A GREAT ARMY WANTED.

The tendency of the Republican party to concentrate its power in a strong government backed by a vast army becomes appareut. A Washington letter says: "Whatever else is left undone, hurry with the army bill." That is the sum and substance of what Mr. McKinley says to every prominent Republican Senator and Representative, who goes to the White House. The reason he wishes the legislation for the increase of the army hurried is, that he has received a hint that the decision of the United States Supreme Court will be against the constitutionality of the Porto Rico act, which would mean that the United States would have to relinquish ownership of the Philippines, and would consequently have no use for a large standing army. He wishes to get the big army provided for before the court hands down its decision, and it will not be surprising if the Attorney General so manipulates the case as to prevent its conclusion until after the end of this Congress, as Mr. McKinley might prefer not having Congress in session should the decision be adverse. This story sounds incredulous, but it is being seriously talked about in political circles, and there have been other cases in which administrations have been given advance hints of important decisions of the Supreme Court. Any member of the court can usually make a pretty nearly correct guess of how his colleagues will stand upon important decisions from their talk in a general way to each other. Whether the whole story is correct or not, it is absolutely certain that Mr. McKinley is plainly showing his anxiety of the speedy passage by Congress of the army bill.

The Isthmian Canal Commission has handed Mr. McKinley its preliminary report. As expected, it favors the Nicaragua route for the canal. The Panama Company's lobyists are moving heaven and earth to prevent legislation by Congress, in favor of the Nicaragua canal.

According to Representative Hull, chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, which is now trying to put together an army bill that will be supported by all the Republicans, many of whom have publicly expressed widely differing opinions of what the bill should provide for, especially as to the number of men, the volunteers in the Philippines will not be brought home until regulars, enlisted under the bill not even yet written, can be sent to take their places. At least, that is a fair construction to place upon Mr. Hull's own words—"The army now in the Philippines will have to be brought home in the summer, that is, those of the men who do not care to re-enlist. The transports which go out for them should depart laden with the troops who are to replace them."

SUGGESTS A NEW BALLOT LAW.

A Princess Anne correspondent of the Baltimore Sun says: Many of the best informed people of Somerset, in common with people in other sections of the State, believe that the best way to prevent the threatened influx of illiterate negroes into Maryland from the Southern States is to adopt a ballot law that does not put a premium on ignorance and vice. Our present ballot law, it is conceded, does not correct the election bribery evil, but, on the contrary, it can be demonstrated that it has systematically increased that evil, while it enables the most ignorant and stupid to vote by a sign or symbol. A proper corrupt practices act would very much discourage the candidate with a barrel, and an amendment to the Constitution, making the penalty for vote-buying applicable to the briber only, would make it dangerous for the political tempters to attempt to debauch the voter. Both these remedies for the evil of vote-buying should be adopted; but without some such a ballot law as has been adopted in the State of Massachusetts vote-selling will prevail among the illiterate and vicious voters in the future as in the past. Do away with emblems upon official ballots; omit the provision for aid to the illiterate voter in marking his ticket, thereby omitting the most valuable aid to the vote-buyer in dealing with the illiterates; provide for a uniform stamp for marking, and most, if not quite all, of the systematic debauchery of the suffrage which is carried on under the present ballot law will be eradicated. Why should the ballot law that is good for the Republican State of Massachusetts not be equally good for Maryland? That is the question one is hearing on every side in these days in this section of the Shore.

