Gray Hair

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for over thirty years. It has kept my scalp free from dandruff and has prevented my hair from turning gray."—Mrs. F. A. Soule, Billings, Mont.

There is this peculiar thing about Ayer's Hair Vigor—it is a hair food, not a dye. Your hair does not suddenly turn black, look dead and lifeless. But gradually the old color comes back,—all the rich, dark color it used to have. The hair stops falling, too.
$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.

If your druggist cannot supply you, send us one dollar and we will express you a bottle. Be sure and give the name of your nearest express office. Address, J. C. AYER CO., Lowell, Mass.

New Two-cent Stamps.

The design for the new two-cent postage stamp has been approved by the Postmaster General, and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing is already at work upon it.

The portrait of Washington which appears on the two-cent stamp of the present issue will be retained, except that the lines will be coarser, owing to the use of red ink, that color having been determined upon by the Universal Postal Union for all stamps of the denomination of ten centimes or its equivalent. Almost any other color would be preferred by the engravers, as red ink blurs fine lines in rapid printing.

The inscriptions on the stamps will also be larger and rearranged. An oval frame will no longer surround the head of Washington, but an arched one will be substituted, similar to that in the Franklin portrait in the one-cent stamp.

That Throbbing Headache

Would quickly leave you, if you used Dr. King's New Life Pills. Thousands of sufferers have proved their matchless merits for sick and nervous headaches. They make pure blood and build up your health. 25 cents, money back if not cured. Sold by R. J. Colston, druggist.

Fashionable Eastern Shore Wedding.

Mr. Thomas Ireland Elliott, of the Baltimore Bar, and Miss Corinne Bruce Vickers, of Chestertown, were married yesterday in the Chestertown Methodist Episcopal Church by Rev. Mr. Roberts, the pastor. The couple will sail from Boston to Naples on June 6, and their wedding trip will include a tour to Europe. After their return to this country they will reside at 2026 Mount Royal Terrace, Baltimore. Miss Vickers is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Vickers, of Chestertown, and a granddaughter of the late United States Senator Vickers, who represented Maryland in the Senate from 1868 to 1873.

Ladies and Children Invited.

All ladies and children who cannot stand the shocking strain of laxative syrups, cathartics, etc., are invited to try the famous Little Early Risers. They are different from all other pills. They do not purge the system. Even a double dose will not gripe, weaken or sicken; many people call them the Easy Pill. W. H Howell, Houston, Tex., says nothing better can be used for constipation, sick headache, etc. Bob Moore, Lafayette, Ind., says all others gripe and sicken, while DeWitt's Little Early Risers do their work well and easy. Sold by Hugh Duffey, Hillsboro, Md.

Fine Pleasure Boats.

There is now quite a little fleet of gasoline launches on St. Jones river, Dover, and nearly every day these pretty little boats may be seen plying up and down this picturesque stream with their pleasure seekers aboard. Some of these launches are very pretty, very comfortable and quite fast and have almost taken the place of row boats. The Priscilla, which is owned by H. A. Richardson, is by far the handsomest, fastest and most comfortable one in the fleet.

Driven to Desperation.

Living at an out of the way place, remote from civilization, a family is often driven to desperation in case of accident, resulting in burns, cuts, wounds, ulcers, etc. Lay in a supply of Bucklen's Arnica Salve. It's the best on earth. 25c at R. J. Colston's drug store.

Reginald Vanderbilt has employed a small army of decorators to prepare the suite of rooms he and his bride will occupy on the steamship New England, on their approaching trip to Europe.

Catching . . . . . a Burglar.

When Paynter's glance fell upon a certain individual gazing at the passengers alighting from the accommodation train, he arrived at a decision. He would get off at Honeyville.

It was unexpected, this finding of Grippen on the lookout. It was three years now since that wary Chief of Police had met Paynter, but the chance of recognition was too great, and, while the officer would have been delighted to greet the traveler, that worthy felt that the attentions thrust upon him would be distasteful.

