MAYOR WHYTE, of Baltimore, on Saturday placed himself upon record as to the granting of permits allowing persons to work on Sunday. Two applications were made for such purpose, because he was opposed to remitting fines in adby granting the permits. The mayor replied to the persons seeking such permits, through Mr. King, clerk, that they could go ahead and take the risk; that it was time for him to act afterwards if a fine was imposed. One of the applications was from a steamboat company, who asked for such a permit as had been given them by the previous administration.
