EDITORIAL NOTES.

In discussing the canal tolls repeal, which the Boston Monitor rightly calls a matter of national honor, it says it is with confident hope that the public may await final action on the direct issue, now that the lower house has indicated how it stands. The Senate surely has among its members a sufficiently large number of men with experience in facing internal complications, who can be counted upon to rise above the chauvinism and jingoism that some disputants have brought into this controversy. The Senate, as a partner with the executive in treaty making, has at its disposal information about actual conditions in the field of diplomacy that must fit it to vote on this tolls repeal issue with a sense of certitude not felt by all congressmen.

Every farmer wants to be successful. According to Mr. James Hill, the empire builder of the Northwest, here are the essentials: Rotation of crops; thorough cultivation; chemical soil analysis to discover in what elements of fertility, if any, it is deficient, and supplying them; the keeping of live stock and the liberal use of barnyard manure; the selection of only the best products for use of seed, and a careful test of germination before planting; always more and better cultivation.

Some one has lately been remarking on the careless use of the word "proposition." We speak of a "business proposition" more or less loosely, and then we call some man a "queer proposition." Rev. Harold Hough, of Baltimore, finds something to compensate in a measure for the queer use of the English language and the present day slang phrases which jar us so frequently. Such talk indicates vigor of thought, he argues, and vigor of thought means progress necessarily.

There is a proposition on foot now to use some of our cruisers as South American liners, to develop our trade. Such use of our scores of idle warboats would no doubt be heartily endorsed. There ought to be some way in which the many thousands of our soldiers of the sea could earn something for the country.

The legislature joins in helping the great Star Spangled Banner celebration by appropriating seventy-five thousand dollars. All the world will next September hear anew the lays to Maryland's and the old flag's glory.

The National House of Representatives, harkening to the country's request, has by a sweeping vote declared for the repeal of the exemption clause of the Panama Canal law.

Mr. Samuel K. Dennis, former secretary of Senator John Walter Smith, was on Monday strongly endorsed by Senator Smith, who called on the President.

About three-fourths of the members of the House of Representatives are very sure the position of the President in carrying out treaty obligations is right.

THE HAPPY LOT OF THE FARMER.

Investigation by the government reveals that the average length of time per diem required of hired farm labor in the United States during the spring season is nine hours and fifty-four minutes; during the fall season, nine hours and fifty-two minutes; and during the winter season, nine hours and forty-eight minutes. The details of this inquiry are interesting and instructive, and show that the average day's work on the farms in the United States is nine hours and fifty-four minutes long—not at all excessive, especially in view of the fact everywhere noticeable that there is a laxness of effort, a carelessness among workers, a disposition to shirk which is most unaccountable. It is so general that it seems there is studied concert of action, but this seems impossible. The phenomenon has had no adequate explanation.

The farmer as a rule puts in hours enough personally, and had he available the quality of labor he had twenty-five years ago he could make much money these days. Even as it is the farmer is well off. The exceptional hardships imposed upon him, in the mind of the public, exists as a rule, only in the mind. The hardships are largely mythical. The farmers have weeks of comparative ease during each year. Where do you find the merchant or the business man in town, engaged in competitive business—where do you find the professional man anywhere—who is assured of as many weeks—even days—of freedom from exacting business cares, retaining the secured income? Verily, despite labor troubles, the lot of the farmer—especially the Caroline farmer—is a happy one.

THE TRUTH THAT EASTER TELLS.

Great and joyous thoughts come to us at Easter time, soon to come again. If you look into the face of humanity on Easter day and listen to its accents and watch its movements wherever the message of Easter has been spoken you know that it is joyful news, good tidings declares Dr. Washington Gladden. The pealing bells, the jubilant songs, the churches and the homes bright with the flowers of spring, the festive garments, the whole costume and utterance of Christendom show that the word has been spoken as a word of cheer, a word of hope, a summons to rejoicing. Is not this in itself a great achievement? To fill the heart of the world with a great hope and an unselfish joy—is not that a great good? That Jesus the Christ has done all this for the world no man can deny.

There is reason in this rejoicing. It is the truth that Easter tells that makes the whole earth glad. What is this truth? It is the truth that there is life beyond the grave. To the perfect man there is no death, and in every man there is a spiritual principle over which death has no power. This has been the unquenchable hope of mankind in all the ages, and the resurrection of Christ gives to this hope a great confirmation.

Quality Berries Pay Well.

