SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 6.

MR. McKINLEY INAUGURATED.

On Thursday, for the fourth time in the history of this great Republic, a native born citizen of Ohio, in the presence of thousands of his countrymen, took the oath of office of President of the United States. The display was greater than that of former inaugurations, Pennsylvania avenue being arrayed in the brightest of colors. Grand-stands had been erected, and every available window was occupied. Some of the latter rented for one hundred dollars each. The passing procession of soldiers and clubs was four miles in length.

At 10.10 o'clock a start was made for the White House. In the procession from the White House to the Capitol President Cleveland sat with Major McKinley on his left in the Presidential carriage. With the President and Major McKinley, sat Senator Sherman, the incoming Secretary of State, and Senator Mitchell, of Wisconsin. The distinguished occupants were cheered all along the route to the capitol. It was about noon when they reached the Senate Chamber. The incoming and outgoing Chief Executives occupied seats near and in front of the presiding officer. Mrs. McKinley, Jr., and the venerable Mrs. McKinley, Sr., 87 years of age, with friends sat near. Senators, Representatives, diplomats, officers of the army and navy and distinguished people filled the Chamber. Mr. Hobart advanced to the desk, and with up-lifted hand took the oath of office. Mr. McKinley then took the oath of office. Mr. Hobart then called the Senate to order.

Mr. McKinley's address was brief. He urged a revision of our currency, "without diminishing the circulating medium or offering possibilities for its contraction." But he thought changes in money laws should be made slowly, and only upon mature deliberation. He strongly favored international bimetallism. Mr. McKinley said the severest economy must be observed in all branches of government; that a protective tariff should be adopted; deplored lynchings, and announced that the policy of the administration would be the policy of peace with all the world, as heretofore, since the foundation of the government.

Next came the procession to the inaugural stand, which was reached at 12.45 o'clock. When Mr. McKinley appeared on the platform he was greeted with tremendous applause. He faced the park full of people from a small, raised and carpeted platform, railed with blood-red bunting, at the apex of the angle. The square space at the juncture of the angle was filled with about a thousand kitchen chairs reserved for the cabinet officers, Senators, Representatives, members of the diplomatic corps, the Supreme Court and other dignitaries.

Preceded by two military aides, Mrs. McKinley and her party emerged first from the Senate wing and were escorted to their seats on the platform in advance of the procession. The future mistress of the White House, heavily wrapped, rested on the arm of John Addison Porter. She walked somewhat feeble and was given a large leather chair exactly behind the platform, from which her husband was to deliver his inaugural address. Mother McKinley and the other members of the party were shown seats just in the rear. When the tumult subsided, President McKinley delivered his inaugural address.

At the conclusion of the address, 1.18 p. m., President McKinley took the oath of office, administered by Chief Justice Fuller.

HARMONIZE THE DEMOCRACY!

"I believe that under certain conditions we can carry the election this year. The first requisite to our success will be to harmonize the various conflicting interests, and get the members of the party together on some basis satisfactory to all. I believe this can be done, if calmness and conservatism govern the leaders of all factions. I am not yet convinced that a majority of the voters of Maryland are Republicans, although that party has carried the State in the last two elections. This year an entirely different condition of affair will govern matters political, and on every side the men of different factions whom I have talked with have expressed a desire to get together for the common good. In my opinion the issues of this campaign on which party harmony can be restored will be purely local. As the party in power in all branches of the government—city, State and national—the Republicans will, of necessity, be on the defensive, and will have to show the people wherein they have bettered their condition by the change, and also wherein their administration of public affairs in the State, city and nation has been an improvement on former administrations.

