THE DUEL.

Not long ago the papers teemed With the Bennet-May duel; But no one here had ever dreamed That we could duel as well.

'Twas on a dark and stilly night, The moon ne'er cast a single ray, But in the bar-room all was bright, Where sat the duelists at play.

A little child was at their feet, And had no thought of danger near, As they played on with smiles so sweet And mildly sipped their foaming beer.

A close observer might have seen On Thompson's brow an angry frown, And had he very watchful been

A dangerous look in the eye of Brown. The score stood four to four, He'd play this game but play no more.

The crowd drew near, eager to see Which doughty champion would win; Brown threw the left down carelessly, With the right Thompson gathered it

So the game was played to the end, And Thompson won of course, As he always had cards to lend, For of them he kept a reserved force.

Then Brown remarked to Thompson:

"You cheating sun-of-a-gun,

You must certainly think I cannot see, But its very plain how you have won, You did it sir by cheating me!" Scarce had Brown these dire words spoken

When Thompson arose in his wrath;

And acted as though he would slay all in From his pocket a barlow knife he drew, Its handle was bone and its blade of tin.

While he was trying Brown to get to, Brown played the card he thought would He aimed a pistol at his angry foe, A quick report and all was o'er: Some of the people to this day about know Just how it was they got out of the door.

When the smoke of battle had cleared Neither Thompson nor Brown were to

But on the floor their weapons lay, Where the deadly struggle had been. A barlow knife with a bended blade, A cast-iron pistol with a ball in the end,

Were the only things that betrayed

How murderously the fight did tend. Those weapons now hang side by side And are kept as mementoes rare, And are always looked upon with pride As they relate this terrible affair. SPARTACUS.

NO FERTILIZER ever offered to the public has met with the great success which this Guano achieved. Its sterling merit has made it indispensable for all who require a cheap first-class manure. In consequence of its high quality its sales have increased in a larger ratio than those of any other fertilizer. On all crops to which it has been applied it has produced the most gratifying results-largely increasing the yield. On Corn, Oats, Garden Vegetables, Berries, and

Small Fruits,

And has frequently DOUBLED the ordinary Crop.

Although we have made a liberal reduction in price, we WARRANT THE growth, and is $10 lower in price per ton STANDARD TO BE FULLY EQUAL TO ANY HITHERTO MAN-UFACTURED. Farmers should send in their orders to local agents early, as the demand for the Guano will undoubtedly be large.

Our Centennial was practically tested the past seaon on corn, and gave entire satisfaction. proved to be an effectual preventative for what in Maryland and Virginia is known as Frenching in corn. While a guaranteed analysis accompanies each bag of our Fertilizers, such guarantees are getting to be quite common, and are rarely of any practical advantage to the purchaser, unless be does possess such a knowledge of analytical chemistry as would enable him to detect a fraudulent article. Believing that a business, to be successful, must be fairly and honorably conducted, and to assure our customers of our it tentions so to deal with them, we are prepared to guarantee our Fertilizers in a more substantial and practical way. We will, by written ageeement, place our Fertilizers in competition with an equal value of any Fertilizer in the market, or with stable manure of the same market value, and allow the price paid for our Fertilizers to be graduated and fixed according to product. Thus practically guaranteeing that no one shall undersell us or return more intrinsic value for money received. If any seemingly fairer propositions than the above shall be suggested, we will be found ready to accept them. Sales to the amount of hundreds of tons were effected by us in Kent county, Md., under the above arrangements and guarantees during the season of 1875. A committee of leading farmers of the county was selected to make competitive tests. Results clearly proved that the I. P. THOMAS RAW BONK SU-PER-PHOSPHATE was cheaper at $47 per ton than was any of its competitors at $23.50. For corroborative proof of the above test, J. Frank Wilson, chairman of committee, may be addressed at Still Pond, Kent Co., Md. In the Spring of 1876 we furnished Thomas Gale, of Hanesville, Kent Co., Md., 51 tons of our Raw Bone Super-Phosphate, to be applied to about 30 acres of corn, agreeing to take our pay from the increased product. About 300 pounds to the acre was sown broadcast, and plowed in with a light furrow, the balance applied to the hill at the time of planting. One acre was planted without Fertilizer, to determine the increase in product, which upon the whole amounted to about 750 bushels : estimating it at 50 cents per bushel, Mr. Gale's result shows a clear profit of 45 per cent. in the first crop-the increased quantity of fodder was sufficient to pay extra labor.
