THE PRINTER.

He stands at his case the whole day long,
And beguileth the hours sometimes with a song;
He setteth whatever you put on his case,
And always preserveth a tranquil face.

He cheweth tobacco, and loveth the same,
And betimes is fond a social game;
His harmless life is useful to all,
And his quiet ways we love to recall.

The news he knoweth, of weal or woe,
For the "art of arts" he cannot forego;
But let them be evil or let them be good,
He picketh the type as only he should.

And when the copy is something odd,
He stareth upon it with many a nod,—
Then whistles aloud his feelings to calm,
The tune of some old familiar psalm.

What if his language is now and then
Not what is used by orthodox men?
He beginneth the trade at the lowest level,
And is known, for a year or two, as the devil.

On war news he 's heavy, on politics grim,
On science, sometimes he 's exceedingly slim.
On social or moral, or light or profound,
He hoeth his row o'er the roughest of ground.

He may vex us, 'tis true, with his humor or fun,
But without him, alas! the world is undone;
Let him go where he will, whether sober or mellow,
He 's ever the same whole-souled clever fellow.

Galena, May 30, 1866. TURTLE.

RAILROADS IN THE COUNTIES ON THE EASTERN SHORE.

The counties of Worcester, Somerset, Dorchester, Talbot and Caroline are building their roads, or making arrangements to build, under late charters. Each county having a separate allotment of the one million loan granted by the State for the express purpose of assisting the Eastern Shore counties in the construction of railroad facilities, the five counties above mentioned have arranged to connect their roads with the Delaware Railroad.

For the three upper counties—Cecil, Kent and Queen Anne's—a very favorable route can be selected from Elkton, running south through those counties, that will give greater and much better railroad facilities than the contemplated roads to connect the county seats of Kent and Queen Anne's with the Delaware road.

The most important points on the route from Elkton would be as follows: the line of the Elkton and Sassafras Railroad, (graded to the crossing of the Bohemia river,) crossing the Sassafras river one mile north of Fredericktown, thence to Galena, Millington and Chestertown, Kent county; thence to Centreville, Queen Anne's county; thence running to the southeast corner of the county, connecting with the Delaware and Maryland Railroad at Hillsboro', on the line of Caroline county, 25 miles from Oxford, the terminus of the Maryland and Delaware Railroad on the Chesapeake Bay, in Talbot county.

Approximate Distances from Elkton:

Elkton to Sassafras River	17 miles.
Sassafras to Chestertown, Kent co.	15 "
Chestertown to Centreville, Q. A. co.	15 "
Centreville to Hillsboro', M.&D.R.R.	10 "
Total distance Elkton to Hillsboro'	57 "

$380,000 is the allotment to these counties. The city of Baltimore would subscribe liberally to this road, and there is no doubt but an arrangement can be made with the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Company to stock and operate the road, paying a fixed per cent. on the cost. It only requires an energetic movement on the part of the people of Cecil, Kent and Queen Anne's counties to secure the building of this road at an early day. The amount allotted to the three counties, namely, Cecil county, $168,000; Kent county, $101,530; Queen Anne's, $110,455—nearly one-half of the amount of the cost of the road complete, ready for the rolling stock.

The extension of the projected railroad 53 miles would carry out the original project of building a railroad through the Eastern Shore counties from Elkton to Hillsboro', the proposed terminus on the line of the Maryland and Delaware Railroad; to Denton, crossing the Choptank river at that point in Caroline county; thence to Federalsburg; thence to the crossing of the Dorchester and Delaware Railroad, about 15 miles from Cambridge, Dorchester county; thence to Vienna, crossing the Nanticoke river at that point, and through Somerset county to Salisbury, giving a continuous line of railroad from Elkton to Sommers' Cove on the Chesapeake Bay, through seven of the Eastern Shore counties, connecting all the county seats by railroad with the line. The entire line would be so far removed from the line of the Delaware Railroad, until its near approach to Salisbury, that it would give railroad facilities to portions of those counties that cannot be reached by the cross-lines connecting with the Delaware Road above.

