THE JOURNAL.

WM. HENRY LEGG, Editor.

DENTON, SATURDAY MORNING, May 10, 1873.

WE dislike to disturb the harmony and beauty of the "bright pictures" that the editor of the Union has portrayed to his mind in viewing the restraining and disfranchising principles of his school district enrolling act under the Local Option scheme. But, notwithstanding the "apparent beauty" of these "bright pictures" to his diseased fancy and imagination, duty compels us again to intrude ourself upon him, even at the risk of being considered by him "hypochondraical" and unable to see any of these "bright pictures" which stand out to him in such apparent beauty. We hope that our "pevishness, fretfulness" in this matter will not make any one "about us" or anywhere around us discontented and unhappy. We fear the well aimed blows of the JOURNAL have already nearly aroused the editor of the Union from his dreamy slumber, and drawn a veil over the "bright pictures" which stood out in such "apparent beauty" all around him in contemplating the beneficial effects to him and his party of his "spoiled child"—his enrolling act. Our objections to the resolutions of the Temperance Convention looking to the enrolling and pledging of the voters of this county, were made in the interest of truth and justice, and in the interest of free and unrestrained ballots in the hands of freemen. These rights by the action of the Democrats and Conservatives are disenthralled, not only in old Caroline, but throughout the State, subject no longer to any kind of "Local Option," the option of his highness, the editor of the Union, not excepted. No sir, thank God and the Democratic and Conservative party, (Gov. Swann included) the day when that dear and great privilege to American freemen depended upon your "option" or the like of you, has passed, and we hope forever, and not to be revived by enrolling acts and pledges, concocted by the enemies of a free and unrestrained ballot in any programme headed "Local Option" or otherwise.

It was very unpleasant to us to have to refer to the gentleman's "acts of patriotism" in playing the tyrant at his own "option" during our late "unpleasantness," but we thought as he was then a "citizen of the county, born and reared upon its soil" competent to judge of the wants and wishes of the people, and the glorious five that composed the Local Option Convention at the M. E. Church, and that passed the enrolling act for the several school districts he declared were all his equals in point of citizenship that, it would be well enough to let the people know how virtue there was in [illegible] zen of the county, born and [illegible] its soil" &c. This is a me[illegible] carrying with it especial righ[illegible] privileges, and is a demerit in us, and that was all you meant to say, no doubt, when you alluded to it in your issue of the 24th ult. Excuse the unpleasant allusion of ours to your acts of patriotism during our late "unpleasantness" that you were compelled to perform, not for the pay, oh no! but at the risk of your life. You well know if you hadn't performed the duties of the high and responsible positions that you then held, and in the most satisfactory manner, exercising to the fullest extent your "Local Option" you would have been shot down—you know that you have said so, haven't you? But we are p[illegible]vish and fretful, and are again hiding from your entranced view the "beautiful pictures" which stands out in such apparent beauty of your "spoiled child," the "enrolling act." Our allusions to the Editor's past political record caused him at once to dismount his hobbie "Local Option" and turn it out to grass, whilst he dipped his dart in the very quintessence of Parson Brownlow's billingsgate, and aimed it at us. He attacked us personally, falsely, maliciously and came to our very doors and howled. It was the howl of a wolf with hellish mallice that had forgotten his sheep skins, and was trying to destroy us and ours. We say to you, beware! beware! in this fold enter not, we have pet lambs, if you enter to destroy them you do it at your peril. With the fairness, candor and truthfulness of your editorial remarks we have a right to deal when aimed at us. About your disposition, whether "hypochondriacal" or hypocritical to those around you, making them happy or otherwise, we have nothing to do or say. We can inform you that we do not desire to misrepresent or injure any one or their families in any way, and have never attempted it or been accused of it. Though we nor ours are not citizens of this county, as you have plainly intimated in your columns, you have no right, Paul Pry though you may be, to cross our threshold in hunt of food to satisfy your wolfish, hellish appetite. Were you either a christian or a gentleman you could enter, being neither, enter not, if so, you will meet with opposition that will find the wolf though he may be covered all up and over with sheep skins.

