WILSON RAISED UP BY PROVIDENCE

The greatest men this country has produced have been the merciless subjects of attack by men who thought THEY were great. Washington was assailed right and left. Lincoln was beset on all sides by those who were jealous of his influence with the people. And now Woodrow Wilson has a horde of little fellows impugning his motives and endeavoring to give aid to the Germans by attacking the League of Nations. Of course it is a human document and of course it is not perfect, but it can, and will, be made as near perfect in the future as human skill can make it.

The other day Rev. Carlton Harris, Editor of the Southern Methodist, published in Baltimore, said:

"Woodrow Wilson, raised up by Providence to shape the destiny of men and nations in this world-crisis—a man who for fearlessness in thought and action, almost supernatural wisdom and force, will stand without a peer in the eyes of future generations in all of the annals of human history."

We agree with C. L. Vincent in his Messenger when he says:

"After the Senators have vented their spleen and are forever forgotten, the greatness of Woodrow Wilson will live and men will do honor to his memory. In a short while after the League of Nations has been made a living reality and the possibility of war is no more, then Mr. Wilson will come into his own, and all men who have the love of humanity in their hearts will say "well done thou good and faithful servant."

CONGRESS WASTES TIME

The Sixty-sixth Congress promises to be a record-marker in time wasting It has been in session 120 days without putting through a single constructive measure, with the exception of the resolution to submit the woman suffrage amendment to the Constitution. The House has spent months talking on prohibition, petty investigations and a soldiers' land bill. The Senate has frittered away the entire session denouncing the league of nations.

During the last days of the Sixty-fifth Congress six appropriation bills were killed by the Republican filibuster.

The President demanded railroad and other reconstruction laws, but the Republican halted, and were preparing to take a recess when the call for action to reduce the high cost of living came. On August 8, the President urged additional laws for dealing with speculators and profiteers. Nearly six weeks have passed and the proposed legislation has not been sent to the President.

No Congress within the memory of the oldest members has such a record of nonaccomplishment.

DIFFICULT TO GET DATA

The task of collecting the war records of the boys of Kent county is somewhat slow, due to the fact that a number of them have left the county. In many cases the parents or relatives have been furnished with the regulation blank.

In most localities the women and men have rendered valuable assistance in getting the desired information.

The workers whose names were published last week are going about their work in the right way, making personal calls at the homes of the boys who entered the service during the recent war. While the committee is anxious to get the returns in as soon as possible, it is more anxious to have everyone looked after, even if it takes more time. There is no limit set for the work to be completed, and the workers are expected to keep on until everyone is seen or his record obtained from relatives. There have been 20 blanks sent to each of the 23 chairmen and chairwomen and when these are exhausted more blanks may be obtained at News office. We have on file the names of 636 boys. We are anxious to get the record of each one.

VALUE OF SAVINGS BECOMES APPARENT

One of Great Lessons of War Is That of National and Individual Thrift, Now Rapidly Growing

Now that the new German government has accepted the inevitable, and has officially signed the peace terms dictated by the allies and the countries associated with them, the greatest and most disastrous war that ever scourged the world is ended.

For nearly five years the world has been topsy-turvy. The things that were needed yesterday are no longer required, and the activities of the great war establishments and munition plants are being diverted to the manufacture of implements of peace.

There must now be a readjustment. Governments that have thought in billions and spent money with a lavish hand, must retrench and think in millions and even smaller amounts, and must gain a new perspective.

Viewed in the retrospect the part played by America in the great world war is one of the most glorious chapters in history. And in the making of this brilliant history the plain American citizen played a stellar role. The mountains of munitions, the equipment for the millions of soldiers, the great ships that carried the men across the ocean, could not have been provided had not the common people of America provided the money.

Much of this money was obtained through the sale of Liberty Bonds and War Savings and Thrift Stamps. This great volume of money has not been wasted. First it brought permanent peace to the world, and now that real peace is here, every cent that was so invested will come back to those who aided their government, and it will come back with interest.

This war that is now happily ended has taught the people the value of saving. They went into the saving game as much through patriotism as anything else. But now that they are reaping the returns, and see that what they did with a patriotic motive is a real foundation for future fortune, they have gained a new confidence in their country, and they will continue to buy the securities the Treasury Department offers, and will make the country many-fold more prosperous than it would have been had not the war instilled the lesson that will prove invaluable in future years.

PAYING OFF THAT MORTGAGE

Theodore Roosevelt said: "Thrift is merely the use of hard common sense in the spending of money." Paying off the mortgage on the installment plan by buying War Savings Stamps is one of the uses of this hard common sense.

Not only does this plan offer a practical way of saving small amounts of money, but small amounts may be earning interest as soon as they are set aside toward the collecting of the larger sum. This interest in turn materially helps to reduce the 6 per cent interest rate commonly charged on mortgages.

When the mortgage comes due it may either be paid off in whole, or in part and renewed, the method of saving through War Savings Stamps being employed until the principal is liquidated.

"May the vast future not have to lament that you neglected it." Buy Thrift Stamps and War Savings Stamps.

Is the glue on the back of War Savings Stamps flavored with peppermint or wintergreen? Buy one and find out.