Commander Howard of the Maryland Fishery Force says: "I am determined, as far as it lies in my power as Commander of the Oyster Navy, to enforce this cull law, as it practically means the salvation of the oyster beds of the State. The law, which was passed at the last session of the Legislature, is working smoothly, although at first there were many persons who objected to it. I have given strict orders for all deputy commanders, as well as oyster inspectors, to rigidly enforce the law. I propose to treat all alike and allow no guilty person to escape, and feel assured that if the oyster inspectors do their full duty in a short time we will be able to prevent any violation."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

In many communities in Maryland the observer finds many lately-arrived Southern negroes, and there seems to be little doubt of the concerted movement north. from Virginia and the Carolinas, of which Marylanders have been warned. Few order-loving citizens welcome the coming in such numbers of the Southern negroes, save, perhaps, the most thoughtless and careless politicians, with the colored man's vote in view. The dangers involved, so many times in recent years emphasized by shocking tragedies in the South, the probability of great increase in court expenses, always incident to the presence of a turbulent population, are indeed subjects for real concern. It will not do to look upon the situation with supineness. It is a matter worthy of the earnest attention of our most patriotic citizens who love the name and fame of the good old State of Maryland.

E. B. R., Marydel, asks the Baltimore American this question: "Is there any Federal game law, and if so, when was it passed?" The paper replies: "Yes. The Federal game law passed last May cuts off the transit of illicit game from state to state and has for the first time made it possible to enforce the game laws of all states. The Department of Agriculture has issued a circular which gives information concerning game, its seasons, shipment and sale, reviewing the entire subject, giving in detail the laws of each state, and explains the bearing of Federal legislation."

The reader may be surprised to hear it, but it is a fact all the same, that the wreck of the second-class battleship, the Maine, whose unexplained destruction precipitated the war with Spain, is still lying where it sunk in the harbor of Havana. But it won't be there much longer. When he was in Washington a few days ago. Governor General Wood asked and obtained the authority of the Navy Department to have the wreck removed.

One good thing about an English election is that the thing is quickly done. In America our contests drag on for the better part of a year, and then it is usually another year before a new Congress gets down to work. In Great Britian, as illustrated by recent events, there is only about five weeks from the death of the old Parliament to the beginning of the new one. In that time things are turned up and around mightily.

Preparations are being made to serve Eastern Shore soft and deviled crabs, oysters direct from the beds, old time colonial pone bread, and other delicacies peculiar to the Eastern Shore, in a "Maryland Kitchen" at the Pan-American Exposition, at Buffalo, next year. This feature, to be a success, must be presided over by a Kent county housewife and a Kent county cook.—Chestertown Transcript.

An old-fashioned ox roast drew hundreds of folks to Georgetown Thanksgiving Day from all points of Sussex county, politicians assembling without regard to party. The ox was furnished by Peter J. Hart, who was chosen Sheriff on the Democratic ticket at the recent election. It was roasted all night and distributed free to all comers.

The building boom is still on at Rehoboth, and similar to last winter, mechanics are all employed and several cottages going up. Although it is not so extensive as last year yet, the indications are that the building boom this coming spring will be a repitition of Rehoboth's growth last year.

The business of manufacturing ice is rapidly growing in Delaware. For a time the Dover plant was the only large ice concern on the peninsula. Now new ones have begun operation at many points and a large concern for supplying the cold storage fruit cars at Clayton is being planned.

The Philadelphia Record has no faith in the Republican promise to reduce the war tax resting so heavily on many brands of business. The check-stamp and other similar taxes will become an intolerable burden long before Mr. McKinley's second term is over.

A new national bank, to be known as the Farmers' Bank, will open up for business in the town of St. Michael's the first of the coming month. The banking building is now being fitted up. Robert S. Dobson will be cashier and Graham C. Hause bookkeeper.

A Somerset man who went to the polls to vote at the recent election was told the registration books showed he had been dead for a year, hence he could not vote.

The price of corn reached fifty cents in the Chicago market on Monday last. This was the highest figure since 1894, when for a time the price went close to the 60-cent mark.

Senator Platt, of New York, says Senator Quay, of Pennsylvania will undoubtedly be re-elected.

A big English tramp steamer went ashore at Ocean City a few days ago.

CEREBRO-SPINAL MENINGITIS.