We cannot part with the editor of the Union without gratifying his request and accepting his challenge to the proof "that he has been all things by turn and nothing long." In regard to our assertion concerning his past political record, and also to the school district enrolling act passed by the select five or six, all citizens of the county, &c., we have not one word to regret or retract. Our editorial in regard to the action of this very select Convention was copied in full by one of the best and leading papers of this shore. We have also received words and evidences of encouragement all around, both in and out of the county, by the best and most intelligent men, not only of our party, but several from even your own of that class. We say we have nothing to retract, but on the contrary, as each succeeding day comes and passes away we are being supplied from every point of the compass in this county, and from the extreme portion thereof with increased abundance of evidence that we were right in regard to this matter and in our assertions or intimations in reference to your former acts of patriotism.

Now in regard to you sir, and the proof. Why did you upon the bare allusion to your past political record become so frantic as to dismount "Local Option" enrolling act and all, and turn them out to grass, whilst you gnashed your teeth, and howled at us and ours. Was it because you did not want the attention of fair and impartial lovers of free and constitutional government directed towards your former black career, during your corrupt administration as judge of elections, and register of voters? Why should this make you loose your equiliberum, "Local Option" and all? Don't attempt to prop up your corrupt political carcass by the political misgivings or doings of Bradford and Swann, who became so disgusted with your corruptions and outrages upon the rights and liberties of the citizen, that they have left you company and mended their ways. But you are the same indentical old hardened sinner, "still like Ephraim joined to his idols."

The proof is indellibly written upon the minds of the disfranchised citizens of this county, who have survived the outrages you inflicted upon their rights and liberties, many of them "born and reared upon this soil," &c., and in every way under the laws of the land, qualified to vote except in your "Option:" We have the proof in the recollection of gentlemen who approached the polls under the ægis of American liberty, and were ordered by you to depart with their ballots in their hands, and not in the box. That suited your "Option." Remember your treatment to that old gray headed citizen, that had voted for years and years, and who by his courage and valor had defended our flag in the war of 1812, from a foreign foe.—Col. Abraham Griffith, we allude to.—Did it suit your "Option" to let him vote? How did you treat Lieutenant Comegys, with his epaulets on, and in active service? We have the proof in the black mark drawn across the regis[illegible]ion books by you, against the names [illegible] in every way qualified to vote, [illegible] vote for your party.

[illegible]u were once Democratic, then anti-Democratic; you were once anti-Temperance, then Temperance; you were once pro-Slavery, then anti-Slavery; you were once anti-negro-Suffrage, then pro-negro-Suffrage; then anti-female-Suffrage, now pro-female-Suffrage; "all things by turn and nothing long," for the proff of this, we refer you to your old acquaintances and the columns of your paper. We much preferred not to have gone into this catalogue, but being challenged by the editor to the contest, we could not shrink from the responsibility. We propose to rest the matter here for the present if it suits you, if not we say,

"Lay on McDuff, and d—d be he
Who first cries hold, enough."

OAKES AMES was attacked by paralysis at 5 o'clock on Tuesday evening last. The symptoms are said to be dangerous in the extreme. He has been unable to attend to business for some time. He is not expected to live for the reason that his system has been weakened by kidney troubles, of five years' existence, that have threatened to terminate in Bright's disease. Mr. Ames is 69 years of age.

DEATH OF HON. JAMES BROOKS.—The Hon. James Brooks, of New York, founder of the Evening Express of that city, and the representative of the eighth (N. Y.) district in Congress, died in Washington on Wednesday of last week, after a protracted illness. With the exception of the comments upon his connection with the Credit Mobilier affair, his reputation throughout his life was never brought in question.

THE AMERICAN exhibitors at the Vienna Exposition held a meeting on Tuesday to inquire into the causes that have placed the United States in such an unfavorable light in the great fair, and propose taking in their own hands the execution of measures to secure for the nation a representation of its resources somewhat less ridiculous than what has thus far been obtained.

