DENTON JOURNAL.

MELVIN, STEELE & JOHNSON.
EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 7, 1898.

ALL ARE PATRIOTS.

There are radical differences of opinion among Senators as to the means of raising the large amount of money the expenses of the war is estimated to require. The chief bone of contention now is the proposed issue of $500,000,000 of bonds, to be sold in small sums throughout the country, and denominated, for euphony's sake, a popular loan. It is more than probable, however, that the major part of them will fall into the hands of the great banking and moneyed corporations, as heretofore. Democratic Senators are criticised in some quarters—from which criticism of Democrats alone can emanate—because they venture to suggest that other means than bonds would accomplish the desired result at less expense to the people. The Democrats ought not and will not obstruct revenue measures when their passage is necessary, but they should distinctly avow their position in regard to a bond issue before they assent to a proposition of such magnitude as the bonding of the country for $500,000,000 in addition to what is already outstanding. The responsibility for the right use, or for the abuse, of the discretionary power to be vested in the Secretary of the Treasury will rest upon the administration he represents, and as that responsibility is invoked the Democratic Senators cannot do better, now that their protest has been recorded, than to allow the administration to shape its course in dealing with the financial problems before it. The whys and the wherefores belong to the future. Patriotism is the guiding star and humanity the shibboleth of a united American people, and the two can be best displayed by providing every cent necessary for the speedy demonstration of our ability to enforce the mandate that has gone forth, in humanity's name, that suffering Cubans shall be freed, and thus bring to a termination a contest that means utter distruction to Spanish outlying interests, and irreparable loss to the monarchy itself. If Spanish bigotry cannot be forced to acknowledge defeat without annihilation, then the nations will intervene to force a cessation of hostilities, upon conditions named in the ultimatum of the United States to Spain.

THE AMERICAN NAVY.

The record of the American navy, since the foundation of the government, has been a most brilliant one, and the great achievement of Commander Dewey, in Manila Bay early this week, has made it more famous. In every land the event of this week in the Philippine Island and the praise of the dashing American sailors have been sounded. But it was ever thus with Americans. What reader of early history does not proudly remember the brave deeds of Paul Jones and Perry, the early heroes, and their successors. France and England—the latter with the undisputed title of mistress of the seas, and the former only second in strength—can well attest from their war records that there were foeman here worthy of their steel nearly a hundred years ago. The last battles reported add lustre to our naval scroll. Notwithstanding our national reputation as sea-fighters, there has been and still is a disposition to laugh at the American ability to conduct naval warfare. Even in this country such criticisms are often heard. But in the face of decisive battles—matters of common knowledge possessed by all who will read—such comments can be made only by the thoughtless or the ignorant.

GEORGE COLTON.

George Colton, one of the most picturesque figures in Maryland politics, and a gentleman of fine literary attainments and delightful social qualities, died at his home, in Baltimore, on Wednesday last, aged 80 years. He was a native of England and came to this country when a young man. For a time he worked at his trade, that of a tailor. In 1852 he entered polities and held various offices. He was the early champion of Frank Brown's candidacy for Governor, and so successful was he in managing the canvass that his favorite had little opposition in convention, and at the polls was elected by an overwhelming majority. His friendship in political matters was always esteemed valuable, far he possessed wondersul sagacity and had the confidence of leading party men. Mr. Colton frequently appeared upon the lecture platform, and on several occasions addressed Caroline audiences. His earnings on the platform were always donated to churches or charitable purposes. Mr. Colton was a brilliant and able newspaper writer, and the editorial fraternity of the State will cherish his memory.

SPAIN.

Buckley forty years ago gave this picture of Spain, and it is today a faithful representation. Is it any wonder that we approach and enter the conflict with the Spaniard with confidence in our ability to win: "There she lies at the further extremity of the Continent, a huge and torpid mass, the only representative now remaining of the feeling and the knowledge of the Middle Ages. And what is the worst symptom of all, she is satisfied with her own condition. Though she is the most backward country in Europe, she believes herself to be the foremost. She is proud of everything of which she ought to be ashamed. She is proud of the antiquity of her faith, proud of her immeasurable and childish credulity, proud of her unwillingness to amend either her creed of her customs, proud of her hatred of hereties, and proud of the undying vigilance with which she has baffled their efforts to obtain a full and legal establishment on her soil.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A good authority puts the cost of a first-class modern war vessel at $4,000,000, in round numbers, but the cost of equipping and using such a vessel in warfare surpasses all general calculations. A single twelve-inch gun costs about $50,000 when placed on the ship ready for action. The maximum capacity of this immense war engine is eighty shots; the minimum thirty. It is not safe to count on these guns firing more than fifty rounds. The intense heat and strain are likely to make the gun useless any time after thirty to eighty rounds are fired from it, after which it is valuable only as old steel. The cost in wear and tear in firing these guns may be safely estimated at $1,000 for every discharge. In addition to the cost of $1,000 for every round fired from these guns in wear and tear, the powder and steel-pointed missile with which the gun is loaded, cost the government $1,200 every time the gun is fired.. It is a safe estimate to say that every time a twelve-inch gun is fired in war, the cost is about $2,500.

