SENATOR BROWNLOW, of Tennessee, well known as a most aggressive republican, has published another argument in the shape of an open letter in earnest opposition to the civil rights bill. The tone of the letter is exceedingly temperate, and its arguments are coaclusive as to the danger incident to a compulsory fusion of the white and colored schools in the South, which would result from the passage of the bill. The Senator says that the recontested with exceeding bitterness on this very question, and that the republiof the bill, was defeated by fifty or sixty thousand majority.