It would be well for farmers and others who own horses in our county to be on their guard against the disease that is prevalent. Cases have appeared at Queen Anne, Ridgely, Denton, Williston, and other places, and in most instances have proven fatal. One gentleman, describing the case of his own horse, says: "The day previous to its death it was droopy and languid, but not enough so to arouse suspicion of danger unless one were on the look-out for such a thing. The following morning it showed signs of distress, and was given some medicine and tied in the stall. Later the same morning a great noise was heard in the stable, and on going over I saw that the animal had broken loose and was at short intervals attacked by spasms, which caused it to dash itself furiously against the walls. Not knowing what else to do, as it seemed dangerous to approach the stricken beast, I opened the door and it tumbled out. Gaining its feet it stood for about a minute, when another spasm took it, and it deliberately wheeled about and dashed itself headforemost against the stable wall. The crash was almost all the wall could stand; the horse's head was forced back against its chest, it reeled and fell, crashing through a fence, the ruin of which held it in such a way that the feet could not reach the ground, and in that position the animal died in about an hour; perhaps less." The following, which is an extract from the "Special Report on Diseases of the Horse," published by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, may be of interest at this time:

CEREBRO-SPINAL MENINGITIS.

This may occur sporadically as an encephalitis, with implications of the spinal cord and its meninges. Usually, however, it appears as an enzooty in a stable, city, or farming district, not infrequently extending long distances-in certain well-defined lines, along rivers, valleys, or along ridges and mountains. For this reason the enzootic cerebro-spinal meningitis has been attributed by some veterinarians to atmospheric influences. The first written history we have of this disease was published about thirty years ago by Dr. Isaiah Mitchener, of Carnersville, Pa., in a pamphlet entitled "Paralysis of the Vagum." Several years later Prof. A. Large, of Brooklyn, N. Y., gave it the name of "cerebro-spinal meningitis," on account of its similarity to that disease in the human family. Dr. J. C. Mitchener, of Colmar, Pa., in 1882 suggested the name of "Tungosus Toxicum Paralyticus," in view of the exciting cause being found in foods undergoing fermentation. In England a similar disease has been called "grass staggers," due to eating rye grass when it is ripening or when it is cut and eaten while it is heating and undergoing fermentation. In Eastern Pennsylvania it was formerly known by the name of "putrid sore throat" and "choking distemper." A disease similar in many respects, which is very prevalent in Virginia, especially along the eastern border, is commonly known by the name of "blind staggers," and in many of the Southern States this has been attributed to the consumption of worm-eaten corn. Prof. Large attributed the cause of the disease to a lack of sanitary conditions, poisonous gases, or emanations depending upon defective sewerage in the cities, defective drainage on lands in the country, and deficient stable ventilation.

In the most rapidly fatal attacks, the animal may first indicate it by weak, staggering gait, partial or total inability to swallow, impairment of eyesight; twitching of the muscles and slight cramps may be observed. This is soon followed by a paralysis of the whole body, inability to stand, delirium in which the animal sometimes goes through a series of automatic movements, as if trotting or running; the delirium may become very violent and the animal in his unconsciousness bruise his head in his struggles very seriously, but usually a deep coma renders him quiet until he expires. Death in these cases usually takes place in from four to twenty four hours from the time the first symptoms become manifest.

In the worst class of cases treatment is very seldom successful, and it is dangerous to attempt the administration of medicine by the mouth, on account of the inability of the animal to swallow. Cold shower baths may possibly induce revulsive action in connection with stimulants per rectum, four to six ounces of whiskey in two pints of milk. The inhalation of ammonia vapor from a sponge saturated with dilute aqua ammonia may arouse consciousness. In the second class of cases the treatment recommended by Prof. Large consists in giving a cathartic composed of one ounce of aloes, and the administration of one to two drams of the solid extract of belladonna, alternated every three hours with thirty drops of tincture of aconite root, and the application of blisters to the neck, spine and throat. When the animal is unable to swallow, one-quarter grain doses of sulphate of atrophia may be injected under the skin every four, six or eight hours, as the case may demand. The atrophia is a heart stimulant, increases capillary circulation, and quiets pain and excitability. When the prominent symptoms abate give such food as they can eat, keep fresh, cool water before them, support them in slings if necessary. Clean stabling and plenty of fresh air are of the utmost importance.

