LEVY COURT EXTRAVAGANCE.

The statement of expenses for roads and bridges for the year ended June 30, shows that the county had at that time spent $10,602.22, and owed $4,996.34 more on the same account, making a total of $15,688.56. Nearly sixteen thousand dollars for such roads and bridges as we have in so short a time! Can any one say that the complaints of tax-payers are untimely?

If we add to the $15,688.56 for the roads—in the short time covered—$4,568.75 for Caroline's interest in the new Dover Bridge improvements, we reach the grand and imposing sum of $20,356.31! Think of Caroline county taxpayers being saddled with such burdens now! With the most lavish hand the people's money is being spent in this branch of the public service. Many hundreds are wasted. Was it because of this princely generosity with the public funds, used on the roads, etc., that the school terms had to be shortened this year by a reduced appropriation?

The expenses of keeping the roads and bridges in Caroline in repair have been heavy, quite heavy, for some years. In 1895, $8,101.44 was the amount expended; in '96, $5,097.84; in '97, $7,871.06; all under Democratic management; in '98—for four and and a-half months under Democratic and seven and a-half months under Republican rule—$10,286.55. But since the present management of public affairs began road expenses have been on the rise. In fact, they have mounted by leaps and bounds to heights never before dreamed of. The taxpayers know their quickest and best remedy, however. They will apply it at the ballot-box.

In 1898 the county commissioners levied $9,222.97 more than they levied the previous year. This was done ostensibly to pay debts. The auditors' report shows, however, that a reduction of only $2,880.32 was made. The difference, $6,342.65, went into the roads, where the $3,500.00 levied to the schools, but not paid over, were also likely misapplied.

It required, according to the Auditors' Report, $9,222.97 more of the people's money to pay the county expenses for the year ended June 30, 1899, than for the year ended June 30, 1898. Is this the kind of reform the Republicans proposed to give us before election? Is it the kind they will give us in the future, if they are given control? That is already assured. The tax levy for the year to end next June is just as high as last year and the proceeds will be a few hundred dollars more. The question is, are the taxpayers receiving benefits corresponding with the extraordinary outlay? We think not.

Republican methods of financiering seems to be the same the country over. In national finances, from two to twelve millions a month are extorted from the people in the way of war revenue taxes, in addition to other tariff taxes, and deficits are shown at the end of fiscal years of from seventy-five to ninety millions, but they point with pride to the monthly statement that shows a small surplus above immediate expenses. Likewise, in county finances, they make the tax-rate 15 cents higher on the $100 than in '97, but they point with pride to the fact that the county indebtedness has been lessened by an amount less than one-third of the proceeds.

Maryland was well to the front in the Dewey parade in New York on Saturday. The band that played "Maryland, My Maryland," started the cheering all along the line, and behind it came the Fourth and Fifth Regiments of the Maryland National Guard, marching like veterans. Wherever the Maryland troops go they are welcome, and they do credit to their State. And it was the Maryland hero, the commander of the fleet which destroyed the Spaniards off Santiago, who, next to Dewey himself, aroused the greatest enthusiasm and the loudest acclamations.—Baltimore Sun.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Admiral Dewey is the guest, during his present stay at Washington, of Mrs. Washington McLean, mother of Hon. John R. McLean, Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio. The ovation given him upon his arrival in Washington, and during the civic parade he reviewed, was greater than was ever given to any other individual. It was enthusiastically participated in by everybody, regardless of politics, race or sex, showing that the people recognized the difference between a real national hero and a man temporarily prominent through partisan politics. The administration would gladly have made this occasion a Republican celebration, but the people would not have it that way—they are perfectly willing that the Republicans should have the present war in the Philippines for their own, but they know that the war with Spain was not a Republican party affair.