Writing in the Country Gentleman Mr. J. H. Collins has some good suggestions on marketing berries. He says:

Quantity growers who study little points of attractiveness are partial to a form of crate that permits easy examination of berries in the bottom tier by lifting the boxes in the upper tier together on a thin wooden tray between. They also study the crate for its display value to the retailer who finally sells the fruit. Some growers favor the sixteen-quart crate because this smaller size gives housewives an inducement to buy a full crate of berries for canning purposes at wholesale prices, thus increasing consumption.

For the quality grower methods of packing run toward daintiness and individuality. The octagonal Southern type of quart box has several points of merit for him. Its shape is more pleasing than that of the square box or basket. It displays more of the fruit, having a larger surface and less depth. And it is different from standard packages seen in the Northern markets, where local trade in quality berries can be developed to the best advantage.

By the use of thin, semi-transparent, moisture-proof parchment paper, berries can be protected against dirt and dust. This makes a strong appeal to the fastidious house-wife, and when the package is more dainty almost nothing in the way of display value may be lost. Parchment paper may be purchased in exact sizes for lining the boxes and folding over the berries, and costs less than a quarter of a cent in that size. Difficulty is sometimes met where paper-wrapped berries are shipped to a distance, for tiny splinters in the box will penetrate some of the berries and cause unsightly blotches of juice, giving customers the impression that the fruit is over-ripe. But if the haul is short this is not likely to happen. Of course fruit that is packed in parchment should always be very thoroughly cooled before it is wrapped, even if it is being shipped only a short distance.

Sales of quality berries should be arranged for through some near-by grocer before the season opens. Suburbs, college towns, summer resorts and the prosperous residence districts of cities afford good markets. The grocer catering to discriminating customers likes fine goods, particularly when he has the exclusive sale in his community, and it does not take much time or selling ability to secure his co-operation if he can be assured that the fruit will really be superior and that the supply will be regular while the season lasts. Fine berries alone, packed in a sanitary way, will soon create demand for themselves at premium prices. But the trade will be established more quickly and securely if the grower does a little advertising. First, every box should bear his brand. This may be pasted on as a label, stamped with a rubber stamp, or printed on the parchment wrappers or on a slip dropped into the box before it is filled. Advertising will gain in force if something more than mere name and address is used. The grower should speak of the quality of his berries, the care used to keep them clean, and the system of selling to near-by customers as soon after picking as possible.

Of Interest to Our Poultry-Raisers.

Mr. Frederick H. Thayer, who has much knowledge of the poultry industry, writes the JOURNAL touching some points which many interested in the business should not overlook. He says:

"Having provided yourself with strong, healthy, vigorous stock from which to breed, and by using good common sense, the man who continually strives for the best constitutional vigor, will have the best average production in the long run.

"A house with three tight (north, east, and west) sides and a good roof, is an ideal protection for the layers and breeders. The shape of the house makes no difference whatever, but the location of it is of the utmost importance. The best location is on high ground with good drainage away from all sides of the house, and should be a little east of south, (a sailor would call it "Sou Sou East,") which allows the sun to shine into the building very early winter mornings, before the birds have had exercise enough to start their blood to circulating freely.

"Provide the house with a good dirt floor. A cement floor covered with four inches of light sandy soil, makes an ideal floor. This should be covered deeply with some good scratching material, to compel the hens to work and dig for all hard grains. This exercising continuously in a house provided with plenty of pure fresh air, no matter how cold, promotes health and vigor.

"Keep oyster-shell, charcoal, grit and a good dry mash food, before them at all times.

"Provide plenty of pure, fresh water, in clean sanitary vessels, at least twice a day, and always warm in winter. Noon time is a good time to give the flock a liberal amount of food, such as cow beets, turnips, cabbage, sprouted oats, or steamed alfalfa.

"About two hours before roosting, give them a full feed and a little more of a good scratching grain. The hens will dig until dark, and go to roost with full craws.

By giving them a little more than a full feed, some of the grains will be left in the litter for them to work for as soon as day-light appears. Very cold winter nights, it is a good plan to go out just at roosting time, and place whole corn in a trough, allowing the birds to eat their fill, but be sure and remove all corn left over. To feed properly, one must know the conditions of his flock, and their requirements.

"Disinfect the house frequently. Keep it and the birds free from lice and colds. A constant watch must be kept for parasites, because from the moment chicks come from the shell, they are menaced by insect vermin.

"The most practical way of meeting the problem is to continually practice preventive measures by the liberal use of liquid lice killers and disinfectants well sprayed about the poultry house. This is especially necessary in hot weather. By following the above you will not be bothered with diseases."

The Shepherd Oyster Bill.

