The Parting.

There's something in the "parting hour"
Will chill the warmest heart—
Yet kindred, comrades, lovers, friends,
Are fated all to part;
But this I've seen—and many a pang
Had pressed it to my mind—
The one who goes is happier
Then those he leaves behind.

No matter what the journey be,
Adventurous, dangerous, far,
To the wild deep or bleak frontier,
To solitude or war—
Still something cheers the heart that dares,
In all of human kind,
And they who go are happier
Than those they leave behind.

The bride goes to the bridegroom's home
With doubtings and with fears,
But does not hope her rainbow spread
Across her cloudy fears?
Alas! the mother who remains,
What comfort can she find,
But this, the gone is happiest
Than one she leaves behind.

Have you a friend—a comrade dear—
An old and valued friend?
Be sure your time of sweet concorse
At length will have an end!
And when you part—as part you will—
Oh, take it not unkind,
If he who goes is happier
Then you he leaves behind.

God wills it so, and so it is;
The pilgrims on the way,
Though weak and worn, more cheerful are
Than all the rest who stay.
And when, at last, poor man subdued,
Lies down to death resigned,
May he not still be happier far
Then those he leaves behind.

WOMEN AT OXFORD.

What Has Been Done in the Past Ten Years for Their Benefit.

The association for the higher education of women in Oxford has just celebrated its tenth year of organization, and is well pleased with the progress made. There are now three halls for women students in Oxford—Lady Margaret, Somerville and St. Hugh's. The life at the different halls is the same in its broad outlines, although each one has its special characteristics. Each student has one room, which is used at night for a sleeping room and in the daytime for a sitting room and study. The daily routine of life at the college begins with the chapel bell at 8 o'clock; breakfast at quarter past 8. Students linger in the library to chat and read the daily papers for half an hour or so after breakfast, but by 9:30 o'clock most of them have gone off to read in their rooms, or to lectures in the town.

These are given either at the rooms of the association for women's education, or at the men's colleges. The examinations at Oxford are known as "pass," or "honors." The standard of the former is estimated to correspond with that of "moderation." The "honors" examinations either aim at a standard analogous to the men's honor examinations—as in the case of literature and modern language—or are identical with them, as in the case of the classical, mathematical, natural science and modern history schools. Most of the teaching for the "pass" examinations and
