MILLIONS Bear Testimony to their Wonderful Curative Effects.

They are not a vile Fancy Drink, Made of Poor Rum, Whiskey, Proof Spirits and Refuse Liquors, doctored, spiced and sweetened to please the taste, called "Tonics," "Appetizers," "Restorers," and that lead the drinker to drunkenness and ruin, but are a pure Medicine, made from the native roots and herbs of California, free from all Alcoholic Stimulants. They are the GREAT BLOOD PURIFIER and A LIFE GIVING PRINCIPLE, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator of the System, carrying off all poisonous matter and restoring the blood to healthy condition. No person can take these Bitters according to directions, and remain long unwell, provided their bones are not destroyed by mineral poison or other means, and the vital organs wasted beyond the point of repair.

They are a Gentle Purgative as well as a Tonic, possessing also, the peculiar merit of acting as a powerful agent in relieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Liver, and all the Visceral Organs.

FOR FEMALE COMPLAINTS, whether in young or old, married or single, at the dawn of womanhood or at the turn of life, these Tonic Bitters have no equal.

For Inflammatory and Chronic Rheumatism and Gout, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Bilious, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Diseases of the Blood, Liver, Kidneys and Bladder, these Bitters have been most success'l. Such Diseases are caused by Vitiated Blood, which is generally produced by derangement of the Digestive Organs.

DYSPEPSIA OR INDIGESTION, Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Coughs, Tightness of the Chest, Dizziness, Sour Eructations of the Stomach, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Bilious Attacks, Palpitation of the Heart, Inflammation of the Lungs, Pain in the regions of the Kidneys, and a hundred other painful symptoms are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.

They invigorate the Stomach and stimulate the torpid Liver and Bowels, which render them of unequaled efficacy in cleansing the blood of all impurities, and imparting pure life and vigor to the whole system.

FOR SKIN DISEASES, Eruptions or Eruptive Diseases, Blotches, Spots, Pimples, Pustules, Boils, Carbuncles, Ring-Worm, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Erysipelas, Itch, Scurfs, Discolorations of the Skin, Humors and Diseases of the Skin, of whatever name or nature are literally dug up and carried out of the system in a short time by the use of these Bitters. One bottle in such cases will convince the most incredulous of their curative effects.

Cleanse the Vitiated Blood whenever you find it impeding the course of the blood in Pimples, Eruptions or Sores; cleanse it when you find it obstructed and sluggish in the veins; cleanse it when it is foul, and your feelings will tell you when the time. Keep the blood pure, and the health of the system will follow.

Pin, Tape and other Worms, lurking in the system of many, are effectually destroyed and removed. For full directions, around each bottle, there is nothing so universal upon the race of the earth. Worms of every species exist in the human system. It is not upon the healthy digestive organs that worms exist, but upon the diseased humors and dead matter that lay in close living habitations of worms. For symptoms of worms, you should read the wrapper around each bottle.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers.

Select Poetry.

Passing Away—A Dream.

BY J. PIERPONT.

Was it the chime of a tiny bell;
That came so sweet to my dreaming ear—
Like the silvery tones of a fairy's shell
That the winds on the beach so mellow and clear,
When the winds and the waves lie together asleep,
And the Moon and the Fairy are watching the deep,
She dispensing her silvery light,
And he, his notes as silvery quite,
When the boatman lighten and ships his oar,
To catch the music that comes from the shore!—
Hark! the notes, on my ear that play,
Are set to words—as they pass they say,
"Passing away! passing away!"

But oh! it is not the fairy's shell,
Blown on the beach so mellow and clear;
Nor was it the tongue of a silver bell,
Striking the hour that filled my ear,
As I lay in my dream; yet it was a chime
I had told of the flow of the stream of time;
For a beautiful clock from the ceiling hung,
And a plump little girl for pendulum swung
(As you have sometimes seen in a little ring,
That hangs in his cage, a Canary bird swing.)
And held in her bosom a budding boquet,
And as she enjoyed it, she seemed to say,
"Passing away! passing away!"

O how bright were the wheels that told
Of the lapse of time as they moved round slow!
And the hands as they swept o'er the dial of gold,
Seemed to point to the girl below,
And lo! she had changed—in a few short hours
Her bequet had become a garland of flowers
That she held in her outstretched hands, and flung
This way and that, as she dancing, swung
In the fulness of grace, and of womanly pride,
That told me she was to be a bride;
Yet, then, when expecting her happiest day,
In the same sweet voice I heard her say,
"Passing away! passing away!"

LIFE IN GREENLAND.

The life of the Greenlander must be very dreary. About the first of October, the last ship leaves for Europe, and from that time until the next May, they have no communication with the civilized world; their year is divided into one long day and one long night. For many months the sun never sets; through the twenty-four hours, he is seen describing his brilliant circuit in the northern skies. In July, you watch his descent toward the horizon till he seems to dip his golden edge into the sea; then seeming to pause in his course for a moment, he mounts again the heavens. While we were there, a month later, the sun disappeared for less than four hours; I had watched his setting at ten P. M., covering sea and sky with gold and purple; but the heavens remained bright with a mellow light, by which I read during the brief night; and at one A. M, he reappeared in glory. This was a novelty, and I felt free from the slavery of hours, but that prolonged day brought with it a strange excitement. I knew not when to retire, when to rise. Bells called us to breakfast, lunch and dinner; bells called us to repose and aroused us from our fitful slumber.