The new rifle that has been adopted for use by the United States army is known as the Krag-Jorgensen. It is of the armies of Europe. The one to be used by our army has a barrel thirty inches long and weighs about eight pounds. It was accepted by the government only after a thorough test had proven it superior to all others. The old army rifle, the Springfield, was 45 caliber, while the Krag-Jorgensen is 30-caliber, the bore being about the size of an ordinary lead pencil. The new rifle is a repeater and it is claimed that an expert can fire 100 shots a minute with it, and the bullets are made of hardened lead, nickel plate, and will penetrate 20 inches of oak at the distance of a mile. Smokeless powder is used.

President McKinley has paired the Major-Generals appointed this week, outside the regular service. Fitzhugh Lee of Virginia, William T. Sewell of New Jersey, Joseph Wheeler of Alabama, and James Wilson of Delaware, Lee and Wheeler are ex-Confederate and Sewell and Wilson ex-Federal officers. The last vestige of animosity between sections of the Union will be wiped out in this war with Spain.

The old and the new fish laws are thus summarized: Fishermen must not haul seines, float seines, or set fykes or other contrivances, between the hours of Saturday noon and sunrise on Monday. Fishing with haul seines, fykes, pound nets and wire nets, must be discontinued May 20th. Gill nets may be fished at any season of the year, except, of course, from Saturday noon until Monday morning.

Few persons, probably, realize what the war we are waging will cost. It is said that the civil war cost the nation about four millions per day during the last year of the conflict, but we had then a million of men in the army and navy, nearly ten times as many as will be called into service in the present war, and our money was greatly depreciated.

Dewey has demonstrated the fact that Americans can fight, and when they do fight they do it in the same old 1776 style.

PROF. WAUGH ON PEACHES.

The anxiety regarding the condition of the peach buds which prevails in the peach-growing sections during the late winter or early spring is sometimes laughable, sometimes ludicrous, sometimes pitiable and sometimes very serious. Every time the mercury falls to zero or thereabout, the excitable peach-grower goes out into the orchard and dissects a handful of buds. The very excitable peach-grower is always sure to find a certain percentage "black in the middle," and various conflicting estimates of the decimation of the peach crop circulate freely from this time till the fruit is half grown on the trees.

The most obvious thing about all this unrestful apprehension is the utter unreliability of its foundation. There are a great many men who feel sure that they can always tell when peach buds are damaged; but a disinterested observer may always be still surer that the actual facts are not matters of public knowledge. Anyone who has had any experience in collecting statistical advance estimates of the crop, or who has paid attention to such estimates when they are published, knows how untrustworthy they are. This is so much so that many of the best newspapers pay no more attention to such reports. The Baltimore newspapers, in the heart of the peach district, where such news is in greatest demand, have been fooled so often that they never commit themselves to any statement on this point. One can also observe among his neighbors the unreliability of personal opinion regarding the peach crop. After a winter freeze or a spring frost, he can easily collect as many different estimates as he has peach-growing neighbors, and can as easily determine for himself that they are all wrong. At any rate, it does not pay to worry over the early reports of damage to peach buds.

In the peach growing sections, damage from late spring frosts is much more common than from winter freezing. As is well known, this frost damage may often be averted by really practicable means. In every neighborhood, some one has tried the use of smudges, and has proved for himself that a good cover of smoke will hold the temperature above the freezing point on an ordinary frosty night. The writer has recently consulted many peach-growers, nearly all of whom have tried this method or who have seen it tried. All of them express confidence in its efficacy. And yet these same men did not attempt to put it into practice when frosts threatened their own bearing orchards. It seems almost incredible that a man who has a thousand dollars at stake will not stay up all night—for a week, if necessary—and spend ten or twenty-five dollars in the practical insurance of a peach crop. But such is the fact. It is all because of that inertia or conservatism which seems to be so powerful a part of the farmer's character, and which often holds him to practices which he knows to be unprofitable, and which oftener withholds him from innovations after he is thoroughly convinced of their profitableness. A little forethought and preparation would enable the peach-grower to thoroughbreds because of a phenomenal product in number of eggs. If all breeds laid eggs of the same weight, than the larger number laid would have far more significance than it now does.

F. A. WAUGH.

The Patriotic Deacon.

An old colored deacon, praying for the success of the American arms, said:

"Oh, Lord, get on de Merikin side! Come down into dese Nunited States en make de sojors shoot straight ter de mark! May ever' bullet in der guns kill two Spaniards at a clip! Set all de Spanish ships on fire, sink 'em out er sight, en shoot, en shoot twell dey ain't a Spaniard lef' ter tell de tale!"