"I think that the past should be forgotten in this campaign, and that ever effort should be made to unite our people. There is plenty of common ground on which to make a fight, and which all Democrats, no matter what their shade of opinion may be, can stand. Let us place in the background the matters on which we have heretofore differed, and get the Democratic party in shape once more to win the State. I am convinced that large numbers of Democrats who voted in 1895 to turn their party out are now ready to return to the fold, and every reasonable encouragement should be given them to do so. The counties of Southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore are threatened with negro domination under the rule of the Republican party, and the longer the present state of affairs exists the harder it will be to overturn it. Whatever faults there may have been under the past management of the party in the State I am convined that can be done away with if Democrats of all factions will only take an interest in the conduct of affairs, and thus bring the organization nearer to the people and in close contact with the mass of the voters. I am ready to do my part as chairman of the State Committee to bring about harmony of feeling and harmony of action wherever they are possible, and I believe they are possible in all important particulars. When the State Committee meets will be a good time to consider these matters, and it should be done. All who are Democrats from principle, and who wish the party to rise from its defeats in better shape than ever, should do what they can to bring about the desired state of affairs."

H. W. TALBOTT, Chairman.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Under the supervision of Colonel Loomit M. Langdon, of the United States Army, workmen on Friday put in place the marble tablet commemorating the valor of the Marylanders who fell in defence of Long Island. The tablet was placed, without ceremony of any kind, as near as possible to the house, around which the Marylanders fought and died near the corner of Fifth avenue and Third St. in Brooklyn. The tablet on Third Avenue, between Seventh and Eighth streets, was placed in the sidewalk Friday by Colonel Langdon and the same body of men. The work, as stated, was done without formal ceremony, but it is the intention of the committe, headed by Mr. William Berri, to hold a formal meeting with ceremonies as soon as the weather grows better. There is left in the hands of the committee a small sum of money remaining from the entertainment of visiting Marylanders when the Maryland monument in Prospect Park was unveiled in the summer of 1895. It is proposed to spend this sum when the formal ceremonies are held.

Democrats of Kings county, New York, have set an example which party men all over the country may well adopt. At a recent meeting they unanimously passed the following resolution: That the Democratic party of Kings county does hereby cordially invite all Democrats of said county to unite with it and join in the enrollment, to the end that all factionalism and disagreements of the past, of whatever kind, may cease, and a united, harmonious and more effective organization be created, in which every Democrat may have a part, and wherein party differences may be settled within party lines; and with these purposes and to the sole end of the good of the party, we will heartily welcome all Democrats, who, with like purpose, will unite with us. Every county convention should put that plank in the platform.

Members of the cabinet from Maryland, aside from Blair and Creswell, have been: James McHenry, Secretary of War under Washington and elder Adams; Benjamin Stoddard, Secretary of the Navy under Adams and Jefferson; Robert Smith, Attorney-General and Secretary of the Navy under Jefferson, and Secretary of State under Madison; William Pinkney, Attorney-General under Jackson; Roger B. Taney, Secretary of the Treasury and Attorney-General under Jackson; John Nelson, Attorney-General under Tyler; Reverdy Johnson, Attorney-General under Taylor; John Pendelton Kennedy, Secretary of the Navy under Fillmore; Philip F. Thomas, of Talbot, Secretary of the Treasury under Buchanan.

It was not until Wednesday that the list of advisers of President McKinley was completed. The full Cabinet is as follows:

Secretary of State—John Sherman, of Ohio.

Secretary of the Treasury—Lyman J. Gage, of Illinois.

Secretary of War—Russell A. Alger, of Michigan.

Attorney-General—Joseph McKenna, of California.

Postmaster-General—James A. Gary, of Maryland.

Secretary of the Navy—John D. Long, of Massachusetts.

Secretary of the Interior—Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York.

Secretary of Agriculture—James Wilson, of Iowa.

An effort is being made to abolish the whipping-post in Delaware. The taxpayers of the Diamond State should see to it that this effort does not succeed. It is one of the healthiest "relics of barbarism" in this country and drives away thousands of very expensive thieves and vagrants and other dangerous characters.