Senator Burrows, of Michigan, has an article in the October Forum, in which he argues that the election to take place next month will in no wise indicate what the result may be in the election of next year, when Mr. McKinley's successor will be chosen. The Senator cites the elections in the early sixties. In 1862 the Democrats carried many Republican strongholds. The candidates of that year were like those of this year. In 1862 the result of the internecine conflict, so much deplored by the majority of people in most of the States, was in grave doubt; it was unwise and unrighteous, as viewed by many, and the Republican party received a severe rebuke at the polls. Therefore, the Michigander does not think a defeat at the polls this fall, while the administration is carrying on the Philippine war, will presage Republican defeat next year. Others hold other opinions, however.

A Washington dispatch says: There is talk that Rear Admiral Schley may be placed upon the Democratic national ticket as running mate for Bryan or whoever heads the ticket. Some representative Democrats now here have been much impressed by the last week's popular demonstrations in New York and Washington, and if Maryland either goes Democratic this fall or shows a Republican falling off, Schley is, in the opinion of these gentlemen, an essential to the Democratic campaign. The story is, therefore, that if the heroic spirit is to envade the next campaign it will come through the Democracy with Schley as the central figure. Dewey is all right as an Admiral, no matter what ticket is elected; but Schley is doomed to remain where he is as long as the regime holds out.

The Kansas farmers say that it will cost them more to harvest the corn crop this year, because the stalks are so high that they will have to hire men on horse back to pick the ears. While the corn is high, it is also heavy; the ears are well-filled and the kernels are firm and sound. It will be no unusual thing to have fields yield 80 or 90 bushels to the acre.

It is noticed by a contemporary that even the news of a Dewey celebration does not attract as much attention as a well-written discriptive advertisement of new fall and winter goods. Here is a point for the progressive merchant, with a good stock, to write about.

One of the reasons for the great depreciation in the value of farming lands in Caroline county today is the very high tax-rate. Reform is imperatively demanded, and the Democratic platform pledges reform.

"The Democratic ticket is going to be elected this year," remarks the Easton Star-Democrat, "but not because of the recent row among the Republicans. That will merely increase the Democratic majority."

The editor of the syndicate newspaper should not give way to fits of exasperation. The campaign is yet young and there are many things to come that may be trying to his oversensitive organism.

The New York World favors Admiral Dewey for the Presidency. Ex-Secretary Whitney also expresses preference for the hero of Manila.

Let every young Democrat prepare for the great cavalcade and mass-meeting to be held in Denton on Wednesday, October 25.

Advices from the city state that there has been an advance of twenty-five cents a ton on coal.

It seems to have been universally agreed that the year 1900 is to be expressed with "'00."

A LETTER FROM MR. GELLETLY.

To the Editors of the JOURNAL:

The Rev. Henry Van Pyke is quoted by a late number of the Chautauquan magazine as saying: "Sin is not a thing to be defined; it is a thing to be felt. Every attempt at definition falls short of reality." He, moreover, has a good deal to say about the mysterious "feeling of sin" and the "fear that lurks in sin." The above is not quoted as anything new, but as a fair specimen of average orthodox intelligence in those who undertake to teach the people in regard to religious matters, and it is such talk as this, coming as it does with all the prestige of a great name, endorsed by a great institution, that makes confusion worse confounded in the popular mind.

Now, the Apostle John found no difficulty in defining sin as "transgression of the law;" that is all—and enough. Sin is not necessarily moral obliquity; moral obliquity is not always sin, as in the case of idiots and other irresponsibles, for, as Paul says, "where there is no law there is no transgression." Greek scholars tell us that the word translated sin in the New Testament may be also translated error or wrong. It conveys the idea of incorrectness—the antithesis of right, rightness or righteousness. If this is so, then sin is a thing to be known, not felt. No one can feel if he is on the right train. He finds that out before he starts aboard. No one feels if the wall he builds is perpendicular; he applies the plumb line or other mechanical test. This terrible "feeling of sin" is one of the great humbugs of many nations and centuries. It is even more distressingly conspicuous in the oriental fanaticisms than those of home production. Travelers tell us weird stories of the terrible, self-inflicted penances applied as counter-irritants by the heathen sinners of Hindoostan. Mohammedan fanatics in Africa subject themselves to similar suffering on account of that "terrible feeling." In Europe in the middle ages we have similar self-inflicted penance for sin. At one time the sect of the Flagellants carried all before them, and whole towns and villages would be seized by the feeling. People would strip to the waist and march in procession through the streets and highways, beating themselves over the back with switches. In our own time most of us have seen some frenzied sinner carried out on a stretcher, stiff, to be brought round by the kindly administration of some good old soul with her palm-leaf fan and smelling bottle.

