$,000 Fire at Williston

Monday evening about 9 o'clock Mr. Oscar Plummer of this place, was driving on the state road near Williston when he noticed flames coming from the side of the bungalow of H. S. Cooper, near Williston.

Mr. Plummer, "gave her a little more gas" and hurried to the Willoughby's store at the Williston mill pon wdhere the alarm was phoned to Fire Chief Eugene Anderson and in a few minutes about a dozen of the members of the Denton Volunteer Fire Company were on their way to the scene of the conflagration, where they were handicapped by the lack of water the pump being located in the cellar, where it is thought the fire originated from an overheated furnace.

Rooms on the south side of the house were entered and a few articles of furniture were rescued but the blaze became so hot that any further efforts to save anything were futile.

About 7 that evening the family gone to Concord camp where a mas program and entertainment be given and knew nothing of e until their return about 10, the fire was over.

is stated that he house is valued the neighborhoo dof $5,000 with nly about $1200 insurance.

Mr. Webster Kinder Improved

Friends of Mr. Webster Kinder, were much alarmed on Thursday of last week when he seemed in danger of bleeding to death. The hemmorhage started from a wart on the side of the face which Mr. Kinder had recently had treated, and failing to realize the seriousness of the bleeding, Mr. Kinder exerted himself considerably during the day, which doubtless induced the excessive bleeding. Local physicians rendered first aid, Dr. Bruce Goudsborough of Cambridge answered a hurried summons operated, then Mr. Kinder was removed to Cambridge hospital where he remained a few days. He is now at home and able to be about.

THE OLD TIME COUNTRY DANCE

I'm sitting tonight by the fireside bright, where the oaken embers glow; and smoke my pipe by their cheerful light; and drem of long ago, and my thoughts have sped to an old farmstead, where the merry youngsters prance; and I hear the peal of the jig and real, of the old time country dance. Again I beat with nimble feet, the time of Old Zip Coon; by the hand I clasp a buxom lass, and glide around the room, and the fiddler calls in a rasping drawl, as harsh as a cross-cut saw: "To join hands, and Alemande, to the right; and do-se-do. With youthful zest we laugh and jest, as we hop to the fiddles' squeal; and our feet take wings to the Highland fling, and the old "Virginny" reel. And the midnight hour's not lost it's power, there's the steaming coffee pot; and in its wake comes the chocolate cake, and beans from the oven hot. And now once more as in days of yore (tho' 'tis but a dream o fcourse); I've been back there with the lassies fair, at the Susquehanna's source, tho' 'tis a dream to me it seems that dreams might come to pass; that we might meet and toss our feet, again as in b uta dream of course); I've been revelry, an evening's pleasure find; and tune our heels to the Irish reel, and the "Girl I Left Behind," 'ere my harp strings twang with the golden band, and I roost upon a cloud; I'd kick up dust, in the Money Musk, once more with that old crowd.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE

The Lord's Day Alliance meeting scheduled for last Sunday afternoon at the Methodist Episcopal church was not largely attended, but the program was good and the meeting was much enjoyed by those present.

Dr. W. W. Davis, of the Maryland Lord's Day Alliance conducted the meeting and his address sounded a warning to the people of Maryland that unless they are on guard the forces that would destroy our American Sabbath will flood the coming legislature with bills to remove all restraints from the path of the element that desires to commercialize the Lord's day. He told of the plan of Howard Bryant, of Baltimore, to secure legislation opening the Sabbath for amusements, moving pictures, etc., under a referendum bill and other schemes to open the day for commercial purposes.

Mr. T. P. Fisher spoke briefly on the importance of transmitting to the coming generation all the benefits and pleasures of a genuine Christian Sabbath, such as was transmitted to us by our forebears, and has been the glory of America.

Mr. W. I. Norris spoke of the importance of the Lord's Day movement and his unqualified approval of its aims and purposes.

A prize, a five dollar gold coin, had been pledged for the best essay by a school child of Caroline county on the subject, "The Lord's Day and Why We Should Observe It". The winning essay was written by Ellis Williams, of Denton high school, over the nom de plume, "Uncle Sam". Mr. H. R. Lewis made the presentation speech for the reward of this prize. The writer was not present, as he had recently removed to California.

A chorus of girls from the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school sang one of the songs prepared by the Alliance.

Dr. Davis urged a program of education which would include a special fifteen minute service and one song touching on the subject of Sabbath observance in all the Sunday schools, the last Sunday in each quarter, with a more comprehensive program once a year. The literature for these services would be provided by the Alliance.

GOLDSBORO

Health, Diet Talks

By KARINE HOLMES

Continuing the diet of last week, we will think of diabetes diet where the disease is in chronic forms.

For instance, soups or broth of beef, chicken, mutton, veal, oysters, etc., clear. These soups should be and above all must not be thickened with farinaceous substances. Now this means in thickening, do not use flour, etc. Use only gluten, even gluten porridge may be used. Of this gluten you may also make bread, wafers, griddle cakes, biscuits, gems, etc

Fish—All kinds, even to dried and salted fish.

Eggs—In all of the most acceptable ways of cooking.

Meats—Fat beef, mutton, ham or bacon, poultry, sweetbreads, sausage, kidneys, pigs feet, tongue, tripe, game cooked without flour thickenings of any kind.

Vegetables—All vegetables which grow above ground, no potatoes, turnips, beets or carrots, etc.

Desserts—Custards, jellies, creams (without any sugar), walnuts, almonds, filberts, brazil nuts, cocoanuts pecans.

Drinks—Tea, coffee (without any sugar), pure water, peptonized milk, buttermilk.

AVOID Liver, sugars, sweets or starches, of any kind, all wheat and corn breads, pies, and all pastry; honey, sparkling wines, cordials, cider, porter, lager, chestnuts, peanuts.

A most intelligent management of the case is to keep a chart of your diet.

Any one desiring a regular diet for every day in the week, or say for a month, if you will so signifiy by writing to me addressed care The American Union or Upper Dorchester News, I'll be glad to furnish same direct or through these columns as may be desired. These diets are authentic as used by a number of our very most noted hospitals.

General Rules for Feeding the Sick

The proper support and nourishment of the patient is the one which concerns the daily routine of diet.

First of all, it is advisable that the physician have a good, capable nurse, one who not only knows how to carry out doctor's orders and who can go into the kitchen and cook everything the patient has served. A very capable nurse has a better chance than the physician to do the right things because she should be able to make substitutes in case first choice was not available.

Regularity of food is exceedingly important. Discretion in not overfeeding or underfeeding is also necessary. If the nurse knows her business, she will not insist upon the patient eating foods which are prepared in some obnoxious manner. In good nursing, you will endeavor to please the patient at all times. Make your patient like you, see that the patient has confidence in your judgment. As soon as the patient takes a dislike to the nurse for any cause whatsoever, she can do very little more successful nursing and had better give up the case, if she has the welfare of her profession at heart.

Gluten Nut Cake