"Seven women are still drawing pensions as the widows of men who saw active service in the war of the Revolution; women whose husbands served under Washington more than a hundred and twenty years ago."

President McKinley will convene a special session of Congress on the 15th of March.

Tuesday was Shrove Tuesday, or "Pancake day, as it is popularly called. The day derives one name from the ancient practice of the church in Rome of confessing sins and being shriven or shrove in preparation for the approaching penitential season. The linking of pancakes with the day in English-speaking countries is supposed to be a derivation from one of the Saxon names for February, which is translated the "month of cakes." In France the festival is mardi gras; in Italy the carnival and in Scotland fastern eve. In modern times the feast previously practiced has given way to the simpler one of eating pancakes. Wednesday was Ash Wednesday, the beginning of the forty days' penitential season, ending with the festival of Easter.

Interest in Col. R. G. Ingersoll seems to be on the wane. He lectured in Baltimore a few days ago, and one of the leading papers of the city devoted only about a half a dozen lines to him. Probably when the Colonel finds less profit in his agnosticism he will be less an agnostic.

Vice-President Stevenson was on Saturday last presented with a magnificent silver service by the Senate, over which he presided, as a token of esteem. A parchment testimonial was signed by every member of the body.

President Clevelnad on Tuesday vetoed the immigration bill which would have excluded all immigrants who cannot read and write some language.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

After having been confined to the house for eleven days and paying out $25 in doctor bills without benefit, Mr. Frank Dolson, of Salt Ste. Marie, Mich., was cured by one bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm costing 25 cents and has not since been troubled with that complaint. For sale by W. E. Brown, Denton; H. Duffey, Hillsboro, and R. J. Colston, Ridgely.

A Triumph in Glove Getting.

For twenty years we have been trying to get a perfect kid glove to sell at One Dollar. It was easy enough to get better gloves than were sold generally at that price. But they were far short of our ideal of quality or finish. Paris has always beaten us at glove selling.

We had to look to France for the kid, for the pelt of animals as their wool is effected by climate. Then the turning of the skins to glove leather had to be done in Southern France, because the water is best suited to the process—as Philadelphia water is best suited to tanning shoe leather. That done, we commissioned the best glove maker in the world to make the gloves, and gave orders great enough to make surest economy of price.

The Princess May Glove at $1 is the result. Paris charges 4 francs 90 for equal gloves; American stores must ask $1.50. No wonder the new comer is a success. We have cabled duplicate order already—the supply shall be steadily maintained. So shall the quality.

The Princess May is a perfect glove—and its advent marks an advance in the store's standard of excellence. As the bride, who received the fine blue china, we shall try to live up to it.

Every wanted color and black and white—the backs silk embroidered. There will be country-wide champions for this great Dollar Glove—for the mails make us all neighbors.

Furniture FEBRUARY Furniture prices. One of our ardent copiers has taken the cue. You'd think February made the prices. Why in the world don't people exercise common sense? We could sell Bedroom Furniture as cheap in April as in February. We don't, unless it be of belated lots bought for February selling.

We sell bedroom furniture cheap in February because we put the buying power of the store on that particular spot of the business—we simply watch opportunities to place great orders for February delivery at prices less than the normal. As a rule you save a third to a half. February doesn't make the prices—we make the prices for February. They are the same in early March—while lots remain.

That's all. It's simple. But the plan is not adaptable to many stores—so borrowing the idea with no chance of living up to it doesn't amount to much. Now, does it?

Bedroom Suites, $8 and more—the $8 suites of oak; bedstead and bureau.

Bed Spreads FOREHANDED hotel men are buying white spreads now for use next summer. They are picking from biggest, freshest stocks.

Not a bad idea.

Honeycomb spreads, 65c.

Crocheted spreads, 75c, 85c, $1, $1.25; yes, some at $1.50, but they're almost like the Marseilles.

Marseilles spreads start at $1.85. All the spreads are hemmed—a handy bit of forethought.
