Eastern Shore Fair September 11 - 14

The local office of the Maryland State Employment Service, located at 207 North Street, Elkton, Maryland, was opened just one year ago. Prior to that time, Cecil County was covered by itinerant service from Chestertown and Towson. Since this office was opened it has been very busy with the large PWA program which has been going on in this County and securing qualified workers for the private employers of this county.

The Employment Service is sponsored by the State and Federal Government and is set up to aid the private employers of Cecil County in securing qualified workers. If there is not a qualified worker in this County, the local office can easily contact the other offices located in various parts of the State. This service is absolutely free, there is no charge either to the employer or employee.

At the present time this office has several openings for cooks, housekeepers, maids, farm hands and waitresses for restaurant work which it is unable to fill due to the lack of qualified applicants. All workers especially in these classifications are urged to register if they want work.

The employers of Cecil County are urged to make use of this service which has been provided for them and they are invited to visit the local office at any time. All that is necessary for the employes to do is to advise the Employment office by personal visit or call Elkton 381 and state what will be expected of the applicant and the office will do everything possible to secure a qualified worker.

Automobiles and Schools

The familiar "School" signs once more take on significance with the Fall term about to start, the Keystone Automobile Club declares in a bulletin asking motorist cooperation in accident prevention.

Motorists' responsibilities are increased by the return of children to school because more caution will be requird in guarding against child accidents, Matthew P. Hanley, Manager of the Eastern Shore Division of the Club, said.

School "beginners," it is pointed out, do not have the benefit of safety instruction. Their safety depends largely upon the way in which vehicles are operated, not only in the vicinity of schools, but on all streets where children are walking on their way to and from the classrooms.

Free for several months from the restraint imposed by safety education in the classrooms, many children are likely to be less safety conscious than they are during the rest of the school term, it is asserted.

The Club also wishes to impress upon motor vehicle operators the importance of cooperating with the School Safety Patrols. The boys and girls who constitute these patrols are doing a splendid work in accident prevention. They are always on the alert to safeguard fellow pupils, but their efforts wil lbe hampered without complete cooperation of motorists.

Sam Browne belts, arm bands, safety literature, and safety posters are now being prepared for distribution by the Club.

Largest Comunity Forest

The city of Seattle, Wash., which owns and operates the Nation's largest community forest—62,000 acres—expects a net return of $2.25 per acre a year after all operating expenses are paid, reports the United States Forest Service. Purchased 39 years ago to protect the Seattle watershed, the forest has already paid back on the sale of wood products more than $1,000,000—which has been sufficient to retire all debt and take care of all expenses.

The Low Down From Hickory Grove

I see where the 100 million they gave Mr. Wallace down in Old Spendthrift Town, it is all gone—and now Congress has given him another 100 million. If everybody who lost his shirt on some horse-race could go back and get another 100 million, it would be great stuff. Hot Dog!

But this last 10 0million, Mr. Wallace, he is gonna put it on the same old horse again, so it don't look so promising—for the taxpayer.

But I was gassin' with my old friend Henry about it—Henry lives in Puget Sound—and he says, Jo, maybe you never heard about the duck who took his spring bath, and lost his vest. And I says, what has that to do with Mr. Wallace's shirt? And Henry says maybe Mr. Wallace will find his shirt like the duck found his vest, the next spring.

And I says where did the guy find it, and Henry says, he found it under his shirt.

But I can see where Henry is confused—Mr. Wallace, he won't have either a shirt or a vest to find anything under—by next spring.

Yours, with the low down,

JO SERRA.

A belligerent war vessel in an American port can take on only enough provisions to bring her supply to peace-time standards, and only enough fuel to carry her to the nearest port of her home country.

Such a vessel may not obtain a second supply of fuel in an American port until three months have elapsed.

Repairs to such a vessel in an American port shall be sufficient only to make her seaworthy. Damages caused by the enemy's fire shall not be repaired.

Foreign war vessels are forbidden to conduct searches or take prizes while in American waters.

The proclamation also contains other prohibitions.