A natural modesty had led him to be the last to leave the smoking car, and the locomotive was already snorting for a start, when he paused with his foot on the lower step, awaiting the right moment to recede quietly. It came.

The train gathered headway, and, as he grasped the rail to steady himself before turning, the quick eye on the platform rested full upon his face, and Paynter knew in a second he had been recognized.

"Spotted," growled the burglar, as he slipped into the car. "He'll wire ahead. Guess I'll turn countryman. Let's see; next stop is Phippsdale, six miles. Good, I'll go over the mountain and join Jack at Brooks Junction. A letter will bring him. Then we'll slide back to New York tomorrow night and give this job up."

"Thought you got off at Honeyville," said the conductor, pocketing the few cents fare.

"No; had a ticket to there, that's all. 'Twould hardly have paid to get off to buy another ticket for a six-mile trip."

The person who emerged from the toilet-room of the car when the train halted at Phippsdale bore no resemblance to Paynter, and the black bag wore a canvas cover.

He was a respectable old farmer, with ancient, well brushed garments, gray hair and scraggy whiskers, and steel-bowed spectacles under a cheap new cap. Besides, the man's shoulders hunched, and he limped slightly, while Paynter was quick-stepping and erect.

For one of his apparent age, he disappeared with with uncommon alacrity, and among the summer visitors who thronged the platform of the little station he was unnoticed. Then, too, there seemed an unusual excitement. The loungers were staring at the cars. After the rear of the car had whirled around the curve and the arrivals were driving away, an old man went into the waiting-room — a combination of store, postoffice and loafing-room.

A telegraphic instrument clicked in one corner. Flies buzzed under the drawn window shade. Posters and advertisements decorated the walls.

In the centre of the room a half dozen men conversed in tones of excitement. One fat perspiring and flushed, waved a yellow paper with gestures of concern.

"Clear through the smoker I went, boys, and thar warn't no sech a chap. I looked 'em over." He read from the telegram: "Tall, slim, smooth face, scar on chin, dark eyes and hair, black valise, brown slouch hat, black coat, light trousers. If not found, give description to conductor, and wire next station for officer."

"That's what Grippen says, and I've missed him. Ain't that hard luck? Wouldn't I have twitched the critter out a-flyin'? Worst of it is Gooch, the conductor, see a feller like that, and said he was to get off here."

"No sech man did," asseverated a lank youth, who closed his mouth only when speaking. "Now, Sheriff, thar wasn't. You told me to watch didn't you? I did, didn't I? Wall, I guess."

"Then he's on thar yit, and Gooch—I declare for it, I 'most forgot to send a message. Here, Crissy," to a solemn young woman behind the letter case, "you telegraph this on, jest as it is, to Hinchman, station agent at Hollis Crossing, and then send word to Chief Grippen, that I jest missed his man.

"That lets me out, boys," he added, "and I've done my duty. I'm going up to the house now. Seems to me a glass of cider wouldn't go bad after this. Any of you want to come?"

They all promptly followed him.

"You look after things, Crissy," called the Sheriff, going out.

The flies buzzed and darted in the middle of the room, as all sounds ceased except the clicks of the telegraph key.

Presently the old man limped to the counter.

"Gimme a plug of terbacker," he drawled, patting the shelf with a nickle. "How far is it to Brook Junction by way of walkin' over the mount'in?"

"I should say five miles, all up and down hill."

"How's the road go?"

"Straight to the mountain, then first turn to the left by the graveyard. Bye-and-bye you strike a road that turns northeast. Keep along on that and you'll get there by follerin' your nose." Her prim mouth wrinkled into a smile. "It's a hard, hot walk for an old man."

"Say?" she said, sharply.

Paynter wheeled and stood stock-still. He was looking straight into the barrel of a big revolver, and the face behind it was white and determined.

"Hands up quick!"

The man obeyed. He was a poor man. He had no money. What was she scaring him for.

"If that wig and them whiskers was off, you'd look better she returned. "Take 'em off or I'll fire. Careful, now. Straighten up. That's it Seems to me the cover of that bag ain't on right. Shows black on one side Remove them specks. There. Hair and eyes all right. I thought so. Tall, slim and scar on chin. Well, Mr. Paynter, I've heard of you. Ain't you the professional that brags you never robbed nor laid hand on a woman?"