Whenever this disease appears in a stable all the animals should be removed af soon as possible. They should be provided with clean, well-ventilated and well-drained stables, and each animal should receive one dram of the extract or half an ounce of the tincture of belladonna twice a day for several days. The abandoned stable should be thoroughly cleansed from all waste matters, receive a coat of whitewash containing four ounces of carbolic acid to the gallon, and should have time to dry thoroughly before the horses are replaced. A complete change of food is of the very greatest importance, on account of the belief that the cause resides in diseased grain, hay and grass.

Among the tens of thousands who have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for colds and la grippe during the past few years, to our knowledge, not a single case has resulted in pneumonia. Thos. Whitfield & Co., 240 Wabash avenne, Chicago, one of the most prominent retail druggists in that city, in speaking of this, says: "We recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for la grippe in many cases, as it not only give prompt and complete recovery, but also counteracts any tendency of la grippe to result in pneumonia." For sale by R. J. Colston, Denton; Hugh Duffey, Hillsboro; T. W. Smith, Ridgely.

Does It Pay to Buy Cheap?

A cheap remedy for coughs and colds is all right, but you want something that will relieve and cure the more severe and dangerous results of throat and lung troubles. What shall you do? Go to a warmer and more regular climate? Yes, if possible; if not possible for you, then in either case take the ONLY remedy that has been introduced in all civilized counties with success in severe throat and lung troubles, "Boschee's German Syrup." It not only heals and stimulates the tissues to destroy the germ disease, but allays inflammation, causes easy expectoration, gives a good night's rest, and cures the patient. Try ONE bottle. Recommended many years by all druggists in the world. Sample bottles at R. J. Colston's, Denton, Md., Rickards & Co., Marydel.

The Best Plaster

A piece of flannel dampened with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound to the affected parts is superior to any plaster. When troubled with lame back or pains in the side or chest, give it a trial and you are certain to be more than pleased with the prompt relief which it affords. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism. One application gives relief. For sale by R. J. Colston, Denton; Hugh Duffey, Hillsboro; T. W. Smith, Ridgely.

To the Deaf.

A rich lady, cured of her deafness and noises in the head by Dr. Nicholson's Artificial Ear Drums, gave $10,000 to his Institute, so that deaf people unable to procure the Ear Drums may have them free. Address No. 4874 The Nicholson Institute, 780 Eighth Avenue, New York.

PUBLIC SALE
REAL ESTATE consisting of 50 TOWN LOTS and a TRACT OF FARM LAND and
LIVE STOCK.

The undersigned will sell at public sale in Ridgely, on Tuesday, December 18th, 1900

beginning at 1 o'clock p. m., Fifty Town Lots situated on Central, Maple and Second Avenues East, in the town of Ridgely, also 160 acres of Farm Land, all lying within the town limits, and within (from the furthest part of the farm) five minutes drive to the railroad station, or either of the several packing houses. The land nicely admits of division into three small farms, consisting of one 75-acre tract, one 26-acre tract, and one 53-acre tract. The two largest tracts, admitting advantageously of division will be offered in two equal parts respectively.

Why Should You own a Home in Ridgely?

First.—Because it is the highest, the dryest, the healthiest spot on the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

Second.—Because it is the most progressive and prosperous town in Caroline county, having within 15 years increased in population from 120 to 832 on the 1st of June of this year, since which time, 18 new dwellings have been erected making the population at this time over 900.

Third.—Because land values in Ridgely and vicinity have increased and will continue to increase regardless of general depression elsewhere. Town lots, many of which have been sold within the past ten years have more than quadrupled in value.

In addition to the real estate there will be sold on the same date,

3 MULES and 3 HORSES.

The Mules are 7 years old, and unexceiled as farm or wagon workers. Two of the Horses are 5 years old, and the other 4 years old.

Terms of Sale.

The terms will be made known on the day of sale.