The extension from Hillsboro' to Salisbury in distances would be as follows:

Hillsboro' to Denton	7 miles.
Denton to Federalsburg	13 "
Federalsburg to Vienna	15 "
Vienna to Salisbury	18 "
Total distance	54 "

Making the total distance from Elkton to Salisbury 111 miles, and from Sommers' Cove to Elkton 138 miles continuous line through all of the Eastern Shore counties except Worcester. Worcester county contemplate building two branches, one to Berlin, the other to Newtown on the Pocomoke river.

A connection with the Delaware Railroad at Seaford, Delaware, distance would be as follows:

Hillsboro' to Denton	7 miles.
Denton to State Line	11 "
State Line to Seaford	10 "
Total distance	28 "

Battle Between Rats, Scorpions, a Centipede and a Cobra.

A correspondent, writing from India, gives the following account of a battle between rats and a cobra, scorpions and a centipede, all shut up together:

I saw a very curious experiment with the cobra, which was, however, rather cruel. All houses in India have a current of air constantly passing through them.—It is necessary to protect the candles by glass bell-shaped shades. Under one of these, inverted, was placed the snake, in company with three large black rats, a couple of scorpions, and a centipede. The centipede is about six inches long, and if it crawls over a man leaves the unpleasant feeling of a very painful rheumatism for more than a year.

I am unable to state the feelings of this happy family at being thus suddenly thrown together; I should judge from their proceedings that their ideas were, to say the least, antagonistic. The snake lay quiet; the scorpions ran races around the edge of the shade; the centipede rolled himself up. The rats were the only creatures which seemed alive to the unhappy state of their confinement, and showed it by a game of leap frog over the venomous part of the family. By an unlucky trip on the head of the snake, one of the rats at last aroused him from his state of insensibility, and expiated his offence on the spot, as he fell dead from a bite. The other rats instantly darted on the snake, who succumbed to their united attack; they bit him from head to tail, and he died; having, however, with the little poison left after killing the first rat, severely wounded the second.

The scorpions now began their part of the entertainment, and, knowing the drowsiness attendant on snake-bites must be kept off at all hazards, humanely forced the rats into activity by running under them and stinging them as they hopped about. Their mode of treatment, however, proved a failure, as the second rat, who had been wounded, died. The two rats had, however, put the scorpions hors du combat, so that the last of this combative family were now the rat and the centipede; the last named had no chance with the former, and speedily fell a victim, the rat coming off victor. As a tribute to his pluck and prowess, he was allowed to return to his native haunts, where he may probably be still enjoying perfect health.

CONGRESSIONAL SPEECHES.—A Washington letter-writer states that the newspaper correspondents and editors sojourning at the capital now charge from $25 to $100 for preparing speeches of an hour's length for members of Congress. The charge varies according to the merits and reputation of the writer. Every Congressman thinks he ought to get off one or two speeches a session for the benefit of his constituents, just to let them know that he is still on duty. Every Saturday about half a dozen of members speak to empty benches for home consumption, or else get permission to have their speeches printed in the Congressional Globe without being spoken at all, and the chief part of this eloquence is bought and sold as above described.

AMOUNT OF COMMUTATION MONEY PAID.—During the late war the amount paid into the United States Treasury, from the several States, as commutation money, was $26,366,316, of which Pennsylvania paid $8,634,300; New York $5,485,799; Ohio $1,978,887; Massachusetts $1,610,400 Maryland $1,131,900; Wisconsin $1,533,600; Delaware $416,100, and the District of Columbia $96,900. The lowest payment was from Illinois only $15,900. The total amount was disposed of as follows: Distributed on account of enrollment, draft substitutes, &c., $16,976,211. Balance in United States Treasury $9,390,105.

Who First Settled Maryland?