When he got through some one said to him:

"'Pears to me dat ain't scripter, deacon. Don't de Bible say you mus' love yo' enemies, en pray fer dem whut respec'fully use you?"

"Look heah, my fr'en'," said the deacon, "don't you go sayin' whut de Bible mean, or don't mean, De Bible talk in two ways, en you can't on'erstan' either. Go 'long 'bout yo' business en leave de Bible ter dem whut call ter preach it."—Atlanta Constitution.

The Best Remedy for Rheumatism.

From the Fairhaven (N. Y.) Register.

Mr. James Rowland of this village, states that for twenty-five years his wife has been a sufferer from rheumutism. A few nights ago she was in such pain that she was nearly crazy. She sent Mr. Rowland for the doctor, but he had read of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and instead of going for the physician he went to the store and secured a bottle of it. His wife did not approve of Mr. Rowland's purchase at first, but nevertheless applied the Balm thoroughly and in an hour's time was able to go to sleep. She now applies it whenever she feels an ache or a pain and finds that it always gives relief. He says that no medicine which she had used ever did her as much good. The Late Judge Moore.

At a meeting of the bar association of this place on Monday last the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, Almighty God in the dispensation of His wise Providence has removed from us Chief Judge of the Orphans' Court, Hon. George H. Moore, who has for many years presided over the sessions of said Court, where we have from time to time been brought into professional contact with him. In token of the high regard for his uniform kindness and fairness toward us in all our professional business relations with him and also his accurate knowledge of the testamentary law of this State—for there was none better in this county—therefore be it Resolved, by the members of the Bar for Caroline County that the death of the Hon. George H. Moore, the county has lost one of the best learned men in testamentary law within her borders. The ability and impartiality with which he discharged the duties devolving upon him as Chief Judge of the Orphan's Court challenged the respect and confidence of the whole people. He was careful, patient and effective in his work. A man who did in all the walks of life make conscience his guide, was firm and inflexible in contending for what he deemed right and in denouncing wrong. His habits were studious, and industrious, his temperament equable, his discernment accurate, his judgment just.

Resolved, that we tender to his widow and family our profound sympathy in their great bereavement.

Resolved, that these proceedings be entered upon the minutes of the Orphan's Court and a copy thereof be sent to his family and also to the county papers for publication.

On the Death of Mrs. Addie Nuttle.

Our friend sweetly sleeps,
Her sufferings are o'er;
She is resting, at last,
On Heaven's bright shore.

Where pain never enters
And care is unknown;
She has entered the portals
Of a glorified home.

She was a Christian
And lived close to her God,
When sorely afflicted
She kissed the stern rod.

There was no murmuring
When suffering pain;
She bore it with patience,
And seldom complained.

She was a kind daughter,
A fond, loving wife;
And for her dear children
Would have laid down her life.

To her friends we would say
Never fear! all is well;
She has gone with her Saviour
Forever to dwell.

In Heaven's bright mansions,
Where suffering 's unknown,
She is singing God's praises,
Safe, safe, at home!

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, May 2, 1898.

Dress Goods FIFTY cents a yard. Some at 60c. Really stylish; surely good—and every yard new this season. It is necessary to say this, for we hear of old goods being sold as new. Old are not as pretty; not as right; not what you want.

This word of brand new stuffs—

Pebble Cloth, 3 colors, all wool, 60c from 75c.
Bayadere Stripes, 50c from 65c.
Crepe Brilliants—a moire of water effect, 35c.
Pin-stripe Mixtures, all-wool, 60c from $1.25.
Silk-mixed Illuminated Suiting, 60c from 75c.
Colored Kerseymeres, 44 in. wide, 65c.
Serge, colors, good, 50c.
Mosaic Checks—green, blue, brown, with white, 50c from 75c.

Lillian Corsets WHEN the maker of Lillian Corsets caught the knack of producing these most perfect corsets, it was only a problem of manufacturing to bring them out in all qualities you asked for.

That's all. And Lillian comfort and Lillian style are combined in these at $1 and $1.25

All are lace trimmed; the $1 corsets in white and drab.

An Important Carpet Sale RESOLUTE buying—"plunging," careless folks call it—has put us in possession of forty-five thousand two hundred and sixty-five yards of Carpets.

VELVET, AXMINSTER AND MOQUETTE.

There are 165 styles in all—and all of them new this year.

55 styles Moquette, 15,440 yards, 85c instead of $1.
75 styles Velvet, 26,325 yards, at 90c.
35 styles Axminster, 3500 yards, $1 instead of $1.25.

There are carpets for almost every carpet need—the long wearing sorts that are finest values at even the full market price of the day.