THE cable has announced the death of James L. Orr, American minister at the Court of Russia. He was several times a member of Congress, and in 1857 was elected speaker of the House. He had always up to '65, been a warm and consistent democrat. He at this time gave Andrew Johnson policy of Reconstruction, his support, and was by Mr. Johnson, made Provisional Governor of South Carolina. He eventually joined the Radical Republican party, and was lately appointed by President Grant to the position he had at the time of his death—Minister to Russia.

CORRUPTION AGAIN.

A nice reputation America is making abroad. The investigation of the French arms job convinced everybody but Radical congressmen of the venality, dishonesty and deceit that is corroding and cankering our whole governmental system. It published to the world an amount of rascality sufficient to brand our institutions with discredit and our people with the disreputable characteristic of unscrupulous cupidity. All Europe looked upon us with suspicion and contempt, and so little faith had they in American virtue and self respect that when the arbitrators met at Geneva to decide upon the [illegible] submitted under the Treaty of Washington, the rumor found origin and met with ready credence that American agents were prepared to offer bribes to a majority of the Board for a decision in favor of the points our government claimed. The fact that such a report should find circulation and credit, demonstrated the contemptible opinion held by foreigners of our national faith and individual and official morals.

Germany and France are, to a great extent, the centres of European opinion, and both nations took a lively interest in the investigations going on in this country, for both had been deceived, and injured and betrayed by the American authorities. To Germany the then and present administration gave verbal assurances of sympathy, while to France we furnished from government arsenals, arms and amunition with which to slaughter the invading armies of Prussia. A knowledge of American treachery and bad faith made the French suspicious of us to such an extent that Mr. Washburne was keenly criticized as a spy in the interest of the Germans. Such was the [illegible] famous figure we cut in the eyes of Europe, while Schenck advertised bogus stock as a speculation in London; Sickles represented the virtue, refinement and intelligence of our country in Spain, and a Butler played the rake, debauchee, drunkard and assassin at the court of a conspicuous neighbor, Egypt.

Such have been the impressions successively made upon foreign critics by American representatives within the past four years. It needed but one more glaring act of shame to sink our country below the reach of comparison in European esteem. And the deplorable, unfortunate, crushing blow has been promptly and indellibly inflicted. Commissioners sent to represent American interests at the Vienna Exposition, have been accused and, in popular esteem, convicted of receiving bribes and selling favors for money. So tangible is the proof of their guilt that they have been suspended from their trusts, and [illegible] between the original and the subsequent appointees. All is confusion now in the American department of this great international fair, upon which the attention of the civilized world is rivetted. An imposing contribution of the products and progress of our country in this sample of American officials. A shameful spectacle our country is making among its jealous and scornful rivals, confirming the mean opinion, the foundations of which have been already laid in the intelligence and decency of Europe.—Sunday Telegram.

Fearful Accident.

An iron bridge, at Dixon, Ill., fell with a terrible crash on Sunday last while crowded with people to witness a baptism. Large crowds of people on the banks rushed wildly to and fro, and many of them were so distracted with terror as to be unable to render any assistance. Others, more self-possessed, speedily brought ropes, planks and boats, and went nobly to work to rescue the living and recover the dead. Some of those who were on the bridge when it fell were so near the ends that they were able to reach land without assistance. Some thirty-two dead bodies were found before dark, and many others since then, making in all about a hundred. There were a number of remarkable escapes of children, of whom there were, probably, not less than fifty on the bridge. One little fellow, aged thirteen years, was caught by both feet in the iron rigging of one of the spans, and had a leg broken, but he managed by sheer strength, to pull one of his boots off, and then cooly took out his knife and ripped the other boot from the crippled leg and swam ashore. Two little girls, sisters, standing side by side, went down together.

The elder caught the other by the dress with one hand, and with the other seized a part of the wreck, and maintained their heads above the icy water until rescued.

WHO IS GOING TO THE CITY? This item may be of some pecuniary interest to our readers about visiting Philadelphia in search of Spring Clothing. If they want to inspect a splendid stock of [illegible] every description, and procure goods upon which they can positively rely, at very moderate prices, let them call at the great Clothing Bazaar of BENNETT & CO., Tower Hall, No 518 Market St., half-way between Fifth and Sixth, Philadelphia.