But John says sin is transgression of the law. What is the law on the subject? Whom did the Saviour consider the greatest sinners? Whom did he term "serpents," "broods of vipers," who had less hope of redemption than "the harlot and the Publican?" It was the blind leaders of the time who thought that they contained all the concentrated wisdom and virtue of their age. Pompous fellows were they, who broadened their phylactories and made long their prayers, and stood in the fore-front of the temple thanking God that they were not as other men, not even as the back-seat sinner. The greatest sin is ignorance, wilful ignorance. Its first-born is self-conceit, and of their incestuous progeny is the whole world overspread. People generally do not err wilfully; they would fain know, they would fain do, but in the squabble of words and strife of ambition it is difficult to even pick the way. Consider, for instance, the event of the crucifixion of Christ, allowed in our day to have been the greatest legal crime in history. The populace did not favor it; Herod, the king, and Pilate objected to take the responsibility. It remained for the perfect and the "righteous" to take it upon themselves, and the dying groan of the Son of Man prayed for mercy to them on the score of ignorance.

At Pentecost (that so much misunderstood and misquoted event) where there was such a conversion of sinners, the sinners mentioned were good, godly citizens. "devout men" from all parts of the then known world, who had come up, undismayed by all the inconveniences and danger of ancient travel, to the service of the Most High God at Jerusalem. The sin they were charged with was the "killing of the Prince of Life." As Peter makes the charge he exonerates them of all wilful desire to do wrong. Probably not one of them had taken any active part in the execution, but they were held responsible for the action of their rulers. There is no record of any shouting, and the idea that some labor to impress that the converted at Pentecost were people of immoral life, led to see the general wickedness of their ungodly ways, has no foundation in the original account. Paul speaks of himself as the "chief of sinners," not because he was given to drink, but because he had persecuted the church of God in ignorance.

The moral degenerate is a sinner, of course, but a comparatively moderate one. Probably his weakness was inherited, and at best his influence is very limited. But the other man, who, with a loud voice, thanks God that he is so very right, for all that he needs such close watching, his influence is very extensive. What we need to know is less about sin and more of the right, just and true; less fancy and more fact; less excitement and more reasoning from the Word of Life; less platonic sophistry and dominican causistry and more of the "hope of Israel," "the hope of the gospel," "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ."

J. F. G.

During the winter of 1897 Mr. James Reed, one of the leading citizens and merchants of Clay Co., W. Va., struck his leg against a cake of ice in such a manner as to bruise it severely. It became very much swollen and pained him so badly that he could not walk without the aid of crutches. He was treated by physicians, also used several kinds of liniment and two and a half gallons of whiskey in bathing it, but nothing gave any relief until he began using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. This brought almost complete cure in a week's time and he believes that had he not used this remedy his leg would have had to be amputated. Pain Balm is unequaled for sprains, bruises and rheumatism. For sale by W. E. Brown, Denton; R. J. Colston, Ridgely; Hugh Duffey, Hillsboro.

On the 10th of December, 1897, Rev. S. A. Donahoe, pastor M. E. Church, South, Pt. Pleasant, W. Va., contracted a severe cold which was attended from the beginning by violent coughing. He says: "After resorting to a number of so-called 'specifics,' usually kept in the house to no purpose, I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which acted like a charm. I most cheerfully recommend it to the public." For sale by W. E. Brown, Denton; R. J. Colston, Ridgely; Hugh Duffey, Hillsboro.