The Church Review for April has an article of considerable length to prove that Maryland was neither Irish nor Roman Catholic in its first settlement. It says that the earliest settlers in Kent county were of the Church of England. The second company at St. Mary's, in 1624, were all English, and only a small part of them Roman Catholics. By 1642 there were three English churches, and only one Catholic chapel. In Ingle's rebellion in 1645, almost all the Catholics were driven out of St. Mary's. In 1648 a Protestant was made Lieutenant Governor, and in 1649 he introduced five hundred fresh colonists, of whom one hundred were Puritans, and the rest of the Church of England. By 1664 there were then counties formed, five on the Eastern and five on the Western Shore, and only two out of the ten had any Roman Catholic population, and these two were only Catholic in part.

The Review also says that it appears by the original charter to Lord Baltimore by King Charles I., that so far from his receiving any power which he could use against the Church, it was expressly provided "that all churches, chapels and oratories be bedicated and consecrated according to the ecclesiastical law of the kingdom of England."

Civil Worth of the Sabbath.

1. Toil needs it—to wipe off the grime and sweat of labor; to refresh by change of apparel, to restore and invigorate the body, exhausted by labor; to enliven the mind by change of current of thought, and by this, to fit laboring men for the renewing toils of the week.

2. Capital needs the Sabbath—to alleviate, by intermission, the care of accumulation; to ease the unbanding of the strained and exhausted mind; to give a sense of the value of nobler objects than silver and gold; to keep men's humanity and conscientiousness alive; to shield capital from harm by securing the power and triumph of law and order in society.

3. The State needs the Sabbath—to illumine the public conscience (that guardian of the public safety); to cause men to recognize the Eternal Lawgiver, as to honor the earthly "powers that be;" to secure the moral atmosphere in a community, which is the only support of law.

THE MAN WHO NEVER HAS ANYTHING OF HIS OWN.—Of course you have encountered this pest. He borrows your penknife, your razor, your writing utensils, your umbrella; and what you lend him goes, as a rule, to that bourne from which no traveler returns. Not that he is dishonest, he considers himself a sort of pensioner on the world at large for minor conveniences, and has no idea that their restoration is expected. As he is usually a good natured fellow, who would give you anything he had if he had anything to give, you don't like to snub him; and so he passes through life in his shiftless, careless way, unconscious of his demerits—a tolerated nuisance. Willingly would you raise a subscription, heading the list of donors yourself, to furnish him with all he borrows. But it would be useless. There is no tenacity in his slipshod nature.—Whatever you might give him would slip through his fingers. Besides, your professional borrower of small chattles prefers a loan to a gift. So far as your personal comfort is concerned, it is best to meet his application for loans with an emphatic "No." He is not pertinacious. A few rebuffs will suffice. He knows well enough that if you won't supply the article he wants, somebody else will. If you are "mean" there are others who are "generous."

A TREE WORTH $25,000.—A remarkable tree was brought to New York in the month of January, 1866, from a Western State. It was a black walnut, seventy feet long, measuring 4,500 feet board measure; but when cut into veneers, it would be thirty times that, making 135,000 feet, which at twenty cents would be worth $27,000. The cost of cutting it and placing it in store for sale, would be about $700. Black walnut, for the last six years, has been gradually taking the lead of mahogany, and is worth as much now as mahogany was formerly. The figure most sought for at present is a stripe, which seems to be formed by the saps, casting dark and light shades alternately through the tree, which, when worked, makes the most beautiful furniture that is manufactured.

TREATMENT OF THE AGED.—A little thoughtful attention, how happy it makes the old! They have outlived most of the friends of their early youth. How lonely their hours! Often their partners in life have long filled silent graves; often their children they have followed to the tomb. They stand solitary, bending on their staff, waiting till the same call shall reach them. How often they must think of absent, lamented faces; of the love which cherished them, and the tears of sympathy that fell with theirs, now all gone! Why should not the young cling around and comfort them, cheering their gloom with songs and happy smiles!
