MY QUEST.

BY OWEN G. WARREN.

My heart has wandered wildly
O'er life's unblest terrene,
Like the dove that sought the olive-branch
Ere earth's fair breast was seen.
Like the voice of doubt, seen searching
On creation's endless track,
That heart from its long pilgrimage
Brought not an answer back.

Now it pauses, worn and weary,
And ne'er would wander more;
Like a ship long beat by ocean waves,
It gladly seeks the shore.
Now safe in love's fair heaven,
From the billows' stormy strife,
May I anchor in unclouded calm,
The weary bark of life.

Caught in the Act.

We saw a funny spectacle the other day. A dozon omnibuses, with their live freight, were about starting on a Picnic, when a young woman ran hastily up and said to a gentleman of the party, who had just seated himself cosily by the side of a prety girl:

"Here, sir, I want to know what right you have to be going on pic-nics, and your wife and child at home?"

"Hush, Mary," Whispered the gentleman, hastily getting out of the omnibus, "hush, the people will hear you."

"Who cares if they do! Why didn't you think of the people or of me, or your child, instead of running off to pic-nics, with other women?"

"Well—there—now—don't—"

'But I will though! And as for you, Miss, if you ever dare to look at my husband again I'll—"

"I didn't look at him ma'am," trembingly replied the poor girl; "I thought he was a single man when he asked me to go on a pic-nic with him."

So you have begun you didoes, have you, my lark?" exclaimed the wife; "you have begun your didoes, have you? So, so; I'll give you a lesson which you will remember—(taking him by ears)—now walk home with me!"

The poor fellow writhed and implored, but his better half kept her walked him off home the laughter and jeers of the whole party ringing in his ears at every step.

We wouldn't have stood in that poor fellows boots that day, no not for the privilege of listening to the best sermon ever preached.—Phil. City Item.

AN IRISHMAN'S INDIFFERENCE.—Paddy was arraigned before a court for horse stealing after having pleaded not guilty, the judge asked him by whom he would be tried? "By twelve apostles," answered the prisoner. The judge told him that would not do, for if he was tried by them he could not have his trial till the day of judgement. "Faith." says Paddy, "and I have no objection to that neither, for I am in no hurry about it at all, at all."

☞"Dad, who is this Sam Francisco that's gettin' all the gold out there in Kaliforny? He must be the richest man in all them diggings."

"Why, Georgey, I rather think he's some relation to the Sam Jacinto who was killed in the Texican war by Gen. Sam Houston.

☞"Of what fruit is cider made!"

"Don't know, sir."

"What a stupid boy. What did you get when you robbed widow Cuffin's orchard?"

"I got a licking, sir."

☞A would-be prophet down south, said lately in one of his sermons, that he was sent to redeem the world and all things therein. Whereupon a native pulled out two five dollar bill on a broken bank, and asked him to fork over the specie for'em.

☞An Irish tailor, making a gentleman's coat and vest too small, was ordered to take them home and let them out. Some days after, the gentleman was told that his garments happened to fit a countryman of his, and he had let them out at a shilling a week.

☞A girl advertises through a Lowell paper a lost miniature, and makes some love sick swain happy by saying that "the purloiner by returniug the picture may obtain the original.