WANAMAKER'S.

Philadelphia, Monday, October 2, 1899.

JOHN WANAMAKER
CLOTHING FOR MEN

We believe the present deluge of advertising about clothes will help us and you. One metaphorically stands on a soap box and yells, "Mine's best!" Another, to follow the simile, mounts a barrel and says, "Mine's best, too!"

Now, who is telling the exact truth? We are not questioning any one's candor—but facts are facts. Can't be that all the clothing is best—for sight and feeling will convince one that there are differences. The $8.50 "hand-me-down," as sewed-like-a-bag clothing is called, is not "tailored like a $40 suit," no matter who says so. Our $15 suits are better than our $10 ones; this isn't an age of miracles. Not every suit is tailored alike—some have the shaping kneaded in with hand-taken stitches; others are shaped on machines (which, though cheapest work, is claimed to be best, if honestly done. And one of Philadelphia's crack tailors makes the claim).

Think it all over.

Risks are plenty; seeming guarantees are plenty—but you are apt to be met with a ha ha if you take the clothes back for redress.

There is one different, separate, odd store—its clothing business will increase 70 per cent this year, because it not only talks fair, but you find it acting fair. And, proved in wear and lasting good looks, our clothing is cheapest.

Stylish business suits, fancy cassimere—vest single or double breasted—$8.50, $10 and $12—cheapest are good, the others better.

$15 is the better price to pay for a suit for hard wear—every day work at desk or office—because fabrics don't cost us much more and we can afford to put in a lot of work that tells in the wear and continued good shape.

Remember, you get nothing for nothing—it is the seller's game, and he knows. The best you can do is to find a store whose management knows how, and does it, a store that is content with smallest profit on one suit, for the sake of selling most suits—and then hold to that store.

Suits up to $30.

Overcoats, $8.50 to $30.

Clothing for Boys The first point that we make sure of in gathering clothing for boys is that it is GOOD. And it wouldn't be good, and it wouldn't be cheap—no matter how little it cost—if there was a particle of cotton mixed in the fabric of which it was made; for then the cloth would fade, and draw out of shape if sprinkled with rain. And so we have not a single suit of clothes in this store which is not made of a fabric that is every thread wool; then all seams are carefully sewed and buttons strongly sewed on—clothes that mothers feel safe in putting on the boys.

These hints of special-priced lots—

At $3.85—Two hundred more of those excellent suits are ready today. The last lot went long before the demand was supplied. Suit includes double-breasted jacket and two pairs of knee trousers.

If only one pair of trousers is wanted, the price is $3.25 a suit; but the extra pair almost doubles the wear of the suit. 7 to 16 yrs.

Boys' Top Coats—

Good serviceable Top Coats of heavy covert cloth, with collar of same; coats cut full and of medium length—

Sizes for 4 to 8 years at $4.50.
Sizes for 9 to 16 years at $5.

Light-weight Covert Top Coats—

Sizes for 3 to 10 years at $3.
Sizes for 11 to 15 years at $3.50.

GOLF CAPES

The most sorts of stylish ones are here. Some special lots.

Never had so many—never had so many coming for them. Fashion took a kindly turn when she ordained the wear of these pretty overgarments, for we can contrive to have almost every one different.

Scotch Shawls, that have been in demand for steamer wear, and are now turned into capes—made doubly pretty by the change. Domestic fabrics, too.

Prices run from $7 to $30.

A word of one or two—

Golf Capes at $5.50—flare at skirt; solid color outside, but the bright plaid shows around the edge and in the high roll collar.

One of the special values—

Golf Capes at $10—rich new plaids; pointed yoke formed by broadcloth bands; edged with broadcloth.

Golf Capes at $7—Outside a dark blue mixture; inside, light blue, or orange or red. Much like a military cape—but dressier. They'd be fairly priced at $10.