"Yes, growled the prisoner, but I'll make up for it."

"I wouldn't. Don't lose a good reputation. Put on your specs and your wig and git. My hands are gettin' tired holdin' this thing."

"W—h—a—t!" gasped the man. "You're goin' to let me go?" He adjusted his disguise with lighting fingers.

"For your reputation, yes. Hurry along."

"Bless you," he croaked, "I won't forget this."

The girl had put the revolver down with careless audacity.

"There it is," she said.

"I wouldn't harm a hair of your head," cried the man, and started out to hurry across the tracks.

"Just as well not to have let him know that the gun wasn't loaded." mused Crissy, pushing the gun to one side. "With me all alone and $14 in the drawer, to say nothin' of postage stamps, he might have forgotten his reputation."

Mr. Warfield a Candidate for Governor.

Mr. Edwin Warfield, president of the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Baltimore, has announced that he is ambitious to be Governor of Maryland, and that he will work actively for the Democratic nomination. In speaking of his ambition Mr. Warfield said:

"I have not changed my position in a single respect since the announcement of my candidacy nearly a year and a half ago. I have not and do not intend to consult anyone as to my acceptability, but will take my chances at the polls, and, submitting my candidacy to the people, abide by their decision. I do not believe there is any reason why every Democrat in the State should not support me, and I want the support of every one. I have not made and do not intend to make any deals or bargains with anyone looking to either my nomination or election, and am not slated for the nomination by any man or set of men. If the majority of the Democratic voters at the primaries chose someone other than myself as their standard bearer, then I will cheerfully submit to the will of the majority, as I did four years ago. I have made no secret of my ambition to be Governor of my native State and have before explained that I do not want the position as a stepping stone for anything else, but because of the honor and dignity that is attached to it."

Harrington's $8,000 Church.

Three citizens of Harrington have pledged the congregation of the M. P. Church, a subscription of $1,000 each for a new church edifice, providing that $5,000 more is raised and that the building shall be of improved brick, stone and iron and an ornament to the town. The church workers have begun to stir themselves and will undertake to make the $3,000 good by Thanksgiving Day.

The students and faculty of Goldey College have arranged to have a number of trips this summer.

Large Crop of Berries.

Superintendent Holiday, of the Delaware Railroad, says the shipments of strawberries this year are 1,000,00 quarts in excess of the shipments last year. On May 23, 800,000 quarts were shipped over the Delaware road. Mr. Holiday says Delaware's fruit prospects are brighter this year than for several years past. From Selbyville 26 carloads of strawberries were shipped in one day. This little town leads in quantity this year. Although berries were seriously injured by the frost and drought, it is the largest crop in the history of the railroad, owing entirely to the large acreage. Berries paid so well last year that the acreage was fully doubled. The quality has been poor and the prices have not been high.

The Bordeau Mixture.

One of the most generally used mixtures for preventing blight in all kinds of plants and trees, and preventing rot in grapes is made as follows: For tomato plants take good lime and sulphate of copper in the following proportions: To make the fifty-gallon formula, four pounds of lime carefully slaked, which can be done better with hot water when the lime is used in quantities; after this has been thoroughly slaked and cooled, mix it with twenty-five gallons of water; this can best be done by tying it in a cotton bag, piece of old sacking, or anything porous, and suspending it in a barrel of water. In about twenty-four hours the sulphate will be thoroughly dissolved and the lime well impregnated with the water. Stir both these mixtures up and then pour together, not all at once, but taking a bucket, or dipper full at a time, and pour both together into a third receptacle. The mixture is then ready for use. Stir before applying; make three applications to the plants in the bed, the first one just as they are coming up. This should be done in a fine spray with any of the well known forms of sprayers. Fifty gallons will be sufficient for a large number of seed. One fourth the quantity should be enough for one or two pounds of seed. It is claimed that a heavy application will not injure the plants but rather do them good.
