The ground of her claim to consideration is high moral worth, her knowledge of legislative business, her oratorical ability and her emancipation | Wednesday, being as usual about the first. from false notions of dress. She does not specify which vacancy she wishes to fill, and from the tone of her communication it seems likely that she believes herself able to occupy both seats. ---

THE New York World assumes that the Legislature on Saturday failed to take a legal vote for United States senators to succeed Platt and Conkling, and cannot, therefore, make a valid election. The World contends that there was not a majority of the members present, as required by the Federal law, on Saturday, and that one day having passed on which "at least one States senators hereafter would be invalid. The admintstration organs, which are apparently afraid to remit the question of the filling of the Conkling and Platt vacancies to the people of New York are wonderfully excited over this point raised by the World, which has a good deal of force in it. The organs are gradually assuming a solemn air, and their hopes of electing ad-