The American Labor Reform League commenced its session in New York on Sunday, and in discussing a paper on labor reform, held that, beyond the necessaries of life accumulation of property is wrong. A resolution was also read, declaring that no adequate solution of the labor problem is possible [illegible] a redistribution of existing wealth.

The remains of Bishop McIlvaine were landed from the steamer City of Baltimore Monday morning last, and conveyed to St. Paul's Church. The funeral services was held on Tuesday afternoon, after which the body was taken charge of by the committee from Cincinnati, and conveyed to that city for interment.

Miss Clementine Pippin, a young lady residing with Mr. Wm. W. McKnitt, at Maydel, was severely burned on Friday night, 25th ult., from her clothes taking fire. She was waiting on her sister, Mrs. McKnitt, who was sick and had lain down opposite the hearth and fell asleep, when the fire was communicated to her clothing, and before it could be extinguished one side of her body was burned so severely that doubts are entertained as to her recovery.—Delawarean.

Cloud county, Kansas, was visited recently by another terrible storm, [illegible] and loss of life. The roof of the house of a farmer named Snyder was blown off, and Snyder, his wife, five children and farm laborers were buried in the snow, and perished within a few miles of the house. A family, named Uhrlicher, was also frozen to death.

James Cullen, or Collins, who murdered Deputy Sheriff Hayden and Thomas Hubbard in a camp near Mapleton, Me., a few nights since, was taken from the officers who arrested him, by a gang of masked men, and lyncned. Cullen is said to have previously murdered a lawyer in New Brunswick.—Before he was lynched he confessed his crime, and said he regretted that he had not killed the two other men in the camp, and also his own wife and child.

The Pope has suffered a relapse. He is again confined to his bed. From all accounts, this wonderful old man can live but a short time now, for at his age the frame can hardly stand the repeated prostrations he has suffered. He has rallied be[illegible] however, and may linger on now [illegible] It is only to be hoped, wh[illegible] he dies, that a successor may follow whose private character, pureness of life and gentleness of manner may equal those of Pius IX., and so obtain a transfer of the respect of all parties.

At the last session of the Delaware Legislature a charter was granted to the Baltimore, Chesapeake and Delaware Bay Railroad Company. This road will run from Harrington to Queenstown, Md., via Greensboreugh, and terminate at Kent Island, from which point steamers will run to Baltimore. The corporators met in Baltimore on Tuesday last, and elected the following officers: Dr. G. W. Goldsborough, of Caroline county, President; John P. Manlove, Secretary and Treasurer; Dr. Alex. Hardcastle, of Queen Anne's county; Dr. R. W. Errickson, of Kent Island; John B. Pennington, of Dover; John P. Manlove, of Caroline county, and Sydney C. Long, of Baltimore, Directors.

The Charles[illegible] News and Courier of Saturday says [illegible] frost of Saturday, the 26 ult m[illegible] have been very general in all sections of the State, and the injuries sustained by truck farmers were not overestimated. The vegetables, corn and cotton have, in many places, been cut down, and the grape vines, with the exception of the native scuppernong, have all been more or less injured. The fruit has probably escaped, and the strawberries are only slightly frosted. The rain of Tuesday extended over the entire State, and has given an impulse to the growing crop, which is, in some measure, an offset to the damages done by the frost.

At a meeting of the Cleveland Bar Association the resolution introduced at a previous meeting censuring Judge Sherman, of the U. S. District Court, was reconsidered, and rejected. A resolution was adopted in its stead, declaring the usefulness of Judge Sherman had been seriously impaired by facts and disclosures in his evidence before the Congressional committee, and that they cannot extend to him the confidence so necessary between the bench and bar in a proper administration of justice.

Senator Sumner has directed the Secretary of the Senate to pay into the treasury the "back pay" credited to that Senator's account, amouting to $4,444 60. Senator Pratt, of Indiana, writes to the Chicago Tribune to say that he never drew a dollar of his back pay, but simply took what was due him as compensation under the old law, turning the balance, 4,120 60, into the treasury. In a letter to the editor of the Cinn. Commercial Senator Brownlow, who took his back pay, defends his action on two grounds, the first being that he has always advocated liberal salaries to public officers, believing it good policy to do so, and the second because he considered his services to Tennessee and the country worth $10,000 per annum.