This lengthened day is followed by an equally long night, which brings mental and moral depression. Men are moping, testy, imaginative, and colorless as potato-sprouts growing in a dark cellar. Even the dogs suffer from the prolonged darkness. Yet Greenland is not without some bounties of Providence. During the brief summer, the valleys are green with grasses and mosses. Some flowers have been found as far north as 80. Of course there are no forests, but, as a substitute, quantities of drift-wood from North American rivers, are gathered from the coast and used for timber. But if nature is scanty in her supply of vegetation, she is abundant in her supply of fish, fowl and beast. The waters abound in salmon, codfish, sturgeon, whales, the walrus and the seal. The very air is sometime darkened with ducks, geese and quail. But the reindeer, the walrus, the seal and the bear are of the greatest value to the Esquimaux, both for food and raiment. What the cocanut-palm, that tree of a hundred uses, is to the people of the Indics, and the olive tree is to the inhabitants of Palestine, the reindeer is to the people of Greenland. The flesh, the tongue, the marrow in the bones are delicacies; the blood is a nourishing beverage; the skin not only furnishes clothing impervious to the cold, but also tents and bedding; and out of the bones and horns are made all necessary household utensils. When an Esquimaux catches a reindeer, he has, on four legs, a larder well filled, a wardrobe well supplied, a house well furnished.

Next to the deer, the walrus is of most value to the Greenlanders. It was on a bright August day, when for the first time I saw a herd of these immense beasts. The largest was not less than twenty feet long, weighed two thousand pounds. The neck was short and thick, the head small, the tusks long, and the feet resembled broad, fin-like paddles. When on land their movements are slow and awkward, but in the water they move with great rapidity and power. When pursued by the hunter, they display almost human intelligence. When in winter the walrus comes out of the water, he breaks up the ice with an explosive puff which may be heard for miles. In the meantime the hunter is lying on the ice awaiting the favored moment. His instrument of attack is a large harpoon, to which is fastened a strong line of many fathoms length, made of walrus hide, the other end of the line is attached to a rod of bone pointed with iron to be driven into the ice. The moment comes. The walrus rises breast-high above the ice, and looks around as if half suspicious that some foe is nigh. In an instant the hunter is on his feet, and the harpoon is buried under the flipper of the breast. With desperation the walrus plunges beneath the water, and the hunter drives the iron-pointed rod into the solid ice, which holds the line securely. Finding himself fast, the wounded beast comes to the surface again, looks around, observes where the stick is that holds tight the line, again descends, comes up and breaks the ice just where the staff had been planted, but, knowing the cunning of the walrus, the hunter has hauled in his line and planted his stick in another place. And thus the struggle goes on between skill and force, till the beast is exhausted and the game secured. But with all his strength and cunning, the walrus is no match for the polar bear. In August the walrus makes his way to the shore, draws his huge body upon the rocks and basks in the sunshine. Ever watching for his prey, the bear mounts the overhanging cliffs, and lifting a huge rock with his forepaws, and calculating the distance and the curvature with the accuracy of a mathematician, he hurls the rock on the animal's head, crushing in the ponderous skull; then, like an arrow, the bear rushes down the cliff, and if the walrus still lives, he hammers away with the same rock till the beast is dead.

Bear-hunting is one of the most exciting scenes of the polar regions. A large she-bear, with a four-months-old cub, was attacked first by the dogs, which she caught up and flung, first one and then another, to a great distance. During the struggle, the cub was wounded with a pistol-ball. At once the mother placed the cub between her hind legs, and shoving it along, sought flight; but, wounded herself, she faced about, rose upon her hind quarters, placed the cub between her hind legs and bade defiance to her pursuers. Wounded again, she fell dead, the cub mounted the dead body of its mother, and contined the fight till captured.

Since the days of Job, there has been no such patience as is now displayed by the Esquimaux, when in winter he is hunting the seal. Having ascertained where the seal is gnawing beneath the ice for a breathing hole, the hunter perforates the spot with a slender bone rod, with a point at one end and a knob at the other, which is moved by the seal in coming to the surface. This may occupy twenty-four hours. The hunter then builds a wall of snow, four feet high, to shelter him from the wind. Seating himself behind it, he places by his side spear and lines. He must preserve the utmost silence, that he may hear the seal at work and not cause fright to the animal. He even binds his knees together with a thong to prevent the rustling of his clothes. And there he sits for twenty-four hours waiting the coming of the seal to the surface, when he cautiously rises with spear in hand and the long-sought seal is his.—Rev. Dr. Newman, in Methodist.

A WONDERFUL MAN.

GEN. JOHN B. MAGRUDER.

This old warrior sleeps the sleep of a soldier in a rude Texas grave, over which there is no monument. The grass was growing about it in the early summer, and there were some flowers there, withered and faded, scattered by a woman's hand. A votary at the shrine of nature and finished diplomat at the court of Venus, it was fitting that there should be largesse of green-growing grasses and love-flowers. If roses are the tear-drops of angels, as the beautiful Arab belief puts forth in poetry, then is this lowly mound a hallowed spot, and needs not the sculptured stone, the fretted column, the ivy and the obelisk.

Magruder was a wonderful man. He stood six feet four in his height, and had a form men envied and women adored. His nerves were all iron. Foreign travel and comprehensive culture had given to his wit a zest that was always crisp and sparkling. He never lacerated. To the sting of a repartee he added the honey to the clover. He could fight all day and dance all night. In the morning a glass of brandy and a strong cigar renewed his strength and caused the cup of his youth to run over with the precious wine of health and high spirits. He loved magnificent riders and magnificent women. Gifted and graceful in conversation, he was a poet in the boudoir and a logician in the barracks. He had studied French in Paris, Italian in Rome, and Spanish in the Halls of the Montezumas. The saber exerc
