miracle House for its first season. The purpose of the institution was to demonstrate the theory that fresh air, proper and sufficient food, and supervised exercises would rebuild undernourished bodies, and establish a greater resistance in the bodies of children who were living in contact with this dreaded disease. This theory was not a fallacious one, as the records of the Miracle House and similar institutions in the United States will verify. A comparison of the Miracle House of today, with the Miracle House of 1919 is interesting. In 1919 the institution opened with twelve beds and with very limited facilities. If you can imagine the main building without its porch or salarium, and extending only about half of its present length, and the small cottage to the rear, you will then have an idea of the Miracle House in its infancy. Today the Miracle House has a bed capacity of 140 children and is one of the largest preventoria in the United States. It has been visited by health workers and physicians from most states in the Union and many foreign shores.

Senators and Congressmen from the farm districts are wearing beatific smiles these days. Their constituents, the farmers, are coming up on top with their profits for the first time in a dozen years. They are getting more for beef. Pork prices are rising. Corn, too. And the 1933 wheat crop promises to be a real golden harvest, both in color and coin.

William G. Shepherd, veteran interpreter of the signs of the times, sums up exactly w[illegible] the farm politicians are think[illegible] survey which he has ma[illegible] her's Weekly. But he didn't begin to realize what a tremendous thing is happening until he go out among the farmers—in Texas, Kansas, Indiana and the South.

The precise economics of the situation are a bit puzzling, and will give the college professors plenty to think out. But the facts are quite clear. Take the Texas where situation, for example.

Here's what Mr. Shepherd reports from his watch tower in Texas; "The coming wheat crop, already being harvested, will be the shortest, for various reasons in over 20 years. But this crop will bring prices to the farmer that will pay taxes, pay interest, help to redeem mortgaged land and pay him a profit besides."

Government aid doesn't figure much in Mr. Shepherd's report on the situation. But that doesn't matter. The main thing, from the Washington viewpoint, is that the farmer i[illegible] whistling again.

3,500 LIVES AND $100,000,000 DAMAGE

This is what fires cost the farmers of America every year. For protection against fire—the quick summoning of neighbors' help—a telephone is a necessity. And in the meantime it gets the best prices in buying supplies and selling produce. It flashes fast messages to doctor and veterinarian. It keeps the family in touch with their neighbors. If you have a telephone, use it more. If not, don't be without one another day. Ask our Business Office and see how low the rates are.

See the Bell System exhibit at the "Century of Progress" exposition in Chicago, June 1—October 31. Telephone for hotel and other reservations.

WHAT A VETERINARIAN SAYS ABOUT THE TELEPHONE...

WHEN a horse becomes overheated or when cows get bloated from overeating, the difference of an hour or so may mean the saving of valuable live stock. ● The telephone has become indispensable to modern farm life. It brings help quickly in emergencies such as sudden illness and fire. Keeps the family in constant friendly touch with the neighbors. And the cost is so low as to be negligible.

Call our Business Office today and ask about the charges.

A POT LUCK DINNER

"Come in and take pot luck" was the old invitation for a most informal dinner—and only the most conventional person could see that "pot luck" wasn't the best luck in the world. Some say the expression originated from peasant heartsides where the pot always bubbled away, and some days it contained more of this, while another day more of that—and one took the luck of the pot. Others associate the poker significance of the term "pot." But no matter where it came from—it's "pot luck" just the same.

And just now, Pot Luck dinners are very much in vogue, because they offer a sparkling, spontaneous sort of evening with no formal restrictions. Here is the way one little group worked it out. They were congenial couples who dined together once a week at the country club in good golf weather. And then, came winter—as the movies used to say. So, to speed winter on its way, one young matron, who liked lots of fun with little fuss, suggested a once-a-week pot luck dinner at a different house each time, with each couple bringing a course.

Here's the Menu for 8

Paradise Cocktail
Onion Soup
Veal Medallions
Asparagus with Hollandaise Sauce
Dressed Cucumber, Radish and Green Pepper Rings
Bread Sticks
Charlotte Russe à l'Orleans
Coffee Mints

And What a Dinner!

The hostess served the main course, because planked steaks and such things dislike to be dashed around over miles of road to get to their destinations, and the guests brought good-natured travelers such as soups, salads, desserts, etc. And what a dinner this first pot luck meal turned out to be! Very appropriately, almost everything came in pots—the sort that are easy to cook in, easy to carry and easy to serve from.

The first course was a cocktail, and it came cold and frosty after the cracked-ice manner of cocktails; then there was onion soup in those little French onion soup bowls which boast lids. The soup came in a big crock and was heated and then poured into the little bowls—which the soup-course guest brought along with her—since soup must be piping hot. Then followed veal medallions and asparagus with Hollandaise sauce, which was the main course contribution of the hostess; someone else brought the salad—dressed cucumber radish and green pepper rings—transported "cool as a cucumber," in a thermos jug. Another guest brought a delicious charlotte for dessert, and also a can of coffee which she made into delicious drip coffee just before serving. Paper plates and napkins were a happy thought because they eliminated the aftermath of after dinner dishes and linen.

Paradise Cocktail: Drain the contents of one No. 1 can of pears and cut the fruit in small cubes. Add one cup orange pulp. Mash three tablespoons mint jelly, four tablespoons fresh lime juice, two-thirds cup of orange juice and syrup from the pears. Heat until the jelly is melted. Chill and pour over the fruit. Serve ice cold in cocktail cups with a garnish of sprigs of fresh mint.

Onion Soup: Sauté two cups thinly sliced onions in four tablespoons butter until a golden brown and partly tender. Add one and one-half quarts of boiling water and two cans of bouillon. Cook gently until the onions are done. Season to taste. In serving, float one or two small diamond-shaped pieces of toast, thickly covered with Parmesan cheese, in each serving.

Veal Medallions: Cut the contents of three 7-ounce cans of veal loaf in eight even pieces, then shape and pat carefully with the hands into nice round flat patties. Add grated cheese to seasoned mashed potatoes, and pile lightly in round mounds on the veal patties. Place a thick slice of nice ripe tomato on top of each, and sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Bake in a hot oven—400 degrees—for about twenty minutes.

Charlotte Russe à l'Orleans: Soak one and one-fourth tablespoons gelatin in four tablespoons cold water. Beat four egg yolks with six tablespoons sugar, add two cups scalded milk and cook in a double boiler until creamy. Add the gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add one-fourth pound of stale crushed macaroons and eight stale lady fingers and set aside to cool and set. When about to stiffen, add one cup of moist coconut, and fold in one cup of heaten cream. Chill in ice box for several hours. Serve piled in glasses with a garnish of whipped cream and cherries.