A trip through the peach section of this county is sufficient to show that the crop in Cecil will be very slim. A majority of the orchards are barren. A few have full crops and a larger number have part of a crop. We notice, however, that lower down the Peninsula the crop is abundant; hence our growers who have them may not build too hopefully on high prices.—Elkton Democrat.

An Old Town boy left the happy home of his fond parents a few weeks ago and ran away with Forepaugh's circus. The past week the youth got tired of the saw-dust and flip-flap business and worked his way from Williamsport, Pa., to Baltimore. After skirmishing around the house for half an hour, the giddy youth ventured in expecting to be received with kisses and tears. He made a blooming error. The fond father did not kill any fat calves and have a big hurrah party. He simply went down into the cellar, selected a piece of hickory about three feet long, seized his long lost son by the scalp-lock, removed his jacket and whaled him until his back looked like the Star-Spangled Banner, and then let him sleep the remainder of the night in the wood shed. As soon as that boy is able to walk he intends to knock a bale of hay out of the fellow who advised him to run away.

CAMP MEETING.—At the Quarterly Conference of the M. E. Church, Centreville Station, held on Monday last, a committee of five was appointed to take the sense of the membership in regard to holding a Camp-Meeting the coming summer. We understand an effort is to be made to obtain a suitable wood on the line of the railroad, and secure the cooperation of other charges in the county, in order to have a large Union Camp. The woods which would probably be selected is near Tilghman's Crossing, about eight miles from Centreville. The grove is said to be a good one, and water convenient.—Centreville Citizen.

The scholars of the Centreville Academy held a May party in the woods of Geo. W. Taylor, Esq., near Centreville, on Thursday, at which a sumptuous supply of ice-cream, cake, &c., was provided. Miss Emma Richardson was elected Queen of the May, with Misses Annie Truitt, Winnie Anderson, Sidney Davis, Katie Davis and Sadie Bailey, as Maids of Honor. The scolars were addressed by Mr. Harley, the Principal, in very appropriate remarks.

TALBOT COUNTY.

A colored girl, employed as a nurse in the family of Dr. Harrison, in Easton, was found to be suffering with the small pox on Sunday, and was removed to the small-pox hospital on Monday.—It had been communicated to her by her aunt, who recently came from Baltimore and had had a slight attack of varioloid, a fact which she had kept secret.

There is also a case in Trappe District, a colored man there having the disease.

We learn that the Democratic Central Committee of Talbot county have determined to call a meeting of the Democratic and Conservative voters of the county, to assemble in Easton on Tuesday, the 3d of June next. The meeting is to be for organization and consultation, we understand, and not for making nomination.

DORCHESTER COUNTY.

We clip the following from the Dorchester Democrat & News of Saturday last:

Butter, poultry and spring vegetables are very scarce in Cambridge.

Notwithstanding the very cold weather last month, a resident of Lakesville reported the mosquitoes troublesome.

Although a large portion of the corn crop in Dorchester was planted two or three weeks ago, but very few of the plants have yet appeared above the surface of the ground.

REMARKABLE.—About one year ago Capt. James E. Norman sold to Mr. James Bassett, a fine calf from his large Durham cow. A few days ago this heifer-calf, at the age of 13 months and 15 days, dropped a fine, healthy calf.—She is probably the youngest mother cow in the State.

We are pleased to announce that Jas. Alfred Pearce, Esq., of Chestertown, Maryland, will deliver the Address at the Annual Commencement of the Cambridge Female Seminary, on the 19th of June next.

On the first day of May, Mr. William Rozell cut a stalk of wheat from his field, measuring three feet and one inch, and it was not an extra stalk either.—Mr. Rozelle states that on a level his wheat will measure 3 feet high.

SAVE YOUR DOCTOR'S BILL.—When Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry will cure cough, colds, bleeding at the lungs, and arrest the fell destroyer, Consumption, it does more than most physicians can do.