One of the subjects which has taken up much time of the Legislature was the oyster. Of the bill finally passed, known as the Shepherd bill, Senator Harper is quoted as saying: "The Shepherd bill has been prepared with great care and has been very fully and exhaustively considered by the Legislature. Those of us who advocate that bill can see nothing in the measure that does not give to anyone who wishes to engage in the culture of oysters on barren bottoms the right to do so as successfully and as zealously as could have been done under the present, or what is known as the Haman law. In fact, we think that they will be better protected than under the present law, because we believe that under the Shepherd bill the natural oyster rocks or bottoms of the State will be fully protected, and that the oystermen from the tidewater counties, in view of the guarantee of protection therein given, will view with greater equanimity and with a more kindly feeling the cultivation of oysters on barren bottoms, it being conceded by both sides to this controversy that the sympathy of the oystermen is of paramount importance in the successful operation of oyster culture in Maryland."

Mr. B. Howard Haman has written to Governor Goldsborough, objecting to the Shepherd oyster bill. He said it can only result in great expense to the State, in vexations law suits against many of the present lessees and will without doubt deter prospective planters from applying for licenses. The Governor approves the measure, saying there can be no reasonable objection to the act, as it gives to any one honestly desiring to cultivate the barren or depleted bottoms a fair opportunity and much better protection than they have had under existing conditions.

Freight Rates on Stone.

Chairman Weller favors us with the following note: "It may be of interest to your readers to know that, at a meeting of the Interstate Commerce Commission held in Washington, D. C., on March 20, an order was issued suspending until October 14, 1914, the operation of the schedule of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company for an increase in the freight rate of 15 cents per ton on stone for road building purposes on the Eastern Shore. This increase of freight rates would have meant an additional cost of about $600 per mile on each mile of State road to be built on the Eastern Shore. The State Roads Commission last December protested against this increase by counsel before the Interstate Commerce Commission, and it was first deferred until April 14, and now until October 14 next. The favorable action already secured will mean a large saving to the State on our road building operations on the Eastern Shore during the coming season. The State Roads Commission will continue to use its best efforts to have this increased schedule of rates entirely denied, or indefinitely deferred by the Interstate Commerce Commission."

Obituary.

In remembrance of our darling, Alexander Leslie, beloved son of Alexander and Maud J. Booth, who departed this life one year ago, April 3rd.

In the graveyard softly sleeping,
Where the flowers will gently wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly,
In his lonely, silent grave.

Our dear Leslie, how we miss you!
Miss you more than tongue can tell,
Every hour and day that passes
Brings us nearer with you to dwell.

Friends may think we'll soon forget you,
And our wounded heart be healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That's within our hearts concealed.

His well-remembered footsteps
We are listening for in vain,
And our eyes grow dim with watching,
And our hearts are sad with pain.

No words will ever be so sweet
As the words he used to say;
No hour will ever be so sad
As the hour he passed away.

He is gone but not forgotten,
He will meet us here no more,
But we hope some day to meet him
On that happy, golden shore.

—By PAPA AND MAMA.

We had a little treasure once,
He was our joy and pride,
We loved him, ah, perhaps too well,
For soon he slept and died.

All is dark within our dwelling,
Lonely are our hearts today,
For the one we loved so dearly,
Has forever passed away.

Past his suffering, past his pain,
Cease to weep, for tears are vain;
Calm the tumult of thy breast,
He who suffered is at rest.

—BY GRANDMOTHER TODD.

In sad but loving memory of my dear father. W. T. Robinson, who entered into rest five years ago today, March 25, 1909.

Thou art gone but not forgotten;
Though I miss thy loving face,
Yet by faith I know thou dwellest
In a bright and fairer place.

'Twas hard to part with father
But God knows what is best.
Thy trials now are over,
Thy spirit is at rest,

But some day I shall meet thee
On yon fair golden shore,
Along with Christ our Saviour,
To dwell for evermore.

May God uphold thy loving daughter
In these sad years of grief,
And trust to Christ our Saviour
Who reaps the golden sheaf.

Now search ye in the Scriptures,
Their lesson it will tell,
Just trust ye in the Master,
For he doeth all things well.

Denton, like every City and Town in the Union, receives it.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies today that relieve, but not permanently. Doan's Kidney Pills have brought lasting results to thousands. Here is proof of merit from West Denton.

D. J. Willoughby, River Road, West Denton, Md., says: "For years I had kidney complaint. I suffered from an almost constant ache and weakness in my back, which interfered with my work. The passages of the kidney secretions were irregular, sometimes profuse and then again scanty and filled with sediment. I used many remedies in the hope of correcting these disorders, but nothing gave me relief until I used Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the Douglas Drug Store (now Duffey's Pharmacy). This remedy strengthened my kidneys wonderfully, and removed the backache. I never hesitate to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to persons I hear complaining. I know of several cures that have been made by their use."
